"What the New Tariff Will Do for All of Us,"

As Seen by Man Who Engineered It Through Senate

Senator Simmons Says There Will Not Be an Immediate Radical Reduction of Cost of Living, but It Will Come Slowly Until "Perfect Balance" Is Restored.

Because He, as Chairman of Finance Committee in Upper Body of Congress, Was Measure's Sponsor, He Is Third Senator in History to Have Name on Revenue Law.

By CHARLES S. ALBERT.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.

THE name of Furnifold McLendell Simmons has been added to the limited list of Senators immortalized by having their identity lastingly established as co-authors of famous tariff acts. The roster is suprisingly brief. It comprises three names. These are: Arthur Pue Gorman, Nelson W. Aldrich and Simmons. Of these Aldrich and Simmons served as chairman of the Finance Committee. Gorman was not a member of that body.

The matter of placing the names of tariff wizards on the tablets of enduring fame always has rested entirely with journalists and reporters. According to their likings, whims or grouches these recorders of events have used the hyphen or omitted it. The result has been to perpetuate a name or cause its apparent disappearance from all legislation at issue.

William McKinley will forever be known as the sole framer of the tariff act passed Oct. 1, 1890. Justin S. Morrill was chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. The hyphen was not utilized and his prominent connection with the tariff law mentioned can be ascertained only from memory or historical research.

The same was true of the Dingley act, passed July 24, 1897. A single name was made enduring. Morrill at that period was chairman of the Finance Committee. He lost his second chance to achieve everlasting renown. Senators Allison and Aldrich were active as lieutenants, but their personality did not attach to the measure.

The Wilson-Gorman act of Aug. 27, 1894, embalmed the identity of the Democratic floor leader in the Senate. The chairman of the Finance Committee was Daniel W. Voorhees. He received no credit for his management and co-operation.

The Walker tariff act, which many Democrats pronounce the best measure ever framed by their party for the collection of customs revenues, derived its name from the then Secretary of the Treasury. Its original author in the House and the Senator who subsequently guided its course can be learned only by rummaging through moldy records.

The Use of the Hyphen.

UNDER constitutional requirements all revenue legislation must originate in the House of Representatives. The chairman of the Ways and Means Committee first supplies a name for the infant tariff measure. When revised by the Finance Committee of the Senate, the chairman's name is hooked on by the hyphen if the controlling powers are not forgetful or unfriendly.

In the present instance all elements worked harmoniously. The Underwood tariff bill was passed by the House. The Senate considered and passed the Underwood-Simmons measure. It thus transpired that a third Senator was added to the list of names immortalized.

As a Senator of the United States from North Carolina, now brought into prominence unusual by the liberal use of a hyphen, Simmons may be described as a man who has realized his ambition because of obstinate, persistent, unrelaxing work. The net result was not achieved through exceptional brilliancy, insinuating diplomacy or deviation from fixedness of purpose.

As a framer of tariffs Simmons closely resembles Sereno E. Payne, who acquired his great proficiency in economic problems by endless study and untiring plodding. With both it was a matter of mastering petty details and minor nonessentials, finally shaping and whipping them into a composite and useful entirety.

If all his previous career, during which he freed his native State from negro domination and intemperance, were obliterated, the part played by Simmons in perfecting the measure which bears his name as co-author will be a sufficient monument to his ability, faithfulness and tenacity. With the Democratic party returning to governmental control after an interim of 16 weary years, devoted to feasting on handouts of husks, questions of policy became paramount. First, in importance was an honest effort to lessen the cost of living, and, recond, to eliminate special privileges and control illegal monopolies that levied tribute upon the American people. These and many other steps in the direction of advancement were taken in the passage of the tariff act now ready for enforcement.

Wise and Just Measure.

IN the opinion of Senator Simmons, this law will accomplish much good, redeem party pledges and platform promises, lighten burdens on the poor, reflect credit upon the Democratic party and generally benefit the country.

When requested to indicate in plain language how the revenues of the Government would be affected when customs duties have been materially lowered, Senator Simmons in substance said:

"The enactment of the pending bill will not result in a deficit in revenue. On the contrary, there is every reason to believe there will be a comfortable surplus."

SENATOR SIMMONS of NORTH CAROLINA

© by HARRIS & EWING, WASHINGTON D.C.

I CONFIDENTLY believe that, under this bill, we will enter upon an era of greater prosperity. Especially is it believed that the adoption of this bill will emancipate the American manufacturer from many of the conditions which now confront our foreign export trade, and that he will seek and obtain as never before a fairer share of the world's business. There will be no panic nor serious disturbance to business. For several months, the business world has understood thoroughly the revision proposed and no serious disturbance has followed. There has been some little stagnation as was natural, pending changes.—Senator Simmons.

"How will the American people profit by the passage of the new tariff act?"

"It is impossible, of course, to speak even approximately as to how much this bill will relieve the American people through the lowering of duties. At present about 54 per cent of the imports come in free, but 80 per cent of those free imports are the raw material of the manufacturers, and as the old law maintained high or protective duties on the finished products of these raw materials, the people did not get the benefit of the cheaper cost of production.

"THE new law reduces duties on finished products to a competitive basis and as a result the manufacturer will find it difficult, through combination or otherwise, to maintain domestic prices above the margin of a reasonable profit. It is believed that this bill, while not reducing these prices below the margin of a fair profit, will prevent the exploitation of the people by bringing about healthy outside competition.

"It is desirable that every legitimate industry should yield a reasonable profit. The consumer should be willing to pay a fair price and the producer should be satisfied with a fair profit."

The Cost of Living.

"BUT will the act really lower the cost of living?"

"While I do not doubt that the enactment of this bill into law will result in lessening the cost of living and relieving the people generally of many of the burdens complained of, it is not expected that the immediate effects of this bill in relieving the people and in lowering the cost of living will be as great as some have anticipated. The effect will be gradual. In the end there will be a healthier level of prices. This bill seeks to balance the advantages and disadvantages and to bring about a more uniform level of prices. Along with the lowering of prices there will be corresponding lowering of the cost of production."

"Do you think the predictions of the calamity howlers will be verified?"

"There will be no disastrous results to industry through the passage of this bill. On the other hand, it is confidently believed that the industries of the country will be put upon a healthier basis, while the consumer will be protected against excessive and extortionate prices.

"There will be no panic or serious disturbance to business. For several months the business world has understood thoroughly the extent of the revision proposed and no serious disturbance has followed. There has been some little stagnation, as was natural, pending changes, but there has been no serious disturbance."

"Do you anticipate an abatement of the prosperity that has prevailed during recent years?"

"I confidently believe we will ented upon an era of greater prosperity. Especially do I believe that the adoption of this bill will emancipate the American manufacturer from many of the conditions which now restrict our foreign export trade, and that he will seek and obtain as never before a fairer share of the world's business."

"Does the tariff act as framed and passed fully redeem the platform pledges given at Baltimore?"

"This bill is a compliance with the pledge of the Democratic party made at Baltimore. The revision is not drastic. It seeks to bring the tariff to a revenue basis, taking into consideration always that in a transition from a highly protective to a revenue tariff actual industrial conditions must be safeguarded. The bill leaves an average rate of duty of over 26 per cent. This is so adjusted as to prevent and serious disturbance to the industries of this country. You cannot give the people relief from the burdens of the present law without reducing duties. A reduction which does not provide for larger imports is not a reduction which can possibly help the consumer. Where a thing is not produced in this country the duties we have proposed are purely revenue duties. Where it is produced in this country we have tried to make the rate reasonably competitive. By making it competitive we invite importations and get revenue."

Effect on Democratic Party.

"WILL the future of the Democratic party be disastrously affected by the passage of this act?"

"The Democrats will suffer no loss of prestige by the passage of this bill in any part of the country. In its practical workings, it will soon justify itself. It is a fair and honest response to the demand of the people. It will give them the relief they have sought and been promised, and as a result of keeping its promise with reference to the tariff, as it will do with reference to other great questions, to the solution of which it is now intelligently addressing itself, the Democratic party may expect a long lease of power."

The process of steering a tariff bill through the Senate is one that necessitates patience, forebearance, skill, watchfulness and nerve. Simmons had behind him a majority of but one vote, and the possessor thereof was alleged to be far beyond the reservation corral, snorting defiance and proclaiming independence. By turns the regular and progressive Republicans pestered and disturbed. Occasionally they would combine and pounce upon their adversaries like a pawnbroker in sight of a genuine diamond.

The spirit of insurgency has become rampant since the days of Aldrich and Allison and Hale. Every Democratic Senator aspires to be a leader. If no followers can be found, each will lead himself. Even the majority members of the Finance Committee were apprehensive that Simmons would pick up a few crumbs of credit for framing the new tariff bill. Harmony must be maintained, and Senator Simmons balanced and juggled and mollified and displayed finesse until the ragged edges of the situation gave him a chronic headache. The man who seeks immorality would do well to try bridge jumping, steeple climbing, submarine diving, smoking in a powder factory or some other light undertaking before the essays to formulate and manage a tariff bill. At least he would save gray hairs and splintered nerves by consulting Simmons.

Establishing a New Record.

AND yet Simmons established a new record. Handicapped and harassed, he steered the tariff measure through the Senate in 44 legislative days, one of them being lost through the death of Senator Johnston.

Beginning life as a farmer's son, Simmons obtained the usual preliminary education and was graduated from Trinity College. He took up the practice of law and became successful. He threw all his energy and industry into this work. He opened offices in three North Carolina cities and his enemies declared he had formed law trust. In 1886 he led a forlorn hope in a republican district, and was elected to the House of Representatives. He was then 32. He was defeated for re-election and retired from politics until called upon to redeem the State from negro domination. As a tribute to his efforts in accomplishing this result he was sent to the Senate 12 years ago. He has just entered upon his third term.

Senator Simmons is 59 years old. Short of stature, being a scant five feet and a half, he weighs 165 pounds, and is equal to a giant in fighting qualities. His abundant hair is almost black and reaches down over the left side of the forehead. He has brown eyes, his complexion is swarthy, a close-cropped mustache indicates pugnaciousness, while a kindly smile nullifies this impression. His voice leans toward harshness, and when delivering a speech becomes barkish and snappy. He is at all times affable and approachable. His chief characteristic is that of adhering to his friends under all circumstances

"Don't Be Afraid to Issue Bonds for the Things You Need," Says Boston's Mayor to St. Louis

"You've Got to Spend Money to Outstrip Rivals"

"Boston Is Not the Only City You Have to Fear, as Detroit and Cleveland Are Coming Forward Fast."

"We're Bonded $77,000,000 to Your $15,000,000, but Every Dollar of Our Debt Is Well Invested."

By CARLOS F. HURD.

THE Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, mellifluously named "Honey Fitz," Mayor of Boston, had the ear of St. Louis last week. And he gave St. Louis an earful.

His advice to this city, rousingly delivered at a time of new charter making and of critical situations under the old charter, was, in the main:

Spend money.

Concentrate power and responsibility.

Eliminate party politics in city government.

The Beantown burgomaster, on his way to Denver, stopped off a day to take lunch with the City Club. Now the terms "distinguished visitor" and "City Club luncheon speaker" have become synonymous. There have been two varieties of these visitor-speakers—the stimulant and the narcotic.

Narcotics go very well after a hearty luncheon, as the City Club's well patronized cigar counter shows. And some of the speeches to which the club has listened in the last few months have had the soothing qualities of a fragrant perfecto. Also, the lunchers have listened as long as their cigars lasted, and then have tiptoed to the hat room.

But when Mayor Fitzgerald arose to give the semi-cabaret discourse Wednesday, the presence of a stimulant was as evident as if every man in the room had just had a half-dozen cocktails. Before he had been going five minutes, his hearers were realizing the difference between dynamic and static energy. As he went on, the room filled more closely, instead of emptying; and when he finished his 45-minute speech, those who could not get near enough to shake his hand stood and talked with each other about it.

We Could Use Him Here.

"I WISH," said one business man, alluding to Fitzgerald's mention of his critics at home, "that they would throw him out of Boston. Then we might be able to get him here."

The contrast between the short and peppery "Fitz" and our own big and good-natured Mayor Kiel, who had introduced him, was too striking to escape comment. I heard one man, the head of a large corporation, remark that he was glad to see Kiel acting as host for Fitzgerald, and that he hoped the Mayor of St. Louis would sit at his guest's feet, assiduously talking shop, as long as they were together.

This was complimentary to Kiel, on the whole, for it credited him with the ability to learn a good deal in one lesson, given the right sort of teacher. The advantage over the present method, in which a Mayor learns by experience and experiment, is that the instruction would not be at the expense of the city of St. Louis.

The things Fitzgerald said, in his speech and in interviews, sounded startling enough. Yet they were mostly the things that Frank Putnam, also of Boston, who came here via Houston, Tex., and Hamburg, Germany, has been saying to St. Louisans, through the Post-Dispatch, for three months.

But a visiting Mayor, who is running a city—an American city of nearly the same size as our own—on these new ideas, and who can tell about it in such corking fashion as does Fitzgerald, necessarily has the advantage in getting the aforementioned public ear.

Like Putnam's articles, Fitzgerald's talks were filled with references to the things German cities have done, for "Fitz," too, has studied German municipal methods in the Fatherland.

He held up Frankfort-on-the-Main, paying millions for a gateway to the sea, as an example for St. Louis.

"How can you do it?" he asked the Frankforters, and their reply was "How can we fail to do it, and let Dresden and Mains take our commerce?"

Dusseldorf, making itself the model city by vast internal improvements, was a second example, and then from Germany the scene was switched to America, and St. Louis was reminded that it takes money to get money and to bring municipal growth.

Warns Us to Watch Cleveland.

"BOSTON isn't the only city you have to worry about," he said, alluding to census competition. "Cleveland is a whole lot nearer, and Cleveland is beautifying itself and providing for its future needs as few cities have ever done. These things make business for a city. Capital, seeking location for big industries, chooses the place which, business advantages being equal, has the best homes for its employes, the best parks, the best chance for comfort and enjoyment for families of small means.

"Detroit attended to beautifying herself, and today the factories in other cities can't get the skilled mechanics they need, simply because they prefer to live in Detroit and work in the big automobile factories there.

"Detroit got the automobile business away from Boston and St. Louis, but Boston, in the last few years, has decided not to let New York have all the shipping. So Boston has spent $9,000,000 to improve its water front, and the result is that the biggest transatlantic lines have put some of their best ships in the Boston trade, and that tourists from inland points, going to Europe, are either going or returning through Boston, instead of going through New York both ways. Just as out West they are people to 'See America first,' so we now tell people to 'See Europe via Boston.' And we have plenty to show them.

"You have only about $15,000,000 bonded debt here, I understand, when you could have twice as much under the State Constitution. Why should you be afraid to issue bonds for things the city needs? Look at the railroads, bonded for 85 per cent of their value, while St. Louis has bonds for less than 3 per cent of its assessed valuation.

"Why, the railroads are issuing bonds not only to pay for permanent improvements, but to buy locomotives and cars. Suppose Mayor Kiel or I would propose to issue bonds for current expenses. People would say we ought to be lynched. Yet that is not more than the railroads are doing.

Boston Bonded for $77,000,000.

"BOSTON'S bonded indebtedness is $77,000,000, but $23,000,000 of it is for subways, and they are paying for themselves so rapidly that I count that off and say our actual bonded debt is $54,000,000. The Tremont street subway will be paid for in a few

These things make business for a city. Capital, seeking locations for big industries, chooses the place, which, business advantages being equal, has the best homes, the best parks and the best means of enjoyment for families of small means.

"I HAVE had the unusual experience of being Mayor under the old system and the new. And I know the difference between getting things done with a big partisan Council and with our present board of nine men."

How Mayor Fitzgerald Scored His Own City Only a Few Months Ago

ST. LOUISANS who thought that Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston was too severe in his criticism of this city, while a guest here last Wednesday, may read with interest what he had to say about the shortcomings of his own city. In an interview given in his office in Boston last winter to Henry N. Hall, a special correspondent of the Sunday Post-Dispatch, and printed in this paper Feb. 2, Fitzgerald said:

"THE people in the Back Bay section (a wealthy district) of this city are a self-satisfied lot, contented to sit back and clip their coupons, but when it comes to doing something for Boston, the devil a cent can we get out of them.

"There is a splendid opportunity for a line of steamships from Boston to Galveston. It would enable us to distribute our manufactures through the West and Southwest at a lower transportation rate than St. Louis or Chicago. But it would mean competition to the New York-New Orleans ships, and would be treading on the heels of the New York Money Trust. So Boston holds off. Another reason is that, under our Massachusetts laws, the cost of the ships would have to be known, and there would be no opportunity for a rakeoff in the shape of bonus bonds.

"IT is a shame that the rich men of Boston, who spend millions financing projects to develop other communities, will not invest even $1,000,000 for the good of Boston. Fancy the millions and millions spent on enterprises of no benefit to Boston, and here Boston has let the automobile business get away to Detroit.

"Many of the rich people in the Back Bay section are not worthy. They have all the money and yet they are investing none of it in their own city. They have not the brains to back up the reputations made by their fathers and forefathers. Old Boston sits at the tombs of its ancestors and fingers the withered leaves of laurel they won in bygone days. Old Boston is cold and proud, wrapped in the mantle of her Puritanism, not progressive enough. It is deaf to the legitimate aspirations of all the young Irish, Italians, Jews and Frenchmen, who are eager to make their way in business here. The old Back Bay families try to keep them out. They are willing to hire their brains and use them, but they resent any attempt on the part of these men to get into business for themselves."

THAT BELLEFONTAINE PERMIT.

If Mayor Kiel issues a permit to the United Railways for double tracks on the Bellefontaine road to accommodate the residents of Walnut Park, on account of the interruption of traffic on the Union line, he should carefully safeguard it. In the permit he should specify its time limitation.

The permit is justified only by a temporary emergency which makes the slow process of obtaining a franchise unavailable for the purpose. The Mayor should not grant a permanent permit. He should grant it only for the time the emergency shall exist. It will then depend upon the authorities whether or not the permit limitation is enforced. Franchise privilege should be granted only by the Municipal Assembly with the Mayor's approval and the consent of the people.

THE AMERICAN LANGUAGE.

A Chicago newspaper got opinions from 500 distinguished Americans during the past summer on the best way to report baseball games. Oddly enough, most of the ballplayers preferred correct English, while most of the college professors said they liked best the curt, crisp slang of the game.

Really effective slang so-called, clean, keen, providing a short cut through the locutions of academic English, proves its worth by finding its way into the dictionaries—the American dictionaries—soon after its creation. Americans are evolving a language of their own, based on English as English is based on earlier languages. Inevitably language must express not only the activities but the temperament of the people which uses it.

Nothing, therefore, can prevent the gradual creation of an American language, distinct from academic English, since the American people are distinctly different from the English in temperament. The American language increasingly reflects the nervous haste of American life. It mirrors America's quick wit, her fondness for verbal symbols, her vivid imagination. Its function is to pack a paragraph into a phrase. It will not "accomplish the purpose for which it was created;" it will merely (and expeditiously) get by."

One chief reason why American poets are not more widely read is that they think and write in English instead of in American. If they want wider audiences, they'll have to "get next." If George Ade had been able to write his Fables in verse as cleverly as he did in prose, they would have found as many readers.

EXTORTION FROM THE HARVEST.

The "movement of crops" for which the Treasury Department is now depositing $50,000,000 of Government money in bank, ought itself to increase the circulation of money. It ought to be an automatic process of exchange, with credits expanding as debts are paid, and plenty increasing as an abundant new supply of the necessaries of life is moved from producer to consumer by natural demand.

Instead of this, under the system of "locking up money," practiced if not invented by the late Russell Sage, the demand for money to "move crops" was made the occasion for a systematic "squeeze." Speculators in New York and other cities, as the fairest "game," were squeezed first and hardest, until they often paid the most exorbitant usury for "call loans." This squeezing process was not confined to speculative business. It extended to all business, and finally its enormous usurious profits became a toll, levied on agricultural production and on all business which moves in exchange for agricultural production. The harvest season was made the special season of extortion.

If putting $50,000,000 from the treasury in circulation, makes this annual "squeeze" impossible, it is the best use which could be made of it. But there ought to be intelligence enough, available for systematic use, to restore the movement of business to its natural condition under which the harvest time of the year is least liable to a "squeeze" of any kind. It ought to be impossible for such a country as this to be "held up" annually at its season of greatest natural prosperity and forced to pay toll on its annual production to those whose only claim to what they take is that they know how to extort it.

THE NEW "HOME MARKET."

Speaker Clark's opinion that the Underwood bill will "prove to be the best tariff bill ever passed in this country" is based on expectation of improved business under it, and in that respect the first two years of business under the new law will justify the opinion. In six months business at the ports and throughout the country will adjust itself to the greater opportunities for activity the new law gives. Business as a whole will show first increased imports and exports, accompanied by better markets for American products of all kinds.

As a revenue measure, the new act does not discriminate against competitive activity in the "Home Market" itself. In this respect, it is a measure which such Protectionists as Garfield and Blaine might have assented to if not approved on their own principle of encouraging competitive activity in the "Home Market" as a whole and in a constantly increasing number of local manufacturing centers, each serving as a "home market" for farm products and other raw materials.

The reports for seven months of this year under the Payne-Aldrich tariff, show how completely this Republican "Home Market" theory has been sacrificed through a combination of absolute free trade with prohibitive taxation. To support what President Cleveland called the "Commune of Capital," the Payne-Aldrich act gave organized monopoly a free list which now covers more than half the total of all imports. The proportion of free trade for monopoly only in the first seven months of 1913 is 52.92 per cent of the total of $1,018,000,000 merchandise imports. Out of all goods imported free, only 7.70 per cent are "manufactures ready for consumption," and these do not belong to the class of goods in demand by the general buyer.

This free trade for the "Commune of Capital" operated, with prohibitive duties, to decrease the number of factories in the smaller cities and to make impossible the increased number of "local home markets" demanded by Garfield and Blaine. As a method this was the logical method of monopoly, centralizing business.

The return to sanity, which makes competition with centralized monopoly easier, justifies the expectation not only of better general business in "the Home Market" as a whole, but of more factories, beginning as the "infant industries" which, prior to the era of trusts, protectionists insisted they wished to foster. As infant industries have been throttled by protection, combined with free trade for monopolists only, the intent of the Underwood act is to stop this crime against political common sense and common business honesty. It makes success once more possible for local industries, wherever they have a home market to supply. The birth rate for "infant industries" has been steadily decreasing. As long as the new act is in operation it may be expected steadily to increase—not because they are protected from competition, but because they are given a fair opportunity to come into existence as competitors with monopoly.

An army post in each state is proposed by a Major-General to popularize appropriations for militarism among the voters. Why not make thorough work of it by giving every county, or at least every congressional district, a post?

LAZARUS POINTS THE WAY.

President Lazarus of the City Council is correct in declaring St. Louis people want the east approach of the city bridge to "get to grade as soon as possible."

Delegates who have for reasons unknown held the lower house firm for the outrageously extravagant A. & M. scheme will hardly be able any longer to oppose the Council's plan to call a vote on a bond issue of $2,750,000 to build according to the plan already accepted and approved.

Mrs. Emancipation Proclamation Busbey, wife of the Mayor at South Vienna, O., has just passed away, but there may be somewhere a little Miss Downward Revision Smith or Miss Elastic Currency Jones who will be compelled to take up the burden she has escaped.

PERFECTLY USELESS.

It has often been asserted by physicists and others that there is really nothing useless in the world. Doubtless they were right until Herr Hausseger—but you shall judge for yourself after reading the following from the musical column of the Boston Transcript:

> In Hausseger's "Nature Symphony," for instance, there is a passage where all the brass and strings, supported by a full organ, are blazing away beneath a fortissimo chorus of several hundred voices. At the climax point the harp joins in, plucking [illegible] of its lower strings. This harp note is, of course, utterly inaudible, even to the harpist.
> The effort of one puny harp string to add to the harmony of the occasion, when a multitude of brasses and stringed instruments vie with an organ to excel the fortissimo chorus of several hundred voices—well, that would seem to be something—at last—perfectly useless.

It was hardly to be expected that surly old Panama would submit to conquest by puny man without a few writhings and contortions of discontent and protest.

BY-ELECTION TESTS OF SENTIMENT.

Of five special elections to be held in the immediate future for filling vacancies in Congress, two will take place in New York districts, the Thirteenth and Twentieth.

Both these districts, one held formerly by the late Tim Sullivan and the other by Francis Burton Harrison, who resigned to become Governor-General of the Philippines, are so strongly Democratic as to give no hope for their capture by the Republicans. The returns from them will, however, be eagerly watched for any violent fluctuations in the vote that might indicate changes in sentiment from the election of 1912. Particularly interesting will these elections be for the encouragement they may afford to Republicans who are now claiming that in view of the Sulzer scandal in New York and the gradual return of the Progressives, their party has a good prospect of carrying the House in the general election of 1914.

The third special election will take place in the First District of West Virginia, whose member, John W. Davis, has been appointed Solicitor-General. The voting there should be pretty decisive as to Progressive sentiment. The district, which includes Wheeling, was formerly a safe Republican district, but was carried by Mr. Davis, Democrat, by 130, though it gave Mr. Roosevelt 534 over Mr. Taft. The other two special elections will be held to fill vacancies caused in the Third Maryland by the death of George Konig, Democrat, and in the Fourth Massachusetts by the death of W. H. Wilder, Republican. The Maryland district includes part of Baltimore and the Massachusetts district an important manufacturing territory and the tariff may be expected to figure largely in both.

The present House has a Democratic majority of 147, of which New York State supplies 32 members. If the Sulzer scandal caused the loss of every New York district, the Democrats would still retain a comfortable working majority.

T. R., on the eve of departure for South America, assured his Bull Moose followers he is in the new party to stay. But what if the Progressives nominate Beveridge next time?

BRIDGE BRIBERY.

The indictment of Holdenreid for attempting to bribe a member of the House of Delegates to vote for the tax raise to complete the free bridge should be only an entering wedge to disclosures.

What was the ultimate object of the alleged attempted bribery? Who would profit by its success? Who supplied the money—in short, who was the man higher up?

Full answers to these questions should be the aim of the Circuit Attorney and the grand jury. Let us have the whole truth.

The Bible has been put on the free list. This will enable Boston, which evidently needs it, to get enough copies to go round.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

For Non-Intervention.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Why the Wilson-Bryan administration should not hasten further complications and a conflict with Mexico. Mexico does not belong to the United States. Neither is she a servant of European plutocracy. Mexico belong to Mexico. And while the great nations of the world are crying Peace! Peace! and an international peace congress is in session, and Wilson and Bryan among the leaders of the world peace movement, European plutocratic organs and American stand-pat Republican organs are assailing the Wilson-Bryan administration in most vigorous terms in an endeavor to coerce them into imposing the mightiest nation of the world upon a weaker nation to whip her people into submission and subjugation to their (would-be) capitalistic taskmasters of Europe and America.

It always has been the aim and purpose of plutocratic capitalism to take all and give none, and the people of Mexico have but to look across the Rio Grande to see one of the most striking examples. I should rather be surprised if the simple, plain, patriotic, home-loving, peace-loving people of Mexico should not determine to benefit by the useful experience of her big neighbor on the north, who some 50 years ago delivered herself into the hands of "stand-pat Republicanism and today is a nation of many millionaires and multimillionaires on the one hand and many millions of slaves and paupers on the other hand.

Wilson and Bryan could commit no more shameful act of cowardice, nor greater crime against the humanity of the world than to permit the power of the administration to become a tool for European plutocracy or American stand-pat Republicanism. J. A. TATE.

No More Gallows.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

One by one the states are abolishing the hideous gallows. Tennessee is the latest to substitute electricity for it. In Indiana, New York, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts, North Carolina, South Carolina, New Jersey, Virginia, Vermont and Arkansas the hangman is but a memory. Why does Missouri lag and cling to the hideous and obsolete? MISSOURIAN.

Causes of Long State Constitutions.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

One of the criticisms directed against our State Constitution by the State Bar Association, is its prolixity, its wordiness. It is pointed out that this instrument of 40,000 words is not an example of a terse statement of fundamental principles, but is in fact a code of laws, and is more like a complex legislative enactment than an organic instrument.

The situation in Missouri is not different from that in other States. The fundamental laws in all States have constantly grown in length, and have more and more assumed the form of a legislative code.

Two principal reasons are assigned. First, this condition has been made inevitable by the rapidly increasing complexity of society. The tendency is to evolve a complex social condition, with ever increasing diversity and antagonism of interests. We no longer live simply, as did our fathers, nor do we wish to do so if it were possible. Confronted by such obvious conditions, the people have sought to regulate and control it by constitutional adoption.

Second, state constitutions have grown in length in proportion to the distrust of the people in the wisdom and probity of state legislatures. The people are no longer willing to leave to the uncertainties of legislative enactment a large number of questions vital to their happiness, such as revenue and taxation, education, the courts and corporate rights and obligations.

Does the remedy lie in the mere arbitrary abbreviation of the phraseology of our State Constitution? Constitutional codes are the mode in fashion, they are the rule. The cause is apparent to any observer, and it lies at the very root of our social condition. B.

The Divining Rod.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Smart Alecks and pseudo scientists have always scoffed at the divining rod. The German Scientific Congress, however, now finds that "science can no longer deny the results that have been achieved by the forked willow." The facts of psychical phenomena are also putting out the smart Alecks and pseudos. The world "do move." SOCRATES MUNSON.

Control of Machinery.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your Editorial on Tom Mann and the I. W. W. you seem to think that the control of productive machinery by the workers who operate and build it would result in the ruin of "hundreds of thousands of bond holders and would spread suffering and starvation over the land." Permit me to say that useful work would be the salvation instead of the ruination of these idle rich. Also, suffering and chronic starvation is very widespread among the workers now. The workers are beginning to realize that the capitalist class controls the law making and law-enforcing powers of this Government, hence the growth of the I. W. W. with its doctrine of sabotage and the general strike. And with these weapons the workers have come to know their strength and are gaining power. And therefore the editors of the capitalist-controlled newspapers write editorials against this movement. "SIMPLISIMUS."

THE CRICKET ON THE HEARTH.

Reprinted by Request.

WHEN I come from the country
I shall miss the pure, sweet air,
And I shall grieve for many things
That make it pleasant there.
I shall miss the acorns dropping
Upon the roof at night,
And the miracle of morning
When the sun is soft and bright.

But the cricket on the hearth—
It almost breaks my heart
To think that we two troubadours
Shall ever have to part.

WHEN I went to the country
The place was dead and chill—
But lo! two kindred spirits met
When I came up the hill.
He knew me for a poet
Ere I had breathed a word,
And many were the madrigals
The forest creatures heard.

O cricket on the hearth!
It almost breaks my heart
To think that we two troubadours
Shall ever have to part.

WHEN I come from the country
I never shall be missed
By any of the still, green hills
The morning sun has kissed;
But the cricket—he will miss me—
And in the Autumn wood
He'll ask, "Ah, where is he, alas!
The one who understood?"

O cricket on the hearth!
It almost breaks my heart
To think that we two troubadours
Shall ever have to part.

WHY WORK?

DRAMATIC INSPIRATION.

From the Philadelphia Press.

One of the plays running in New York has for its theme the woman who wishes a stated fraction of the family income so that she will not have to go through her husband's pockets after he is asleep or conspire with her dressmaker to add $100 to her bill and give the wife the money. Madam is entirely justified in her demand, but what an inspiration for the dramatic muse is afforded by this problem of domestic finance! Another play is a travesty on the process of getting up a "movie," and what has directed public attention to it is that it rudely satirizes an actress, under her actual name, whose business is acting before the camera in the production of moving-picture shows. Hence, litigation. Doubtless the first of these can be made very moving—to a matinee audience—and the other may be farcical enough to elicit laughter from persons who are seeking a chance to laugh. But the drama must be "runnin' emptin's," as New England housewives say, when such things as these pass for plays.

FRENCH-CANADIAN BIRTH RATE.

From the Springfield Republican.

When France is perturbed by that ever-present specter, the falling birth-rate, there is the example of French fertility in Canada to which students of the problem may point from their editorial stools in Paris. The results of the Canadian census of 1911 have recently been published and show 2,054,000 French out of a total population of 7,206,000, as compared with 1,878,000 of English, Irish and Scotch combined. In 1901 the French were 31 per cent of the whole; in 1911 only 29 per cent, but in the same period the Britannic preponderance had fallen from 57 to 54 per cent with the introduction of other races. In the 10 years the French-Canadians had added 405,519 to their number, a strictly numerical increase of nearly 25 per cent—a rate the half of which would make France delirious with joy could she accomplish it. Among other factors, French-Canada has remained faithful to the Roman Catholic Church and France has not.

LOST WEDDING RING FOUND.

Lenox (Mass.) Dispatch to the Boston Herald.

The wedding ring which Mrs. James A. de Guire of Newark, N. J., lost from her finger while boating at Stockbridge Bowl on her honeymoon five years ago was recovered here on the body of a frog caught in Laurel Lake, at Lee, several miles from the Bowl. The frog was wearing the gold band like a big belt and was unable to hop quickly. The initials were legible. Mrs. de Guire was a guest, as usual, at the Aspinwall, when the boy who found the frog brought it to the hotel as a curiosity.

Spoilsman's Bulwark.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

Even the most hopeless spoilsman knows the civil service law is his best friend, because it is a bulwark behind which he can always impress his less intelligent constituents by making a speech against the nefarious measure and flooding it with crocodile tears. This trick is so familiar that it has become a congressional jest.

Montessori Instruction.

From the Los Angeles Times.

A Montessori school is being started in Los Angeles. Babies will now learn to read and write, play golf and build aeroplanes in 10 days. If they want a course in agricultural chemistry they will have to stay in school two weeks. Any infant who has been in the class a full fortnight and does not know more than his parents ever expect to learn is passed up as sub-normal.

BEAUTY CULTURE.

MABEL.—It takes a long time to cure enlarged pores. Use scrubbing brush and pure hygienic soap. By this the pores, which have become enlarged by the clogged secretions, are kept free, and gradually they will contract and become normal in size. (After pressing out blackheads apply diluted alcohol to each pore.)

N. A. Y.—Flushed face: A cold sponge each morning is often helpful. Sometimes flushing of the face is due to indigestion, sometimes to tight clothing. Pay particular attention to the neck, waist and feet, which should not be constricted. Exercise in the open air. The following astringent lotion may be mopped on the face: Five ounces of camphor water (not spirits) and 15 grains of tannic acid.

WAITING.—For oily skin, remove the causes. Too much greasy foods, too little fruit, fresh and ripe; too much gravy and too much sweets, too much powder and not enough soap and water; perhaps too much physic. If skin is very oily, sponge with alcohol, but be careful not to use this too often or skin will become too dry. A little borax in water in which you bathe your face is also good.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

JEAN.—Lemon meringue pudding: Pour one quart scalding hot milk over one pint fine stale bread crumbs and let stand half hour. Cream one rounded tablespoon butter with one cup sugar, add beaten yolks of three eggs, juice of one large lemon and a portion of the grated rind. Combine the two mixtures, beat well, turn into a buttered baking dish, stand it in pan of hot water and bake until firm. Beat whites of the eggs until stiff, add three tablespoons sugar and one tablespoon lemon juice. Spread this over the pudding and brown. Lemon layer cake: One cup sugar, piece of butter size of an egg, 2 eggs well beaten in cup, then fill cup with milk, 2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder. Bake in four layers. Filling: The juice and grated rind of 1 lemon, 1 cup of sugar, 1 egg. Steam over boiling water until thick, stir while steaming, spread between the layers and frost with a white frosting. Unless you like a strong flavor of lemon, half of the rind grated would be sufficient.

HEALTH HINTS.

CATARRH SUFFERER.—Chronic nasal catarrh, declares Dr. George H. Patchen of New York, in Health Culture, is our national disease simply because we, in trying to cure it, direct treatment against the symptoms instead of against the causes by which the symptoms are produced. He says it is often dangerous to affect a superficial cure, because the discharges stopped at one point may appear in more delicate parts—even in the lungs. Such methods he declares only "palliatives" that "always retard the cure." He insists that the true cure for catarrh is to be found only in three things—food, exercise, air—whose importance is indicated by the order in which they are named. He declares that catarrh is a blood disease rather than a local one, and the treatment must make the blood healthy. To it must not only be given activity, but those qualities to build up, and maintain in good condition, healthy mucous membranes. He thinks that the needed elements, sulphur, lime, iron and silica, are contained in sufficient quantity in good, well selected food and are thus given to the system in much better form than could possibly be the case through medicines. Oxidation is the great blood purifier, and the method of getting air to the blood should be known to all. He urges, however, that oxidation "occurs as readily and effectively from motion applied to the muscles from without as it does from the motion supplied by the action of the muscles themselves." Hence, he also argues, "remedial usefulness of massage and pressure movements in certain cases." His summary in this respect is that "exercise is the only genuine and reliable blood purifier and, unlike drugs, it can be taken as often and as long as may be necessary without injury to healthy parts or organs." In nasal catarrh there is local stagnation of blood. He would have "physiological drainage" applied by exercises that call into action the muscles of the upper arms, shoulders and neck, which creates a nearby demand for blood that pulls it out of the distended and weakened membranes and lets in the new, healthy and membrane building blood.

MOVING PICTURES.—The bare outline of the plot, if it is strong and leads to a thrilling or well-worked-out climax, is all that is required. A perfect motion picture explains itself. A good working rule to keep before one is to keep the spectator in suspense and always let the unexpected happen. The following example gives an idea of what is wanted: Scene 1—Dining room. Man and wife seated at dinner table, mother-in-law at other end of table. Man shows he is disgusted; dinner finishes; man takes cigar from his pocket, lights it; mother-in-law very indignant, takes cigar out of mouth, throws it in the fireplace; man takes newspapers, starts reading; mother-in-law takes paper, starts to scold man; man disgusted, rises, puts on hat, goes out; wife cries. Scene 2—Husband's office: He is at desk; office boy brings note. He reads: "Dear John—Meet me at the fountain in the park at 3 o'clock. Lovingly, Mabel." Husband looks at watch, goes out. Scene 3—Park: with a seat near the fountain; a lady is seated, dressed exactly like his wife; husband comes; lady's back is turned; he thinks it his wife, playfully holds hands over her eyes. She"—

The New Tariff Law

Saves a Billion a Year.

New York World: Representative Underwood's final speech on the subject of the Tariff bill that will bear his name contained many highly interesting statements. It is his belief that directly and indirectly the law will relieve the people of taxes for government and monopoly aggregating a billion a year. It is his contention that with the exception of the Walker tariff the new act is less burdensome than any other similar measure in force for seventy-five years. It is stated by him that commerce and industry have already adjusted themselves to the new conditions, and it is his most confident prediction that the country is about to enter upon an era of unprecedented prosperity. These happy auguries are highly agreeable, and all will hope that they may prove true. Time alone will tell the story. But when he said that the Democratic party had kept faith with the people and redeemed every pledge relative to tax reduction he proclaimed a fact without conjecture or prophecy.

Not Burdensome.

Philadelphia Record: The deficiency in revenue collected on imports is likely to be more than made good by the tax on incomes, which will not prove burdensome to anyone, from the man who gets $5000 a year and pays a tax of $10 up to the man who pays a tax of $30,000 on the second half million of his income. It will be found that the Democratic party has redeemed its promise to lighten the burden of taxation and yet provide an ample revenue for all public purposes.

It's Educational.

Washington Times: In a few days the income tax will be the law of the land. It marks a revolution in fiscal methods of the Government; a revolution that will be much better appreciated five years hence than it can now. Almost a half-million people will be required to pay taxes under the new law, and many more to file statements. It is very important that they should know exactly what the measure means. Preparing the reports that are demanded, systematizing the statement of one's affairs, will be an exercise highly valuable to a good many people. In fact, it is possible that many a payer of the tax will get indirect benefits, from the systematization of his methods, that will quite compensate him for the contribution he will make to the Government.

No Machine Rule.

St. Louis Republic: No allegations of "machine rule" could by any possibility account for the passing of this bill through the upper house. The Senate has the slenderest of nominal majorities. If the two Progressives who voted for the bill had opposed it and one lone Democrat had joined them, it could not have been passed. The power behind the bill has been the compulsion of popular mandate and not the coercion of the machine. Once more it is worth while to note the fact that in the passing of this measure the Senate has reversed its traditional role. For more than twenty years the upper house has been the happy hunting ground of special interests in search of subservient tools. Successive Republican tariffs have been "revised upward" in the Senate and it was there that the Wilson bill of 1894 lost all character and consistency and became an evidence of "party perfidy and party dishonor." The Senate has been the abode of reaction. It has changed. The present bill, as it emerges from conference, is a more radical measure than it was when it came from the House.

Buyers Like Dumping.

Boston Herald: Trade will now be allowed to move in natural channels. If the dumping that takes place proves damaging to our industries, the remedy would come in a re-establishment of the tariff barriers now being swept away. One of the purpose of the protective system is to prevent dumping, and in that system's abrogation we should make this change among the others. Incidentally the buyer should, perhaps, be considered. He likes dumping. It is the basic idea of the bargain sale. California has passed a law aiming to enforce what amounts to dumping, by punishing with severe penalties those who destroy any edible commodity in order to prevent its glutting the market, with a consequent demoralization of prices.

"It Is to Laugh!"

Washington Times: For near three weeks the tariff bill has been in conference. That is, in a conference composed exclusively of the Democratic conferees. The open conference, with newspaper reporters admitted and all parties on deck to say their little say? It is to laugh! No Republican has been admitted; a correspondent would have been anathema. It has been the good old game of a caucus measure passed by a party vote, going to a party conference with the opposition shut out.

"Shared by the People."

Indianapolis News: There are many industries that will, we believe, be greatly benefited by the new law. For though their protection is cut down, they get the very great advantage of free raw materials. Free wool, free pig iron and free iron ore—to take a few cases—will be a great help to the iron and steel, and woolen industries. And the advantage thus conferred is wholly legitimate. It will be shared by the people, especially as there are heavy cuts in the duties on finished products. Another important feature of the bill is that, as a rule, the duties are highest on the most costly goods. This is a reversal of the old practice under which the cheaper goods bore the highest taxes.

A Great Object Lesson.

New York Evening Post: That wonderful solution of the tariff question which, hardly more than a year or two ago, was acclaimed with such naive delight in high quarters, has cut but a sorry figure. Not difference in cost of production, but the reasonable claims of the American people, has been the touchstone by which the rates have been determined. There has been no blind and sweeping cutting down of duties, regardless of a just consideration for existing industries; but the doctrine that the manufacturer has a vested right in the home market, whatever it may cost his fellow citizens, has been absolutely cast out. And all this has happened without any commotion or disturbance—almost without any protest in the public prices except of the most perfunctory kind. To those whose memory is not hopelessly defective, we recommend the exercise of recalling how general, eight or ten years ago, was the notion that the American people had decided, for good and all, upon a policy of high protection, and that to reopen the question was merely to disturb business without the slightest prospect of accomplishing anything. The contrast between this state of mind and that shown by the passing of the present tariff bill with the general acquiescence of the nation affords a valuable illustration of the delusions of "manifest destiny."

Freeing Insurance Premiums.

Washington Herald: Great interest centers about the decision of the tariff conferees to exempt from the income tax that portion of the premium on mutual life insurance policies which is returned to policyholders as dividends. This action came rather unexpected, as the amendments made originally by the Senate to that effect had been dropped before the bill went into conference. Under the decision, all life insurance companies, writing mutual policies, also mutual marine insurance companies, are treated alike. The Senate Finance Committee urged this action some weeks ago. Now the conferees have decided that the provision is within their jurisdiction and that they had authority to make the change. Holders of mutual insurance policies have urged that such an exemption ought to be a part of the income tax to protect the right of those who hold dividend-paying policies.

ULSTER'S ARMY SHOWS ITSELF

THE most picturesque recent international event was the parade before Sir Edward Carson of the Ulster "Army of Rebellion," 11,000 strong, carrying wooden muskets, when they issued their defiance to the British Empire. The Asquith Government has intimated that if they set up their provisional government it will not call out the British army but will simply shut the Ulster rebels off from the use of the mails. This has been received with indignation at Belfast as contrary to the rules of "honorable warfare."

"Full Steam Ahead."

New York World: It was reserved for the Irish parliamentary leader, John Redmond, with a few words of cold common sense, to puncture the preposterous notion of an Ulster "government" more completely than had yet been done. Such a schism as Sir Edward Carson proposes would lose its share in the courts of the kingdom; its merchants could collect no debts outside of Ulster. It would lose the general police, postoffice, public works, old-age pensions. Stock exchange transactions could not be enforced. Checks outside Ulster could not be drawn. Letters could not be sent. Shipping would avoid a harbor where commerce was impossible. The British Government would not need to strike a blow. Draw a cordon about Belfast and the folly would soon see its end. Rebellion would be starved out. Lord Loreburn's letter suggesting a conference was an opportunity for the Tories, not of Ireland, but of England, to climb down gracefully. They missed the opening. There is a clear course now for home rule to make "full steam ahead."

The Wooden Guns.

Chicago Daily News: By parading with dummy rifles the Ulster army inspires the hope that it will confine itself to that kind of war.

"No Heroics!"

Washington Post: The Unionists in Ulster have formed a provisional "government" and say they will take over the administration of the north country when the home rule bill becomes law. Whereupon the London government does something so tremendously sensible as to inspire wonder how the genius with so much sanity ever broke into a political job. The army isn't to be called out, nor the fleet. War will not be declared. Nobody will be arrested for high treason and made a martyr when, in fact, he is merely a demagogue. No heroics for the Asquith Government. It will just stop the mail service to Ulster—which includes telegraph and telephone service be it understood—until the Ulsterites decide to be good and come back into the union!

"Rebellious Loyalists."

Detroit News: The Ulsterites are so loyal to the British crown that they have taken up arms to prevent the British crown from giving Ireland, including Ulster, home rule. Now if these loyalists can "lick" the King, there will be a triumph of principle that has been equaled only by the Frenchman who was so opposed to monarchs that he caught his death's cold from refusing to wear a crown in his hat. The British have their own peculiar patience in government. Instead of taking summary revenge upon the Ulster zealots for their so obvious treason, the Asquith government has allowed Carson and Londonderry to drill and arm and issue proclamations to their heart's content. They view the provisional Government with amazing tolerance, though not recognition. They promise to go right ahead with the home rule bill, and set up an autonomous government for all Ireland, regardless of the protestations of over-loyal Ulster.

Not a "Martyr."

Pittsburg Gazette: The British Government does not want to "make a martyr" of Sir Edward Carson. Probably it would be better to make a mouse of him under the "cat and mouse" act.

"Are Not Fools."

Philadelphia Ledger: The men who are now responsible for the Government of Great Britain are not fools, and their refusal to become excited over the bold talk of sedition indulged in by the Ulster leaders may explain why the rest of Ireland is equally indifferent. Men who are seriously planning insurrection do not do so with a brass band in attendance. Much of the frenzy displayed by Sir Edward Carson and his followers finds its inspiration in the indifference of their opponents. They may succeed in exacting additional guarantees, but that they will succeed or even attempt to involve their country in civil war to establish the principle that in Ireland alone a minority shall continue to rule the great majority, is extremely improbable. On any other basis than this the contemptuous calm of the British public in the face of the Ulster demonstrations would be inexplicable.

"Ulster vs. Ulster!"

New York Times: If civil war should break out in Ulster it would not be Ulster against the rest of Ireland, but one part of Ulster's population against the other. Open rebellion is not likely in any event, and the Liberal Ministry is acting wisely in not interfering with the agitators at the present state of their activities. Should an attempt be made to seize the reins of government and supersede lawful authority with insurgent usurpation, the conditions would not only justify but demand imperial action. Premature severity on the part of the Government would give the enemies of the Liberal Administration just what they want.

Not a Bluff.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The Ulster army which was reviewed by the Unionist leaders at Belfast and which is ready to make war upon the British empire numbered 11,000 men. It has been said that the Ulster movement is a bluff. This is clearly wrong. It doesn't amount to a bluff.

"Playing the Mountebank."

New York Tribune: There is no reason why the present situation in Ulster should be considered in any more serious a light than as a highly interesting comedy on a magnificent scale, with Sir Edward Carson as leading man. Sir Edward is at present being magnified by the opposition papers as a great historic figure, a leader of a magnificent fight for liberty, etc., etc., but it is very doubtful whether historians of the future will not show him as a brilliant man playing the mountebank for ambitious ends.

Redmond Controls.

Philadelphia Inquirer: For the present at least, John Redmond is master of the situation and arbiter of the outcome. The Liberal party's retention of office is dependent on his good will. He holds the balance of power in the House of Commons. Were he to swing the seventy-four votes which he controls against the Government it would at once be placed in the minority and the resignation of the Asquith Ministry would become imperative. It follows that if he wishes to remain in power, as there is every reason to believe he does, Mr. Asquith has no alternative but to comply with Mr. Redmond's wishes, and so whatever little possibility there may have been that a conference might be held has now been dissipated.

Ulster for Home Rule.

New Orleans Times-Democrat: Most people imagine that Ulster is solidly Protestant and, therefore, solidly against Home Rule, but the fact is quite the other way. Ulster's present delegation to Parliament is for Home Rule—by a majority of one. And it is an immense mistake to suppose that support of Home Rule comes exclusively from the ranks of Catholicism. Parnell was a Protestant and so was more than one of his predecessors in the leadership. And the surest strongholds of the cause in Great Britain are Scotland and Wales, both Protestant to the core. Scotland and Wales are for Home Rule, for the simple reason that they want local governments of their own. And England has changed her attitude, from the conviction that the imperial Parliament can never attend to imperial business so long as every little local bill has to be taken to London.

Home Rule All Around.

Philadelphia Record: A curious feature of Ulster's so-called revolt is the opposition to a reform which seems not only logical, but absolutely essential to future progress. Home Rule for Ireland, though it has been most prominent in the public eye, is only the first part of a wider program that is considered inevitable by thoughtful Englishmen. This is the division of Great Britain into four States or provinces, England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, each with its own Parliament to look after purely local questions, while the imperial Parliament would remain, as now, at London with authority over the broader interests of the widely-scattered nation. Parliamentary government, as now constituted in the British Isles, has broken down under the vast mass of legislation pressed upon it, and its workmanship has proved most unsatisfactory. Home Rule for Ireland would rapidly be followed by similar freedom for Scotland, which is practically unanimous for it, and Wales and England would be similarly treated in the near future.

"With a String to It."

Evening Wisconsin: It is suggested that no one knows better than Sir Edward Carson that in case of actual rebellion all personal ambition would be at an end, unless, of course, he can succeed in establishing a seperate kingdom of Ulster, for no Government would dare promote him after his actually taking up arms against the Empire—"The fact is no one has less desire than Sir Edward Carson to establish Ulster as a separate kingdom." The Ulster indemnity fund of five million dollars looked very impressive in the announcement, but attention is called to the fact that there are two strings to the subscriptions, even including that of fifty thousand by Sir Edward—they are not to be paid unless "needed," nor unless "the full amount is subscribed."

COMPLETION OF PANAMA CANAL

THE Panama Canal is on the eve of completion more than one year ahead of the time announced when the work was begun. The gigantic task has been carried through with singular expedition and success and well-deserved congratulations are pouring in upon all the leading engineers.

"The Measure of American Success."

Washington Times: It is too early yet to let loose the floodgates of national rejoicing. There is, of course, the possibility of a slip at the last moment, for this is the period when the delicate calculations of the engineers are put to the test by eventualities. But we can see enough to make it all but certain that Americans have performed one of the most colossal physical feats of modern times and, in fact, of all time. The world knows well what defeated De Lesseps. Although his genius, backed by French resourcefulness and enthusiasm, had been equal to severing Asia and Africa, it could not combat the frightful diseases which repeatedly decimated his force of workmen at Panama. He could not overcome the fundamental difficulty, for in his time the progress of sanitary science was not equal to that. Perhaps it was not equal to the task when the American sanitarians took hold; but to the fact that they were pathbreakers and that they were able to transform a hatchery of devastating pests into a health resort we owe the amazing progress in the construction of the canal. It was not discreditable to the French that they were unable to perform what was all but impossible. But their failure under the great De Lesseps emphasizes the measure of American success, if, as confidently hoped, the canal is soon opened to the ships of the world.

A Warning From Nature.

New York World: We have risked hundreds of millions and the nation's plans for the future in an undertaking that some day, through a sudden caprice of nature, may possibly end in disaster. To learn some fine morning that an earthquake had ruined the Gatun locks and wrecked the canal would be poor consolation for having hastily decided to build a high-level canal for theoretical reasons of economy and of saving in time. The majority of the engineers consulted urged sea-level construction. Mr. Roosevelt knew better. Whoever opposed his views, he was convinced, opposed the building of any canal at all. To the superstitious the coincidence that the Canal Zone was visited by an earthquake the very day that water was first let into the Culebra Cut will have a sinister meaning. At any rate, we have challenged nature, and nature has replied by giving warning of the unconquerable forces of destruction that she possesses.

Colombia's Complaint.

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph: In a current magazine article Earl Harding submits a proposition for adjusting our diplomatic tangle with the republic of Colombia which deserves thoughtful consideration. He points out the well-known fact that Colombia has never forgiven or even recognized the seizure of the Isthmus and the establishment of an independent republic there, and still harbors the utmost ill feeling against the United States for the coup of 1903, whereby the Colombian State of Panama became overnight the republic of Panama.

VENICE'S ANCIENT GLORY REVIVED BY PATRICIANS

Marchioness Casti's Fete Equals in Splendor Anything "the Queen of the Adriatic" Has Seen in Centuries and Other Social Leaders Are Emulating Their Medieval Forefathers in Sumptuous Hospitality

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

VENICE, Oct. 4.—Since the Campanile has been rebuilt Venice seems bent upon regaining some of her ancient glory. The fetes for the dedication of the new structure brought a multitude of visitors last year from all parts of Europe.

This year the princely families are reviving the splendors of hospitality on a scale which rivals the entertainments of their medival forefathers. Nothing that Venice has seen in centuries could surpass the fete recently given by Marchioness Casati in her splendid palace on the banks of the Grand Canal. The Marchioness ranks as one of the reigning beauties in the Italian aristocracy. The Casatis are the wealthiest family in Northern Italy.

At Lady Rodini's historic ball in Rome last spring, the Marchioness, one of the most admired guests, formed the idea of giving a similar entertainment, a fancy dress ball in her own residence.

The Casati palace stands in grounds on the banks of the canal a little way outside the city. The garden, of matchless beauty, runs down to the water's edge. It was an ideal spot for such a fete.

Scene Worthy of the Arabian Nights.

The shady avenues of acacia and cactus, the winding orange groves and open spaces dotted with statues and fountains were studded with thousands of electric lights and colored lanterns. It was a scene worthy of the Arabian Nights. The night air was heavy with the fragrance of flowers and from the palace windows myriads of lights were reflected in the waters of the canal, which were studded at this point with gaily decked gondolas at the disposal of the guests who liked to "sit out" a part of the evening.

The Marchioness received her guests at the head of the grand staircase, which was lavishly decorated. She wore a Persian costume of immaculate white gauze studded with gems and in a setting of plants and flowers she formed a picture of trascendent beauty.

In the ball room was prepared a throne where in the evening the hostess sat in Oriental state and received the homage of the richly costumed throng that passed before her.

But long before midnight the ballroom was forsaken for the garden, where the guests wandered through the brilliantly illuminated groves, listening to subdued music from hidden recesses. It was only toward the early hours of the morning that the ballroom was again filled and a cotillon at which favors rained in profusion announced the close of the biggest private entertainment ever given in Venice.

Flower of the Italian Nobility There.

The guests included not only the flower of the Italian nobility, but many distinguished visitors from Austrian, French, German and other social circles.

The English aristocracy was represented by the Duchess of Rutland and Lady Diana Manners, the former representing night and the latter Morning.

Princess Di San Faustino (formerly Miss Jane Campbell of New York) was resplendent in a medieval costume with jewels valued at $50,000.

Princess Odescalichi as Titania, wore a costume of a wonderful texture and several of her friends represented her attendant fairies.

Princess d'Abro, Marchioness Rudini, the Duchess of Terranova, Marchioness Gandara, all vied with one another in the splendor of their fifteenth and sixteenth century costumes.

Other fetes of minor importance have marked the opening of the autumn season.

Prince Alexander of Servia is visiting Count d'Ayala. Prince Alexander and Princess Letitia of Italy have laid aside for the time the escutcheon of royalty and are entertaining on a large scale in their respective hotels.

6,700 BOTTLES OF WINE AT A BANQUET FOR POINCARE

PARIS, Oct. 4.—A great popular banquet attended by 3000 guests was given at Toulouse in honor of President Poincare when the President arrived on his great motor tour of the country. The diners sat at a table an eighth of a mile in length. The menu served included 700 pounds of salmon, 1000 pounds of beef, 800 birds, 50 gallons of ice cream, 400 pounds of fruit and 9000 assorted cakes. This was washed down with 6000 bottles of red and white wine and 700 bottles of champagne.

President Poincare has learned to drive his own car so that if, for any reason, his official chauffeur is disabled he will be qualified to replace him and complete his journey. The President learned the intricacies of the motor engine and equipment during his tour. He was an apt pupil and mastered the art of driving in a surprisingly short time.

SCOTTISH [illegible] FAR BE[illegible] USUAL [illegible]

Festivities and Shooting S[illegible] longed Because King Re[illegible] Balmoral to Remain Un[illegible] Wedding in London of His [illegible] and His Cousin Arthur.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Oct. 4.—Never have Scottish Highlands been more popular than this year and never before have so many Americans been on the moors. American lessees have shown nice discrimination in choosing the best shooting boxes and record bags have been made by them.

The season is lasting longer than usual because of the return of the King to Balmoral. The Highland season will not end until after the wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught to the Duchess of Fife in St. James Palace, London, Oct. 15. Already the visitors are donning the woods and furs are making their appearance, for September and early October have a "snell touch" as the Scots call the first chill air of approaching winter.

There was a great gathering at the Scottish Highland capital, Inverness, for the one hundred and twenty-fifth northern meeting. The dances attracted people from long distances and for two days every hotel was full. All the boarding house accommodations had been snapped up weeks before.

The aristocracy of England and Scotland was well represented and among the foreign notabilities was the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. The Highland chieftains, gay with clan tarfans, made a brave show and everyone possessing the faintest claim to Scottish ancestry sought out and wore the appropriate plaid.

Turkey Trot Supersedes Highland Fling.

A large number of Americans obtained the much-prized invitations to the Highland balls, and during the daytime they were to the fore in the various games, bagpipe playing, Highland dancing, tossing the caber, varied with running and vaulting. Hans Holner of America won the Marathon race and Knox of Canada captured the vaulting championship. The turkey trot almost superseded the Highland fling at the dances.

Most of the shooting taken by Americans this year was in Inverness and Perthshire, but some of them were to be found in Forfarshire and Kincardine. Motoring was good, the roads being well kept.

Fine Shooting for the Goulds.

A notable American party invited by Jay Gould and Lord and Lady Decies had great sport during the season in Perthshire. Within a fortnight the Gould party of four guns bagged over 2000 brace of grouse, which easily constitutes a record. On another occasion, during four days, Jay, Kingdon and George Gould, the father, and R. H. Russell shot 570 brace of grouse, 64 hares, 6 brace of black game, 2 snipe and 1 teal.

From Dunkelt House Howard Gould had good shooting until called back to America. In one day the bag totaled 135 brace of grouse, besides other game. Clarence Mackay had a party with him in Kincardineshire, while the Bradley-Martins entertained guests, as usual, at Balmacaan.

ALL VIENNA TALKS OF NEW QUEEN OF BEAUTY.

She Is Pastor Johanny's Daughter, Marietta, Bride of Famous Tenor, Soon to Sing in New York.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

VIENNA, Oct. 4.—There always is an acknowledged "Beauty of Vienna." Until lately the reigning beauty was Banker Reitze's charming wife, whom he fell desperately in love with, proposed to and married in one short carnival month. He made her a wedding present of the title of Baroness for their first wedding day and by means of giving $20,000 to a hospital.

The young Baroness, a most charming matron, has been deposed by an 18-year-old girl who may soon be seen in America.

She is Marietta Tohannay. The second daughter of a Protestant clergyman of Vienna, whom Catholic Viennese called Pastor Johanny, has been elected Queen of Beauty by acclamation. Very popular was Pastor Johanny, a kind, mild man, mourned by all who knew him when he died of heart failure suddenly less than a year ago. Everybody pitied the widow, left with a son and three daughters to provide for.

For a pastor's daughter Maria has lived much in the gay world, complimented wherever she appears, the object of a thousand attentions, the recipient of valuable presents, all because she represented in its perfection the type of beauty now most admired. When her father died she went on the stage, although her mother opposed it, appearing in the Duetsches Volkstheatre.

Early in the summer she was invited to Strobl, near Isschl, to visit friends. Among those who went to Isschl, when the Imperial Opera season ended, was the famous tenor, Alfred Piccaver, an American born in Albany, N. Y., whom Vienna is beginning to hold in high esteem. He will sing during the coming season at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and has been re-engaged for the Imperial Opera in Vienna at a salary of $6000 a year, with the promise of an increase to $10,000 in three years, a large remuneration for this country.

One week after he met Marietta Johanny he proposed marriage to her and in three weeks they were wed. Everybody marvels at this extraordinary offspring of a homely pastor. Her remarkable beauty and vivacity may be explained to a certain extent by the fact that the pastor's father eloped with a very handsome circus girl, the best horsewoman of her time. Physiologists say that grandmothers are often reproduced in granddaughters.

KAISER WILL OPEN POTTERY STORE IN NEW YORK.

He Thinks He Sees a Mistake in Restricting the Sale of His Cadinen Ware to German Tourists.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—Emperor William is about to establish branches in New York, Paris and London for the sale of the pottery manufactured at his works in Cadinen.

A recent order received from a wealthy Frenchman in Paris for $20,000 worth of the imperial ware opened the Emperor's eyes to the possibilities of an extended market. Hitherto the sale of Cadinen pottery, for which the Emperor has proved to be a capital "drummer," has been restricted to Germany and Austria.

Emperor William has been rusticating in the Prince of Pless' little hunting chalet at Promits on the Austrian frontier, which was built on plans made by the Princess of Pless for a kind of honeymoon resort. The chalet was only just big enough for the Emperor and his small suite, but even the Emperor's simple life was not simple enough for old Ammon, the Prince of Pless' veteran huntsman, who is no respecter of Princes or Kings.

Ammon has been chief forester to the Princes of Pless for 60 years. He has bred a famous herd of bisons, which he allowed the Emperor to shoot at once this year. Ammon retires now and the Emperor held a celebration in honor of the veteran hunter under the forest trees, finally handing him the Order of Public Service with a cross in brilliants.

"A pretty thing," observed Ammon, turning over the splendid jewel. "But I know something prettier. Come and see."

He led the Emperor through the forest until they reached an open glade where some cattle were feeding in the midst of the glade. Near a stream stood a bison with a young calf.

"That's the fiftieth bison," said Ammon, "born on my fiftieth birthday."

PHILADELPHIA GIRL IS A BELLE IN LONDON SOCIETY

LONDON, Sept. 24.—One of the prettiest girls seen in London this season was Miss Hannah Randolph, daughter of Philip S. P. Randolph of Philadelphia and a cousin of Viscountess Maidstone, who was Margaretta Drexel before her marriage. Miss Randolph's sister Dorothy married John Fell of Narragansett, the owner of Highbridge, America's best steeplechaser, which won the Prince of Wales' Handicap this year.

The two sisters were in England together this season and went out a great deal. Miss Hannah Randolph was one of the bridemaids at the wedding of Lord Decies and Miss Vivien Gould. She is an expert horsewoman, exhibiting at Lakewood and at Narragansett frequently, and an enthusiastic polo player. The various fashionable race meetings around London were invariably attended by Miss Randolph. She purposes to come to London for next season.

MOTOR FORTS PROPOSED AS BRITISH ISLES COAST GUARD

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Armored wagons resembling moving forts are proposed for English coast-defense work, reconnoitering and movable block-house duty, following the lines of a car specially constructed for the Spanish Government.

In a country such as that comprising the British Isles, with a big coast line, and only a comparatively small regular armed force always available, quick transport, both at night time and during the day for troops which may be needed at any attacked point is rapidly becoming a more vital necessity every day.

The body-work of the proposed car is of the so-called armored type, and is roughly divided into three compartments. The front comprises a covered cab for the driver's seat, which is located over the engine; the main portion of the bodywork is in effect a small block-house for the accommodation of the men in charge of the quick-firing guns, and the ammunition storage is located at the rear of the chassis.

RAY BEVERIDGE SINGS AT FAMOUS BERLIN CABARET.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—Miss Ray Beveridge, a sister of the American sculptress, Miss Kuhne Beveridge, and granddaughter of former Gov. John L. Beveridge of Illinois, joined the staff of Berlin's most famous cabaret known as the "Chat Noir." She will appear soon in new songs written for her. One is entitled: "There's Nothing on Earth the Germans Can Do That We Can't Do Too.

The pretty young actress has taken a handsome apartment near the Thiergarten, where afternoon tea parties have already become a feature of the Berlin season.

WIDOW OF KING LEOPOLD WOULD WED AN AIRMAN.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—As soon as Baroness Vaughan, widow of King Leopold of Belgium, succeeds in freeing herself from her present husband, Durrieux, she purposes leading an airman to the altar. The bridegroom, Bidot by name, is one of the foremost French aviators. The two met at Dieppe in July when Bidot was giving a flying exhibition. The Baroness, with her two ducal children, is now at the Trianon Hotel, Treport, and Bidot frequents visits the town by air.

Debutantes Eager for the V. P. Ball, When the Identity of the Queen of Society for the Year Will Be Revealed.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

EVERYTHING is ready for the coming of His Mystic Majesty, the Veiled Prophet, Tuesday evening, when again he will choose a queen from his court of love and beauty.

The hearts of all the debutantes are a-flutter with anticipation, for some one among them has received the magic word telling her that it is she who will be crowned with all the pomp and ceremony that surround the coronation of the daughter of a hundred kings.

No one but the lucky girl herself, her parents and the august committee knows who she will be, and they never tell. The mystery which shrouds the whole affair is part of its charm, and to reveal the secret is a breach of an unwritten law.

Sometimes not even the girl herself knows, until she gets to the Coliseum, where a room is set aside for the queen and the three special maids of her court.

Of course her father knows and certainly he has to tell his wife, because she must see that the gown worn by her daughter is fit for a queen. But with all the guessing, outsiders can never be sure.

The queen is usually a debutante, the daughter of some man high in the organization; some one who has been a prophet since the days when the pageant went through the streets by torch light and the balls were given in the old exposition building—before they had queens; when the girl who danced with the Prophet was the belle of the season.

This year there are so many debutantes that the guessing has been difficult. There were Misses Eleanore Scott, Theotiste Nugent, Eleanor Dozier, Jane McNair, Carol Miller, Ruth Bixby, Adaline Capen and Jane Shapleigh, all with equal chances and reasons for being chosen queen. But one by one the chances have been narrowed down to two or three or so girls, the others remaining abroad until too late for the ball. So now it rests between Miss Jane Shapleigh and Miss Adaline Capen and, maybe, Miss Eleanor Dozier and Miss Theotiste Nugent.

The ball last year at the Coliseum was the most magnificent ever given and the one this year, they say, will be finer still, if possible.

There will be more than 40 maids—many of the debutantes, and some of the belles of last season, and about the same number of matrons of honor.

During the interval between the time the guests assemble and the Prophet arrives, there will be music by an orchestra, and Helen Stanley of the Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera company will sing.

The queen of last year, Miss Jane Taylor, will preside until the Prophet leads her from the throne. Then will enter the special maids, one by one, and the girl to be crowned at the throne.

After the old-fashioned quadrille which has been danced by the Prophet and his Knights for 35 years, is finished, the general dancing will begin, and to trot or not to trot will be the question to disturb the younger set for about two minutes.

Last year several of the maids of honor didn't want to go down from the throne platform to the dancing floor to begin the trot, but danced literally at the foot of the throne, something that had never been heard of before.

As soon as the dancing began on the platform it ceased on the floor, and everyone turned and watched the turkey trotting. Whether it will be allowed this year remains to be seen. It will be quite interesting to see whether the dances accepted by members of the fashionable set and taboo at the dances

J. White, Ladies' Tailor, of 1002 Olive, is now showing the newest Fall importations

Two engagements of more than ordinary interest were announced the past week. Miss Lucia Sloan's to Henry H. Hopkins, while not a great surprise, is one of the notable betrothals of the autumn. Miss Sloan is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Sloan of 36 Washington terrace and one of a little coterie of girls who care more for intellectual things than for society. She is a graduate of Mary Institute and later of Goucher College, where she was a classmate of Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, who was her guest last April while here for the Goucher College benefit.

Mr. Hopkins is a member of the University, the City and the Meramec Canoe clubs.

The marriage will be in the winter.

The other engagement is Miss Vera Middleton's to James Lee McDonald, the announcement of which was made Thursday afternoon at a Fishpond luncheon given by Miss Virginia Maddox. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Middleton of 5093 Washington boulevard. Miss Ines Stone of Chicago, who came down especially for the occasion, is the guest of Miss Middleton.

Miss Virginia Morrison Carr, who will make her bow this winter under the chaperonage of her grandmother, Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison, is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Alfred Tevis Kelly, in New York. She is the daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Clark Carr of Albuquerque, N. M.

It isn't every bride who leaves quantities of beautiful wedding presents to follow her and goes to a foreign country to find loads more awaiting her on the other side and a brand-new home she will be at home after Nov. 1 at 20 Pennsylvania avenue, Belleville, Ill. Dr. and Mrs. Rumbold, whose marriage was one of the interesting affairs of last summer, are still on their wedding trip and were last heard from in Honolulu. They are going to the Philippines and the Orient before their return.

Miss Lucia Belden, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Edgar Belden of Hamilton, O., is the guest of Miss Fritzi Spink. Miss Spink is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Spink of 5235 Lindell boulevard, and will make her debut this fall. She and her guest will be among the buds who will make their Cards have been sent out by Dr. and Mrs. Frank Meker Rumbold announcing the marriage of Mrs. Rumbold's daughter, Miss Adele Helen Brunaugh, and Curt H. G. Heinfelden of Belleville, Ill., at Christ Church Cathedral Wednesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Heinfelden

Girlish, Wrinkle-Free Skin Easy to Have

(From Pilgrim Magazine.)

Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the world have been using the saxolite face bath to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly all over the face, thus reducing lines and sagginess. The formula is: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint.

Another wonderful facial beautifier and rejuvenator that has become quite a craze in the United States, as in Europe, is marcolized wax. Druggists report a great demand. The wax literally absorbs a sallow, blotchy or withered complexion, giving the fresh, vigorous, healthy-hued young skin underneath a chance to breathe, and to show itself. Applying the wax at night, like cold cream, washing it off mornings, will completely renovate a poor complexion in a week or ten days. One ounce usually sufficient.—ADV.

SHH! LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN YOUR FADED GRAY HAIR—USE SAGE TEA

Sage Tea Mixed with Sulphur Restores Natural Color and Luster to Hair—Just Comb or Brush it in the Hair.

Why suffer the handicap of looking old. Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance.

Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use; but listen, avoid preparations put up by druggists, as they usually use too much sulphur, which makes the hair sticky. Get "Wyeth's" which can always be depended upon to darken beautifully and is the best thing known to remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

By using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair. It does it so naturally and evenly—you moisten a sponge or soft brush, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time which requires but a few moments. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two its natural color is restored and it becomes glossy and lustrous and you appear years younger.—ADV.

The wedding of Miss Orian Dyer and Maj. Clarke S. Smith, Thursday afternoon, was one of the most beautiful of the season. It was at 5 o'clock in the Church of the Holy Communion, where the bride had been christened and confirmed, and which, with its fine old windows and carved altars, lends itself well to an impressive ceremony.

The vested choir, singing a hymn, went down the aisle to meet the bride upon her arrival at the door, and when the choir led the procession to the altar the wedding chorus was sung.

The church is large, with lots of woodwork, darkened with age, and the bridemaids' frocks and the uniforms of the officers, who were Maj. Smith's groomsmen, made bright splashes of color.

The vivid shades which are the season's style were seen at their best. The maid of honor Miss Hildegarde Frerichs, and the bridemaids, Misses Elder Potvin of Midlands, Canada, Annie Maude Kennedy and Ruth Gregg, wore gowns of pale pink brocaded charmeuse with high girdles of red velvet. Their hats were of red velvet and they all carried huge clusters of Richmond roses.

Maj. Smith, who is in the Engineer Corps, Maj. Paul A. Barry, his best man, Maj. Robert S. Thomas, also of the Engineer Corps, from Kansas City, and Lieut. Becker Jr. of the Marine Corps from Detroit, Mich., the groomsmen, were in full dress uniform.

Frederick Hunting of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Norris B. Gregg Jr., the bride's cousin, were ushers.

The bride wore a gown of ivory-colored charmeuse trimmed with the point-duchesse lace from her mother's wedding dress.

A court train of brocaded chiffon velvet fell from the hight waistline in the back and was caught with sprays of old-fashioned wax orange blossoms. Her illusion veil was worn simply and fell to the end of her train.

As Maj. Smith and his bride left the church the choir sang another joyous bridal march.

After church service there was a small reception at the house of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Hunt Dyer, for the family, the most intimate friends and some of the bride's schoolmates.

Maj. and Mrs. Smith are in New York and will sail from there on the Moltke, Tuesday, for Europe to spend their honeymoon and will return for Christmas. Maj. Smith is stationed in St. Louis.

Another wedding of last week worthy of note was that of Miss Helene Wrape and Joseph O'Neil at St. Rose's Church, Wednesday evening. Again the brilliant colors of the season were seen in the vivid green tunics to the bridemaids' gowns, which contrasted oddly with the great arm bouquets of pink roses they carried.

The ceremony took place just before the evening service known as benediction, and the music was arranged especially for the occasion. The bridal music from Lohengrin was sung by a quartet and an Ave Maria was played by one of the violinists of the Symphony Orchestra.

It was a beautiful wedding and the bride, who is remarkably pretty, was lovely in her bridal robe of white satin with its quantities of tulle trimming.

Miss Bible Wrape, who was her sister's maid of honor, will sail from New York on the Imperator, Oct. 11, and Mr. and Mrs. O'Neil will go there to bid her good-by. She is going back to Paris to continue her vocal studies.

Eat and Get Thin

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion, and likewise fond of the table and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Co., Farmer Building, Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) 75 cents. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure. He will hand you a large case of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription), one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat at the rate of 12 to 16 ounces a day. That is all. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.—ADV.

A Beautiful Natural Complexion

One Who Benefited by Wonderful Work of Lorinda James, Tells Life-Story of this Sympathetic, Motherly Old Lady, Whose Simple Rules of Beauty Make Her Home a Shrine for All Plain Women

SHOWS HOW ANY WOMAN CAN HAVE A CLEAR, SMOOTH SKIN IN A FEW DAYS

It was years ago that I first met Lorinda James. I had come to Chicago from a small country town, with youth, beauty and ambition at my command. Prospects were bright. I made friends easily. The world seemed to be waiting for my beck and call. But work and late hours began to tell on me. My beauty faded. The soft, velvety tints that nature had given me vanished. Eruptions, sallowness and other skin blemishes marred my features.

About this time, when I was becoming blue, disheartened and retiring, I became friends with a clever, successful woman, who told me bluntly that a bad complexion is the enemy of success—that to win one must look her best, have the appearance of success, attract others and not show signs of care, worry or age.

From her I received the name and address of Lorinda James, whom I found a beautiful, sympathetic, motherly old lady with a sweet, gentle face and the peachy bloom of youth still growing on her clear cheeks.

She told me of her years of study abroad; of how deeply she had gone into the science of the skin; of how she had succeeded in discovering some of Dame Nature's most treasured secrets. She told me how she had perfected a wonderful means for obtaining and keeping a beautiful skin; a method so simple and harmless, so unlike cosmetics, powders, salves, ointments and the like, that it was a complete revolution of beauty ideas.

I followed the simple rules she gave me and in a remarkably short space of time my complexion was restored to all its natural loveliness. It was as though magic had been called to my aid—as though some kind fairy had granted my dearest wish.

I met many others who came to Lorinda James and went away equally delighted. Girls, young married women, mothers and old ladies benefited alike.

It was a common expression in her neighborhood that whenever a woman was seen going to or coming from the home of Lorinda James, she was sure to find her heart's desire.

It was all so beautiful and wonderful. Just as though science and nature had combined to perform miracles. Estranged husbands and wives were reunited. Sorrowing girls reclaimed the sweethearts who were turning from them.

And now, those who have been benefited, who have known this remarkable woman and her remarkable work for years (some a quarter-century), who have profited through the knowledge and skill of Lorinda James, have banded themselves together into a society, to carry on the good work started by this wonderful woman.

This work is altogether too great for one person to look after successfully, so that the united efforts of our Lorinda James Society are at your command, to give to each woman whose complexion is imperfect, the benefit of this great woman's lifework.

If you have any kind of skin imperfections; blemishes, eruptions, blackheads, freckles, coarse pores, muddiness, sallowness, lack of excess of color, write a postal at once and the full facts will be sent to you FREE.

As Secretary for this "society for the preservation of womanly beauty," I pledge you prompt attention. Simply spend a penny for a postal and tell me you want the facts. Send your name and address today. Don't lay this paper aside until you have written to me. You might lose this announcement. Now is the time to ask for this free information. Address me: Harriet Jean, Secretary of the Lorinda James Society, Suite 207 Times Building, Chicago, Illinois, and I will see that the truth is placed in your possession at once.—ADV.

M. K. T. TEXAS ENGINES EQUIPPED TO FIGHT FIRE

Hose and Pumping Devices Installed Because of Numerous Blazes.

DENISON, Tex., Oct. 4.—The Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad is equipping its locomotives with fire engines. About 150 locomotives in Texas and Oklahoma will be thus equipped and other lines are expecting to follow the example.

The change is made in order to fight fires that break out at stations and along the line, chiefly due to sparks igniting cotton bales piled about station platforms and compresses.

Each locomotive will carry 500 feet of two-ply hose kept on a reel on the tender. Six thousand to 8000 gallons of water will be available in case of fire and pumping devices have been adjusted to the locomotives. Two hundred pounds pressure will be used to force a stream through the hose and the fire department on rails will be quite efficient.

It is believed the system will prevent thousands of dollars damage during each year. In case the train catches fire, the apparatus could be used to extinguish the flames.

MOLASSES FATTENED HOGS

COLUMBUS, Tex., Oct. 4.—The first hogs ever fed and fattened on molasses and cooked Irish potatoes were shipped by W. E. Bridge to Fort Worth a few days ago. There were 20 head in the shipment and many of them were so fat that they were uncomfortable on their feet.

Bridge is experimenting with various hog foods and found the potatoes and molasses more successful than he expected.

TOWN CLOCK STOPS AND EVERYTHING GOES WRONG

Broken Spring Upsets Business Arrangements at the Courthouse square.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Oct. 4.—Everything went wrong in Lafayette's retail district when the big clock in the courthouse tower stopped for the first time in more than a decade. So accustomed have merchants and their customers become to depending on the clock they could not believe their eyes when repeated glances at the dial showed the hands motionless.

Street car conductors and motormen, instead of depending on watches, have been running their cars from the public square on a schedule based on the courthouse clock time and all schedules were upset while the men waited for the clock to indicate the leaving time. Many persons who noticed the time on the clock thought their watches had gone wrong and they went to jewelers to have them repaired.

Abel Field, a negro, has wound the big clock every Sunday for more than 30 years. He did not fail this Sunday, but one of the big springs broke. Clock experts worked an hour before they succeeded in getting the clock going again.

Jusserand Sails for America.

HAVRE, Oct. 4.—The French Ambassador to the United States, Jean Jules Jusserand, sailed for New York today on board the Savoie. He was received in farewell audience on Thursday by President Poincaire.

FOOLISH MULE TIES UP RAILROAD AN HOUR

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 4.—A mule's foolish effort to walk across a railroad trestle in the dark tied up traffic on the Columbia branch and main line of the M., K. & T. Railroad for an hour.

The mule's stunt was staged on the trestle between Columbia and McBain. Before it had gone very far toward the middle, all four legs dropped between the cross ties and its body rested level with the track. The accommodation train came along and concluded not to try to knock the mule off the track, but to remove it. That was an hour's hard work, and meantime the through train at McBain was waiting for the accommodation.

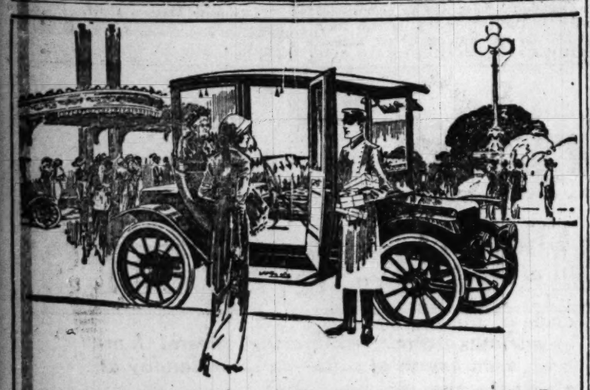
GOVERNMENT EXHIBIT IS SHIPPED TO TULSA

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Oct. 4.—Prof. Lamson Scribner and Martin M. Klien, superintendent of the Federal Department of Agriculture warehouse in this city, have completed the preparation of the Government exhibit at the Tulsa (Okl.) Dry Farming congress and have shipped it West. Klien, who is the exhibit expert of the department, has started West to install the exhibit and to care for it during the congress.

The display is a very thorough illustration of conditions and materials concerning dry land farming. Seeds suitable for use in dry countries; mounted plants, in frames 52 by 72 inches in size; 300 samples of different classes of soils, models of road making machinery, and sections of road work, photographs and transparencies showing methods used in "dry farming," apparatus and maps used by the Weather Bureau are among the exhibits.

The Tulsa congress will be held from Oct. 22 to 24, and at its conclusion the Government exhibits will be shipped to the Land Show in the Coliseum at Chicago.



New Woods Electric Models Are Roomy and Comfortable

See Them at the Auto Show

Every bit of space is utilized to the best advantage in a Woods Electric. The seats are placed to give maximum capacity without crowding—plenty of knee and foot room for all. Of the two forward-drive and two rear-driven models in the Woods line the No. 1334, shown in the above illustration, is one of the very popular ones. Note its graceful lines and roomy interior. Come in and see it at the Auto Show. This car combines the principal advantages of a forward drive, with the obvious points in favor of the car driven from the rear seat. Don't buy an Electric of any make until you have seen this Woods car.

Safety of Control a Big Woods Feature

The most timid woman need not hesitate to drive a Woods Electric. Besides being surprisingly simple, the Woods protects you from your own ignorance—nothing serious can happen through your lack of knowledge or understanding of how to operate the car. The control levers are interlocking—it is impossible to apply the motor brake until the power has been shut off. You simply cannot apply the power again until the motor brake has been released.

Many Refinements on the New Woods Cars

The smaller details that go to make the electric car more attractive and convenient are plentiful in the New Woods Models. Frameless glass windows give a trim appearance and clearer vision—glass in doors is raised or lowered by turning a convenient handle—ampere hour meter shows at all times just how much power is available; simplified lubricating system makes care of car easy; batteries don't require washing or cleaning; meter on charging plug receptacle registers number of charges. These are just a few of the incidental, yet really vital things that make the Woods Electric the choice of hard-to-please people.

Exclusive Factory Branch in St. Louis

A direct factory branch with the equal of factory service is another advantage offered St. Louis owners as an exclusive Woods feature. Don't forget the unequaled record of the Woods for durability and dependability, and this record has been made on its present equipment of puncturelcss, solid rubber tires.

Come to the show and make comparisons. Study the Electric car before you buy—it will save you disappointment later. An interesting educational 4-page folder series, illustrated, "The Why of a Superior Car" mailed on request.

LESS BRAWN FOR ARMY, MORE BRAIN IS PRESENT NEED

Recruiting Officer Declares Recruits Far Below Old Physical Standard.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—America will have to depend more on brains and less on brawn in wars in the immediate future, according to Capt. H. W. Jones of the medical corps of the army, who is located at Jackson Barracks, La. Capt. Jones has been making a study of recruits and he declares they are much below former standards physically. He hopes they have brains to counterbalance this deficiency, but he is not sure about it.

He found from an examination of the records of a large number of recruits that the percentage of strong men applying for enlistment today is 32 per cent, as compared with 57 per cent in 1875. The men considered weak at the present time constitute 43 per cent as against 19 per cent in 1875.

Capt. Jones calls attention to the great decline in the number of foreign-born recruits entering the army, the percentage having dropped from 60 to 9 per cent. Many recruits from the rural districts of Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi are found to be badly fed and under weight.

"We must take these figures cautiously," Capt. Jones added. "I think there is no doubt that we are getting a different type of man in the service today from what we got years ago; he may be just as good, and he may have more brain but he does not seem to have as much brawn. Whether the present-day recruit would last as well under the old conditions of hard frontier service, with sanitary conditions far inferior to those of the present time is hard to say, but I think it doubtful if he would.

The high percentage of strong men from 1876 to 1879 may be due to the fact that recruiting, at least in this part of the country, was not very active then, and the army could pick its men, accepting only the hardiest and best. Finally, I believe further investigation in other parts of the country might tell us whether our standard is really deteriorating or not."

$200,000 IN RUINS OF ST. PAUL UNION STATION

Guard Thrown Around Debris in Hope Strong Box Will Be Found Intact.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 4.—A strong box containing $200,000 is in the ruins of the St. Paul Union Depot, which was destroyed by fire last night. The money had been sent from Seattle and its destination was the United States Treasury. In the hope that the box and its contents will be found intact, a guard was thrown about the still smoldering ruins today to protect it, while searchers raked debris for it.

Trains ran in and out of the train shed, which was hardly touched by the flames, and tickets were sold from makeshift booths.

BRICKLAYERS WON'T JOIN FEDERATION OF LABOR

Despite Vote Not to Affiliate Question May Be Revived at Next Convention.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 4.—Members of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America have voted not to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor, according to announcement made today by William Dobson, general secretary of the union. Out of a membership of 82,351, only 20,351 votes were cast and of these only 7376 were in favor of affiliation.

Secretary Dobson said that in spite of the adverse vote the question probably would be submitted to the international convention next January in Houston, Tex.

JUVENILE WARD RETURNED

Mother Violates Court Order Not to Take Child Away.

Probation Officer John Ossenfort returned yesterday to Clayton from Kentucky with Albert Berg, 12 years old, who had been declared a ward of the Juvenile Court of St. Louis County. Mrs. Mary Berg of Kirkwood, mother of the boy, took Albert and Fred, 10 years old, another son, with her to Kentucky three weeks ago in violation of the order of Judge Wurdeman.

Mrs. Berg was declared unfit to have the custody of her three children. Her oldest child, Cecelia, 14 years old, was taken from her and turned over to Mrs. Sarah Gaines, deputy probation officer. Albert and Fred were temporarily returned to the care of their mother, and the woman was directed not to take the children out of the jurisdiction of the court. The youngest boy refused to return and Ossenfort left him with Mrs. Berg.

DEATH SENTENCE IS COMMUTED TO LIFE TERM

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 4.—Gov. Slayton has commuted the death sentence of Dr. W. J. McNaughton, convicted of poisoning Fred Flanders, to life imprisonment.

McNaughton lived with Mr. and Mrs. Flanders in McNaughton's house at Corena. They boarded him in exchange for house rent. Flanders is said to have shown symptoms of arsenic poisoning, but doctors at the trial disagreed. It was shown that shortly before his death Flanders bought patented pills at a grocery store for a liver complaint. Dr. McNaughton admitted treating Flanders for malaria fever, but denied prescribing arsenic.

NEW $10 COUNTERFEIT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A new counterfeit, a $10 national bank note on the First National Bank of New York, has been discovered by the secret service division of the Treasury Department.

It is a photographic reproduction on fair quality paper without silk threads or imitation of them. Coloring matter has been applied to the treasury and bank numbers and to the green panel on the back of the note.

THIN PEOPLE CAN INCREASE WEIGHT

Thin man and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fatty nutrients and elements of what you eat into rich, ripe, fat-producing nourishment for the tissues and blood. Sargol is in no sense a patent medicine, but is composed of the carefully assimilated fatty elements which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body to waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive.

Judge & Dolph, Weipert Drug Co., Rabotean, Wolf-Wilson Co., Johnson Drug and other leading druggists sell it in large boxes—forty tablets in each—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.—ADV.

McCHESNEY IS LIKE MAN INVITED TO OWN FUNERAL

Tells Attorney That Terminal Paid All, Not Part, of Expense for New Viaduct.

President W. S. McChesney Jr. of the Terminal Railroad Association, feels like the man who was invited to his own funeral since an official of a North End civic organization invited him to be a guest at the laying of a corner stone for the Union avenue viaduct.

Christy M. Farrar, an attorney representing the Affiliated Improvement Associations of Northwest St. Louis, wrote McChesney: "I believe that your company is bearing a part of the expense of this structure, and we therefore wish to invite you and any of your company interested to be present at these exercises."

Upon receipt of the invitation, McChesney found that a previous engagement for the day, Oct. 18, would not permit his attendance, and in his letter of declination took occasion to say:

"I note you say you believe this company is bearing a part of the expense of this structure. If you were better informed you would know that this company is bearing the entire cost of the construction of the viaduct."

LAST OF THREE MEN ON HUNGER STRIKE GIVES UP

One Kansas City Prisoner Held Out Five Days, Another Seven and Another Eight.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 4.—The last of three men who went on a hunger strike eight days ago rather than work on the rock pile to which Judge Latshaw of the Criminal Court sentenced them for petty larceny, gave in today. All are breaking rock, now, having admitted to the court that they are very fond of work—and food.

Joseph Carney, the last to surrender to hunger, was founder of the starvation squad. A week ago yesterday when he, Sterling Price and Russell Welch were sentenced and put to work Carney told the others he did not see why the system used by suffragettes in England wouldn't work in Missouri. Price and Welch didn't see either, so the three renounced food.

"We'll rot in jail before we either work or eat," Carney told the guards. The strikers were confined in cells on a diet of distilled water. Welch called for meat and work in five days. Price lasted seven and Carney eight.

Clean, cozy rooms in private families or in rooming houses with congenial people are readily found through Post-Dispatch wants—which prints more of such wants than two and often more than three of its competitors combined.

IGNORED IN WILL, HUSBAND SUES FOR HALF OF ESTATE

Henry Claggett, a Policeman, Gets an Allowance of $400 for Immediate Expense.

HE HAD ASKED DIVORCE

If His Demand Obtains, Bequests to Churches and Friends Will Be Set Aside.

Henry Claggett of 6226 Columbia Bottom road, a policeman, is suing for one-half of the $20,000 estate of his wife, Maria Jocelyn Claggett, who died Aug. 6 at her home, 4126 Arsenal street. Because she did not mention him in the will, he contends it is not legal and that under the law he is entitled to $15,000. Probate Judge Holtcamp Friday issued an order that the executor pay to Claggett $400 from the estate for immediate needs.

The Claggetts had no children and Mrs. Claggett bequeathed her estate, which was the property of her first husband, the late Dr. D. I. Jocelyn, to distant relatives, friends and religious institutions. Charles E. Bradley, her realty agent, was given 20 shares of stock in the Louisa Real Estate and Investment Co.

If Claggett wins his suit, Mrs. Claggett's property will be as though she died intestate. Consequently the other half of the property would go to Mrs. Claggett's legal heirs.

The Claggetts were married about three years ago and separated last February. Claggett was suing for divorce at the time of his wife's death. He explained to the Probate Judge that the separation was caused by her refusing to close a real estate trade she had agreed to make. This started a quarrel and ended in her telling him to leave the house, he said.

Some of the beneficiaries under the will are the Clifton Heights Presbyterian Church and Home Missionary Society, $1000 each; Bethesda Orphans' Home, $3000; Miss Evelyn Burnett and May and Emma Eals, all friends of the testatrix, $1000 each. Counsel for these heirs contend that Claggett and his wife entered into an ante-nuptial contract by which they disposed of their rights in each other's property.

PIANO SALE PUT ON CO-OPERATIVE PLAN

Conroy Co. Offers Bargains and Guarantee With Each Instrument Sold.

P. E. Conroy, president of the Conroy Piano Co., 1100 Olive street, after selecting numerous pianos and player-pianos at the manufacturers' factory has established a special sale of the instruments under a personal guarantee. Each instrument is tested by Charles Galloway, conductor of the Apollo and Morning Choral clubs. Over his own signature Mr. Conroy declares that every purchaser of a piano or player-piano will save more than $100 in the purchase price, and at the same time have such a good instrument that he is willing to risk the personal guarantee that he gives.

"The piano is right," he says; "it is a good, honest piano. The person who buys the same piano from anyone else for $350 gets the worth of his or her money. I know this from my own experience. The manufacturers of these pianos are shipping 20,000 a year to all parts of the world, only because they try to make an instrument that will last a lifetime."

Mr. Conroy declares that in this deal he has great personal pride, for the reason that by the co-operative sale he will make everlasting friends for his company.

The co-operative sale consists of 100 new pianos and 50 new player-pianos. The value of the piano is $350 and the player-piano $550.

The co-operative price under this sale is $248.75 for the piano and $395 for the player-piano. In the terms of the sale there is no interest added to the purchasing price. These are the terms: You pay $5 as an initial payment—then $1.25 per week, if you select the piano—or $2 a week, if you select the player-piano—giving you 195 weeks' time in which to pay, and then the instrument purchased will be delivered at once or later, just as you wish. The weekly payments begin at the time of the delivery of the instrument. Mr. Conroy declares that every instrument is guaranteed without reserve for five years in a joint guarantee (by the manufacturers, Marshall & Wendell, as well as the Conroy company).

To emphasize this fact the Conroy Piano Co. offers money returned after a 30 days' trial, in case the purchaser changes his or her mind. According to the co-operative sales plan, if the piano is satisfactory after 30 days in the home of the purchaser 11 months more are allowed to test out the instrument. At the end of the year the buyer may exchange the piano or player-piano for any other make of equal or greater value that the Conroy company sells without a penny's loss. In case of death during the life of the contract a receipt in full will be given for all remaining unpaid payments. All pianos will be tuned twice without cost and a stool and scarf go with each purchase free of charge.

Relief for Irrigation Obligations.

BEERFIELD, Kan., Oct. 4.—Senator Thompson has introduced a bill into Congress for the relief of the farmers of this section whose lands are obligated by the defunct Finney County Water Users' Association. This scheme promised sufficient water for 10,000 acres, but after operating in 1908 and 1909 was given up. An obligation of $300,000 remains as a lien on the lands.

SCALP TROUBLE FOR OVER TEN YEARS

Small Bunches on Scalp. Itched. Formed Scale. Hair Came Out. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured in Two Months.

263 Harrison St., Elyria, Ohio.—"My case was a scalp trouble. I first noticed small bunches on my scalp which commenced to itch and I would scratch them and in time they got larger, forming a scale or scab with a little pus, and chunks of hair would come out when I would scratch them off. It caused me to lose most of my hair. It became thin and dry and lifeless. I was troubled for over ten years with it until it got so bad I was ashamed to go to a barber to get my hair cut.

"I tried everything I could get hold of, ——— and ———, but received no cure until I commenced using Cuticura Soap and Ointment when the scale commenced to disappear. The way I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment was to wash my scalp twice a day with warm water and Cuticura Soap and rub on the Cuticura Ointment. I received benefit in a couple of weeks and was cured in two months." (Signed) F. J. Busher, Jan. 28, 1913.

Why not have a clear skin, soft white hands, a clean scalp and good hair? It is your birthright. Cuticura Soap with an occasional use of Cuticura Ointment will bring about these coveted conditions in most cases when all else fails. Sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

"St. Louis Should Issue Bonds for Things It Needs"

years, and will then be the city property, with no cost except for maintenance. The Washington subway, which caused heavy damages by running through the basements of some large buildings, will take longer to pay for, but it is paying for itself, too."

In his talks earlier in the day, Fitzgerald emphasized the "spend money" idea. When I saw him at Union Station, shortly before his train departed for Kansas City, he had had an afternoon of seeing St. Louis and of talking with Mayor Kiel and other St. Louisans. And his chief theme, in so much of an interview as I could get between handshakings and ticket inquiries, was "eliminate partisanship."

I had read of Fitzgerald as a survivor, under a reformed city government, of an old political machine. For this reason, I was surprised to hear him, at the City Club, tell briefly how much better off Boston was without old-time politics in its city government. I asked him about this.

"The new Boston charter was the point where I quit my old political friends," he replied. "I was for it, and most of them were against it. After the new charter was adopted, a part of the independent element was against me, because I had been so active in politics before. Also, a lot of my old supporters were for me on my political record.

"But there is no politics to speak of in the Boston city government now, and my successor will be chosen next year with no party caption on the ballot.

Spoils System Eliminated.

As a Democrat, I get but a limited chance to favor Democrats in matters of appointment. My advice for promotions and appointments is limited by civil service lists, and while a Mayor could sometimes favor a partisan in a choice between two or three eligibles, the old patronage system is gone.

"The Commissioner of Public Works, who gets $9500 a year, was appointed by me on my return from Panama last winter, when I had never met him and didn't know his politics, on his record of professional efficiency.

"Even our city laborers—we pay them $2 and $2.50 a day—are under civil service rules. I learn that you get your street cleaners much cheaper—so cheap, in fact, that the jobs have very limited political value.

"I have had the unusual experience of being Mayor under the old system and the new. And I know the difference between getting things done with a big partisan Council and with our present board of nine men.

"Instead of political dickering with the legislative leaders, all I have to do now is to meet with the nine members of the board and put through the things that the city needs to have done. I can veto any of their acts, and they can't pass them over my veto, even unanimously. If I don't behave, there is the recall. I haven't been recalled.

"I would seriously advise St. Louis to cut down its governing body to the size of its present City Council, and make such offices as City Auditor, Treasurer, Collector and Assessor appointive, as they are in Boston. With a little experience of this kind of city government, the city would be more willing to authorize bond issues."

Some of Fitzgerald's hearers at the City Club thought he did not give St. Louis enough credit for progressiveness. But no one could deny that he was highly considerate in speaking of relative population.

Population Comparisons.

Mayor Kiel, speaking just before him, said St. Louis exceeded Boston by 17,000 in the 1910 census, and added that this city must hustle if it is to stay in fourth place.

In Boston, the usual retort to any remark about St. Louis' lead in the census figures is given by pointing to the thickly populated suburbs pressing on the city's narrow limits, and then alluding to the smaller population of the semi-detached western suburbs of St. Louis. This is a tolerably good argument, so long as East St. Louis and Granite City, which St. Louis can't annex, are not figured against Cambridge, Quincy, Newton and Brookline, which Boston could perhaps annex, but doesn't.

Fitzgerald mentioned this argument just enough to show that he was familiar with it, but he was so kind as not to bear down on it. Instead of dwelling on the size of Boston suburbs, and their virtual identity with the city, he told how Boston takes its suburbs into partnership in running its sewers, lights and waterworks, each suburb paying a percentage of the whole cost of maintenance.

Yet he is no thick-and-thin champion of municipal ownership, for after having driven about St. Louis after dark, he admitted that perhaps our lighting system, which is privately owned, is as good as Boston's, or better. As to street paving, also, he did not claim superiority for his own city. I refrained from asking him about a street in Boston which is in such condition that the jocose conductor of a seeing-Boston automobile regularly announces to his passengers:

"This street is paved every 50 years, whether it needs it or not. It is now on its forty-ninth year."

During his afternoon's ride, too, the Boston Mayor came to appreciate our parks more than he did in his earlier talk. He did not find any local counterpart to Boston Common, but he did learn that some of the residence district parks were gifts to the city, and he had honeyed words for the donors, and for a city which had such liberal citizens.

Approves Free Bridge Idea.

THE free bridge was an object of interest to him from the moment of his arrival. In the morning he rode out on Eads Bridge in an automobile to get a better look at it. As he was here but for a day, no one undertook to tell him the history of the bridge or the multiplied reasons why it has not been finished. But he grasped its purpose neatly and completely, and joined in the spirit of that purpose when, in his speech, he called contentious old Samuel Adams (the Frank H. Gerhart of revolutionary days) to rise from his grave and lead a revolt against the idea of bridge monopoly and bridge tolls.

Civic pride, he said, should compel St. Louis to finish the bridge without further delay, if only to put a stop to nation-wide ridicule.

City clubs are Fitzgerald's hobby. He likes the St. Louis one, but thinks it should double its membership and have ample club quarters, with gymnasium, billiards and bowling. Boston's City Club has a $500,000 building under way and has 3500 members, with a merger under way which will increase the number to 5000.

With all that he did and said in the most noticed day's visit that anyone has made to St. Louis in a number of years, Fitzgerald did not have the time or the occasion to sing the two ditties which made his political reputation and give him his saccharine nickname. He was too busy talking pure and applied civics to warble "Honey Boy" or "Sweet Adeline." Those who have heard these solos say that everyone ought to hear them—once. Therefore——

Come again, "Honey Fitz."

WALNUT PARK DISTRICT WILL GET MORE CARS

Kiel Will Issue Permit for Track on Florissant From Bernays to Robin.

A permit authorizing the United Railways Co. to lay a track on Florissant avenue, from Bernays to Robin avenue, will be issued by Mayor Kiel tomorrow, he told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

The permit will be issued at the request of the citizens of the Walnut Park district, who have been complaining for years that they could not get adequate street car facilities. A single line of track has been laid in the street, but a double track is wanted, so that Bellefontaine cars may be operated to Robin avenue.

President McCulloch of the United Railways Co. has promised to have the track placed if a permit is granted. Mayor Kiel said he had been advised it was legally wrong to grant the permit, but believed it was morally right, so that the people of the district could have proper transportation service during the winter months.

WHY ARE Nemo Corsets A BOON TO WOMAN KIND?

TRIPLE-STRIP

THEY GUARD YOUR FIGURE, HEALTH & PURSE

NEMO HYGIENIC FASHION INSTITUTE

When You Buy a Nemo! Be Sure You Get a Nemo!

ONCE more we are compelled to sound a note of WARNING. Unscrupulous manufacturers still persist in trying to palm off, upon the unwary, VASTLY INFERIOR IMITATIONS of Nemo features and fabrics—spurious "supporting" and "reducing corsets," elastics that rip—in the hope that you won't know the difference. Original Nemo inventions and trade-marks—even our "ads" and illustrations—are copied, with the obvious intent to deceive you.

BE A WISE WOMAN! Don't fall into the trap! If you seek genuine Nemo style and comfort, REFUSE all corsets that do not bear the trade-marks "NEMO" and "LASTIKOPS."

You should strongly RESENT all attempts to sell you imitations of the Nemo, for such an attempt is nothing less than an attack upon your health, your figure and your purse.

Here's a Good Example —of the Nemo features which are being imitated at the expense of your comfort and style:

No. 512—The newest LASTIKOPS Corset, for extreme and comfortable reduction below the waist. Very low bust, with Nemo "bridge"—front steels won't "dig in" above the waist-line. Skirt—extra-long; semi-elastic bands of Lastikops Webbing reduce hips and thighs; Lasticurve-Back, of semi-elastic Lastikops Cloth. The triple reduction when you stand, gives triple expansion when you sit. And the elastics stay elastic. Finest white coutil; sizes 20 to 30..... $5

LASTICURVE-BACK LIMSHAPING

This corset will OUTWEAR any three corsets made with the same old unreliable elastics that are used in all imitations of the Nemo.

Preserve your figures; guard your health and your purse. Ask for the Nemo—and GET it. For all figures—$3.00 up.

Nemo $5.00 No 512

Bulletin No. 35

A toadstool looks like a mushroom; but it is very different—you die!

What's that?

You "didn't know there was any difference in elastics?"

Well, that's not our fault. We've spent thousands of dollars trying to make you understand that the patented Nemo semi-elastic fabrics, Lastikops Webbing and Cloth, are the only elastics in existence that don't "give out."

The Next Time

—you buy a corset made with elastic gores or bands, look for the trade-mark LASTIKOPS. If you don't find it, don't buy the corset.

That trade-mark is your only safeguard against the ordinary old-style elastics that are being used in imitation of the genuine Nemo.

Be a Wise Woman!

Avoid Toadstools. See that your dealer shows you a real Nemo when you ask for it.

Montenegrin Army Remobilized.

CETTINJE, Oct. 4.—A partial remobilization of the Montenegrin army was ordered today by a royal proclamation. The document says the step has been taken "in consequence of events transpiring on our eastern frontier."

Check the Symptoms of Lung Trouble

One of the many reasons why Lung Trouble is so difficult to fight is because the disease is often of a very flattering nature. The patient may look well, but in reality is fast losing strength by continued night sweats, fever and cough. These symptoms should be checked as quickly as possible. Eckman's Alterative is beneficial in checking fever and night sweats, and it has brought about many complete recoveries. Read this case:

205 W. 25th St., New York.

"Gentlemen—I am writing you this testimonial that others may know what your Alterative has done for me. Since I was a very young woman I was a sufferer from Bronchitis. I tried doctor after doctor, getting little or no benefit. Finally I had night sweats, weak spells and lost rapidly in weight, and my doctor told me if they were not checked I would have Lung Trouble. Miss Mary Korhamer, who is a friend of mine, recovered after taking your Alterative and insisted that I try it. I am now, after two years, perfectly well, strong and healthy."

(Affidavit.) MRS. ROSA VOELPEL.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by Rabotean Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S ART WORK IS ON VIEW AT MUSEUM

This Is One of Three Interesting Special Exhibits for Festival Week.

By F. E. A. CURLEY,
Curator of the City Art Museum.

Among the features of the many St. Louis attractions for fall festivities visitors will be the special exhibitions at the City Art Museum in Forest Park. These important collections will afford thousands who have some acquaintance with art the opportunity to get in touch with the world's present trend and especially with the achievements of our own countrymen, in this important field.

The Art Museum, despite some little difficulty of access due to its sequestered situation, is one of the high places in St. Louis for sojourners in this city, whether from New York and other Eastern centers, or the mountains and plains of the Southwest, or from Europe. A gratifying and, it is fair to add, a most appreciative proportion of the museum's attendance, month in and month out, is made up on these visitors to St. Louis.

The permanent collection of the museum, installed in more than thirty galleries, contain a wealth of material for the student and many works of art that become more appreciated as familiarity grows. For many, especially those who have not frequently visited the museum, the interest in these varied permanent installations outweighs that of any transient exhibitions.

Three noteworthy exhibitions at present installed in the west wing of the building, however, are especially valuable and instructive.

Public Schools' Art Exhibition.

It is not amiss to mention first the collection of several hundred pictures and works of applied design made by pupils in the public schools of this city. This collection well advertises St. Louis' school system, it is true, and reminds us that this city many years ago took the lead among American municipalities in developing the study of art and nature as a part of our public educational system. But this collection has a broader significance for visitors to the museum. It suggests to the thinking observer the fact that a public well grounded in the elements of art appreciation will soon be an actuality in this city and in American life. And it will give many visitors the opportunity to take back with them valuable suggestions for their own localities.

The examples in this school exhibition represent the work of the St. Louis schools for the past year, under the supervision of Superintendent of Art Instruction Miss Mary B O'Rielly. Each grade and class in the public schools is represented, from the kindergarten to the high school, and not the least interesting part of the collection are the objects made by the pupils of the Manual Training School and high schools out of wood, metal, leather, clay and other material. The system of art instruction adopted in the schools teaches the hand as well as the eye and brings out the faculties of the pupil in practical and useful ways.

American Painters' Exhibition.

The newest of the Museum's exhibitions is "The Eighth Annual Exhibition of Selected Paintings by American Artists." It is the eighth such collections shown in the Forest Park Art Building, which the Museum inherited from the World's Fair. It contains 129 paintings, by about 100 artists. These pictures are very diversified in subject and treatment and represent many artistic points of view. They show that American art is Cosmopolitan and in full touch with the world's art movements of the day.

From fashionable portraits to the "advanced" composition of dramatic realism or the landscape that interprets nature with the most modern vividness and force, everywhere in the collection there is expressiveness and vigor. One sees that the contemporary American painter is well instructed in his art, and knows it, and has little hesitancy in setting forth his point of view. There are many interesting and some beautiful pictures and there are some that will open the eyes of many visitors to new aspects of nature herself.

Some of the strong landscapes in this collection are "Cloud Shadow, Spuyten Duyvel," by Ernest Lawson; "Moon-Rise—Winter," by Horatio Walker; "The Mississippi Below Minneapolis," by Phillip Little; "The Land of Plenty," by George Inness; "September Fields," by Daniel Garber; "October Close," by Ben Foster; "Winter Evening," by Gardner Symons. The latter is a striking effect of afterglow on snowclad landscape and reflective water.

In portraits and figure compositions, the collection is strong. Two remarkable pictures are by Leopold Gould Seyffert, a Philadelphia artist. One is a portrait of Leopold Stowkowski, the Philadelphia orchestra conductor. This is a very characterful portrayal, with unusual color composition. Still more out of the ordinary is this artist's picture called "Tired Out." The color seems intensely barbarous, but its arrangement is clever and the modeling of the figure shows strong talent. The picture is of a woman with a coffee mill in her lap and will remind many visitors of the post-Impressionists' exhibition that didn't come to St. Louis, but has been exemplified in many illustrations in the press and aroused stern criticisms of "advanced" art from conservative painters and critics.

Loan Collection Remains.

The other important exhibition now at the museum is the loan collection of "Paintings owned in St. Louis." This contains some masterpieces of American and foreign art, and many instructive and beautiful pictures—40 in all. As it is the third collection of the series, started by the City Art Museum in 1911, and as no picture has been shown twice in these exhibitions, it will be seen that St. Louis is a city with many citizens interested in art and able to indulge a cultivated taste.

In this year's exhibit, such old masters as Sir Joshua Reynolds, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Sir Henry Raeburn and George Romney, Jakob Ruisdael and Gindo Reni, and such modern masters as J. M. W. Turner, Corot, Troyon, Dupre, Diaz, Jacque, Shermitte, Israels, Mauve, Lenbach, Fortuny, Sorolla and Zoru are strongly represented.

The art museum publishes catalogues of these exhibitions which give visitors a great deal of information about the works and the artists who painted them.

The city art museum is open to the public every day in the year, and free at all times. The hours are from 10 o'clock in the morning to 5 p. m.

Rauch & Lang Announces

The Worm Drive

The World's Finest and Latest Electric

You who miss a Worm Drive demonstration are missing the latest and greatest of all improvements in electrics. You can get it in only one car today—the newest Rauch & Lang. Worm Drive means a straight pull on the rear axle. It means more power, silence, and wonderfully increased durability. It permits better rear spring action. No other car rides so comfortably as the Rauch & Lang Worm Drive car. No other drive needs so little attention. Thousands of American cars will come to this method of propulsion. You can have it now in the new Rauch & Lang.

A Proven Advancement

The engineers of the Rauch & Lang Company have been experimenting for years with worm drives of different kinds. Their task was comparatively easy, as they had already mastered the motor problem and needed only an efficient and properly built worm to complete an arrangement that would prove scientifically correct. That has been done in the new Rauch & Lang.

The type of light weight, high-speed motor which has been in use by the Rauch & Lang Company ever since it began building electrics did not have to be redesigned, because it possessed all of the elements sought in a motor for such a vehicle. The engineers have produced in the Rauch & Lang the perfect combination. The man well informed in mechanics will become enthusiastic at sight of it. This drive is a work of art in mechanics—both as to design and manufacture. Nothing finer has ever been offered the public, and this is saying much when the perfection of the Rauch & Lang bevel gear is taken into consideration.

Always a Fully Developed Car

No better chain-driven cars were manufactured than the chain-driven Rauch & Lang. No better bevel gears—even gear manufacturers emphasize this—have been built than are offered in Rauch & Lang Cars. And now no better worm-driven mechanism can be offered than is present in the Rauch & Lang Worm Drive. It is efficient and powerful. It is such a great step in the improvement of propelling mechanism that it merits the consideration of everyone in the market for a car. Its pulling power is tremendous and, with the motor, will stand a three hundred and fifty per cent overload strain. The combination of the Rauch & Lang Motor and the worm drive is absolutely silent—needs no adjusting and practically no attention.

The Utmost in Comfort and Flexibility

Rauch & Lang Cars have always been known for their luxurious riding qualities, but the new worm drive construction has permitted the use of springs of even greater flexibility, amply powerful to care for every riding shock or jar. With one passenger or five, the riding qualities are the same—soft and flexible. You must ride in this car to appreciate it. It is the most resilient, best-designed spring suspension ever invented. Investigate the new Rauch & Lang Worm Drive Car if you want to ride in the most perfect electric ever manufactured. It will give you a new idea regarding the electric car—a new angle which previously has not been presented to you. A high-speed motor with just one reduction—two universal joints and a clever device to care for twists and strains between motor and rear axle system makes the Rauch & Lang Electric the most wonderfully flexible car ever built.

Passengers Face Forward

Three Types of Control: (1) Driven from Front Seat. (2) Driven from Rear Seat. (3) Combination, Driven from Front or Rear Seat.

In addition to the improved propelling mechanism, a car allowing all passengers to face forward is offered, which is perfection itself. It can be driven from either the front or the rear seat, with the same ease. With one or two passengers, the elegance and dignity of the electric car is preserved by allowing it to be driven from the rear seat. In carrying four or five passengers, the car can be driven from the forward seat. These drives have been very skilfully and ingeniously interlocked so that when driving from either position the other controlling and braking mechanism is thrown out of action. The forward driver's seat revolves, but it is impossible to operate the car from it unless it be locked forward in proper position for driving. This arrangement is the neatest, cleverest and newest in the Electric field. Protection is afforded from every angle. You cannot make other than the proper movements to drive the car. In this arrangement the point of safety alone is worth the difference in price you would be asked to pay between a Rauch & Lang and any other make of car. Each feature and point is covered by patents. The new Rauch & Lang Worm Drive car with double controlled driving mechanism is the last word in Electrics. It is so far in advance of other makes that comparison is out of the question. Arrange by letter, or telephone, for a demonstration.

THE "JUST AS GOOD" KIND A FAILURE ALIKE TO BUYER AND SELLER

HERPICIDE

Miss Daisy Hight, Box 223, Perry, N. Y., in a recent letter to the Herpicide Co., says: "I have used your hair remedy, Herpicide, and prefer it to any other, but the druggists here have other hair tonics they want to sell, and it is hard to get Herpicide when I want it. One druggist got me to try ——, but it is not as good as Herpicide. I would like to buy your Herpicide in larger quantities direct from the company if you will send it to me."

It is the same old story. The dealer in his greed for a few extra pennies induces the customer to buy something else—result—the customer loses the money and the dealer loses the customer. Whenever a dealer suggests a substitute for some standard article the safest thing to do is to walk out of the store.

Fortunately there are but few dealers like those described in Miss Hight's letter. The dealer who tries to sell you an off brand when you ask for Newbro's Herpicide thinks more of a dime than of the real good of his customer.

Newbro's Herpicide is compounded in harmony with the germ theory of dandruff. It is put up in 50-cent and $1.00 sizes and is guaranteed to satisfy. If troubled with dandruff, falling hair or itching scalp, the benefits to be derived from the intelligent use of Newbro's Herpicide are frequently of an astonishing nature.

Your money refunded if the condition of your hair and scalp is not improved by the first bottle. Herpicide does what it promises to do and what it promises to do. There is no logic in forcing the "just as good" kind when the genuine is no more.

Upon receipt of ten cents in postage or silver the Herpicide Co., Dept. D, Detroit, Mich., will send you a trial-size bottle of Herpicide and a booklet on the care of the hair to any address. Sold everywhere. Applied three times at the better barber shops and beauty parlors. For sale at all drug and department stores.

LOUIS MANN WITH NEW PLAY COMES NOW TO SHUBERT

"BUSY IZZY" AMERICAN

Clyde Fitch Comedy, Melodrama, Vaudeville and Burlesque at Other Playhouses.

LOUIS MANN in "Children of Today." Shubert. A new play by Clara Lipman and Samuel Shipman, its leading character being one George Raimond, the kindly and old-fashioned stepfather of two young folks inoculated with the virus of the modern creed of limitless personal freedom.

The mother of the two would-be Bohemians has married Raimond against their wishes. The son and daughter have installed two liberty-preaching adventurers in the home, but the stepfather has wise views of his own concerning the duty of children to their parents and his firmness in opposing the adventurers precipitates a clash that ends with the young folks setting up an establishment of their own under the guidance of their questionable mentors, a man and a woman. They are about to wreck their lives utterly by fleeing to Europe with these worthies when it is discovered, happily, that the two adventurers have been secretly married and the stepfather saves the children from impending shame, finally winning their love and being voted the best of fathers.

Louis Mann in this role is said to do admirably effective work, and his support includes Emily Ann Wellman as leading lady, Margaret Templeton, Adolphi Foveri, Charles Balsar, John Hines and Maud Turner Gordon.

ROSE STAHL in "Maggie Pepper." Olympic. Return engagement of Charles Klein's successful play of life in a great department store.

The title role of Miss Stahl's playing is that of a lovable and forceful young woman who has risen from the position of a cash girl to that of buyer for a mammoth shopping emporium and whose character presents a delightful blend of the humorous and the wholesomely emotional. The main thread of the story concerns the romance of Maggie Pepper's own life, but there are also several minor episodes of much dramatic value in their degree and the play's incidents and people are finely true to their environment.

The supporting company includes John S. Robertson, Eleanor Blanchard, Max Reynolds, Adelle Adams, Percival T. Moore, Lillian Claire, Helen Dahl and others.

GEORGE SIDNEY in "Busy Izzy." American. New musical play written around familiar and popular Hebrew role treated with humor devoid of any touch of ridicule. The piece is said to be rich in fun and melody. The star's supporting company is headed by Carrie Webber and includes Dick Hume, Nick Basil, John Magee, Eddie Parks, Floriane de So Rel and a large chorus.

Next week, "Life's Shop Window."

"MUMMY AND HUMMING BIRD." Marguerite Clark. Stock company presentation of Clyde Fitch comedy. William A. Morse, leading man, is cast as Lord Lumley, the part created by John Drew; Miss Belle Barchus as the neglected wife, Russell Snoad as the "Humming Bird," and Philip Sheffield as the organ grinder, in which role Lionel Barrymore scored a memorable success. The play's story tells of a woman who marries a man because she admires his intellectual power, of how she is tempted by the "Humming Bird's" song of sinful love, and of how the latter is foiled by an Italian organ grinder whose sister he had wronged.

"GIRL OF THE MOUNTAINS." La Salle. A four-act society melodrama with a pretty love story, some gripping situations and much good comedy. It is announced that the play will be presented by an exceptionally strong company and with impressive scenic settings.

VAUDEVILLE. Columbia. Bill headed by Lillian Lorraine, long a feature of the "Ziegfeld Follies," in new songs and some marvelous Parisian gowns. Other features are Ed F. Reynard, ventriloquist, in "A Mornin' in Hicksville;" The Castillians, in living poses of world-famous classic art studies; the Five Sullys, in "The Information Bureau," a combination of singing, dancing, talking and gymnastics; Fred Watson and Rena Santos, in songs, dances and stories; George P. Moore and Florence Elliott in "A Baby Grand," a comedy sketch; Helen Trix, the "pianosongwhistleress;" the Carson Brothers, Swedish athletes and handbalancers, and first-run Pathe Weekly pictures.

VAUDEVILLE. Hippodrome. Bill headed by Tillie Zick, danseuse, star pupil of Velini of La Scala, Milan, a 19-year-old girl who is expected to rival Genee, Ruth St. Denis and Mlle. Dazie. Other features are Powers' Elephants, now in their second week; the Heidelberg Four, singers and dancers; Martini and Troise, singers and dancers; Haas Brothers, horizontal bar artists; Ila Grannon, singing comedienne; Pierce and Roslyn, comedy musicians; Josephine, wire artist; Artusa, hand-balancer, and three other acts, including new photoplays.

VAUDEVILLE. Grand Opera House. Bill headed by Tim McMahon's Pullman Porter Maids in spectacular musical features, including a grand finale showing the "Banner Blue Special" coming in through the night with all signals set and lighted. Other features are Paul Porter and Alice Sullivan, in a pictorial pastoral; Del Adelphia, master magician, with five assistants, presenting his $10,000 mysteries; Laypore and Benjamin, in "Flipping the Flops;" Sandberg and Lee, in "The Maid From Tarrytown;" Kichi Asaki, in juggling and water-swinging on roller skates; Stross and Becker, in a novelty musical act; Miss Signa, Swedish comedienne; Thompson and Barry, comedy singers and dancers, and new kinemacolor views.

PHOTOPLAYS. New Grand Central. Today only, "The Mystery of the Silver Skull." Monday, bill headed by a three-reel play entitled "Conscience Fizzed." Thursday, Friday and Saturday, "Two Mothers" (Patheplay), is the topliner. Pathe Weekly and a singing quartet composed of Messrs. Smith, Fleming, Niedringhaus and Meyer at each performance.

The most authentic New York triumph of the past two weeks seems to have been scored by "Seven Keys to Baldpate," the George M. Cohan dramatization of Earl Derr Biggers' clever satire of rampant melodrama, which now is playing to crowded houses at the Astor Theater with every likelihood of achieving an all-season run.

Wallace Eddinger as Magee, the rapid-fire novelist whose wager that he can write a "best seller" in 24 hours constitutes the basis of the play's story, is the featured figure of the offering and is credited with admirable work in the creating of bogus "thrills" and in sustaining the good comedy of which there is a plentiful supply. All the play's mysterious and pulse-quickening incidents, following Magee's retirement, alone, to Baldpate Inn for the purpose of "grinding out" his made-while-you-wait novel, are in reality the action of the novel itself, visualized to the audience after the author has seated himself at his trusty typewriter and begun pounding the keys. But it is not until nearly the close of the story that the audience learns this diverting truth and, in the meantime, there has been any amount of excitement and breezy fun. Grafters, gun-men, actors, blackmailers, police, a baffling hermit, a truly terrific villain, an uncommonly abhorrent adventuress and the loveliest of heroines appear during the progress of the play, the dramatic interest being of breathless intensity. The piece is described as "melodrama gone mad" and all New York is laughing at the rich humor of it.

The company in support of Wallace Eddinger includes Gail Kane, Margaret Greene, Martin Allsop, Carleton Macy, Claude Brooks, Roy Fairchilds, Parnell Pratt and others. Several individual hits of especial note are reported.

"The Escape," a new play by Paul Armstrong, recently received its premiere production at the Lyric Theater in New York, and is characterized as a futile drama attempting to discuss the problem of eugenics with a weak story teaching that children should not be bred in the squalid tenements of a great city.

Catherine Calvert has the role of a girl of the slums who escapes from her hapless environment by desperately accepting the "protection" of a dissolute Senator smitten by her beauty. This Senator establishes the girl in luxurious up-town quarters, but, as Playwright Armstrong seems to think, she ultimately gets a clean bill of health by becoming a trained nurse and devoting herself to the service of suffering humanity. In this new aspect, as a matter of course, she wins the love of an earnest young doctor through whom much of the play's preachment is voiced, and the chiming of their wedding bells, figuratively speaking, is in the air at the play's happy finish. A particularly melodramatic incident in Paul Armstrongs' most characteristic vein is encountered in the murder of the brutish Senator by the heroine's brother, whose homicidal mania is shown to have been due to the cracking of his skull by his drink-debased father some years earlier.

Among the musical comedy successes of the past fortnight the most notable perhaps is "The Marriage Market," a big London hit of last season, which now is at the Knickerbocker Theater in New York with Donald Brian again waltzing himself into popular favor, supported by a company of which Carroll McComas, Moya Mannering, Venita Fitzhugh of St. Louis and Cissie Sewell are the leading feminine contingent. The "waltz incarnate" is said to return in this piece, for which Victor Jacobs has composed music that is described as being "nice, soothing, and with plenty of melody." The play's plot is based upon an old Spanish-Californian custom of having an annual auction sale of brides, open to all comers with money enough to outbid competitors for the girl of their liking, and the cast comprises a young globe-trotting English nobleman, cowboys, Spanish maidens, an American heiress and other characters more or less familiar and consonial to such pieces. Donald Brian has the part of a cowboy, nicely tailor-made; Venita Fitzhugh is his singing partner, and the inevitable waltz is danced with Cissie Sewell, who here achieves her one triumph of the performance. Percival Knight in the role of the young Englishman has all the best of the play's comedy lines and situations and is said to be genuinely amusing in spite of a make-up so exaggerated as seriously to imperil his success as a comedian of quite sincere fun-making powers. Carroll McComas is asserted to be at all times delightful, her singing and whistling making one of the big hits of the production.

"Shadowed" is the title of a new detective play in the making of which two English playwrights, Dion Clayton Calthrop and Cosmo Gordon Lennox, worked in collaboration, and which was recently produced at the Fulton Theater in the metropolis and promptly labeled as "a four-act disappointment" of much discredit to the authors.

The play's story, said to be very vague and unconvincing, concerns the operations of a certain gang of American safeblowers in England, these crooks invading London and communicating with one another by means of a marvelously cryptic cipher-code that baffles all attempts at its understanding by outsiders. John Rand, the play's hero, makes the discovery that the key to this cipher is hidden in an ingenious placing of postcards here and there between the pages of a volume of Marcus Aurelius, this ancient book's reading matter also supplying certain otherwise "missing links" in the cipher. Shadowed by the American crooks while he is engaged in the task of learning their secret code, John Rand has a desperate fight in the dark, is overpowered by his criminal antagonists, tied to a chair and left to certain death. Here, at the critical moment, he is saved by Frisco Sal, a former member of the gang, who has fled to London to try and "live straight," and, of course, the last curtain falls on the hero's overwhelming triumph over the murderous criminals with whom it has been his fate to come in conflict.

The handling of theme, incidents and characters is said to be so puerile that not even amateur detectives could find interest in the play. The smashing London success of "Within the Law" is believed to account for this infliction of an English-made crime-drama on New York's playgoing public.

During the week just ended the new Shubert Theater in New York was brilliantly opened by Sir Johnstone Forbes-Robertson and Gertrude Elliott (Lady Forbes-Robertson), "Hamlet" being the dedicatory bill last Thursday evening, the performance being repeated on Saturday evening. "Mice and Men" was the Friday night offering, with "Caesar and Cleopatra" and "The Light That Failed" among the early announcements of the Forbes-Robertson engagement.

Grace George in Barrie's playlet, "Half an Hour," appeared as a Frohman star at the Lyceum Theater recently, her performance being preceded by Stanley Houghton's three-act drama, "The Younger Generation," which was a big London success a season or so ago. Miss George and the Barrie playlet, a grim little story of a wife who determines to sever the matrimonial knot at any cost, alike received critical praise, and the Stanley Houghton play was accorded second place in importance. "The Smoldering Flame," an acutely morbid problem play by William Legrand Howland, was produced at the Forty-eighth Street Theater and was mercilessly laughed at by its audience and scathingly slated by the reviewers. Reginald de Koven's picturesque comic opera, "Rob Roy," was revived at the Liberty and scored an unqualified success, with Bessie Abbott, Henrietta Wakefield, James Stevens, Herbert Waterous and Jeff de Angelis prominent in its cast.

"At Bay," a new play by George Scarborough, author of "The Lure," had a recent "try-out" in Washington and, if it proves successful, soon will receive a New York presentation. Its scenes are laid in Washington, its story concerns the efforts of Larry Holbrook, an Irish soldier of fortune, to outwit the secret service men who are striving to prove that Holbrook's sweetheart, Aline Graham, has committed a murder, and Guy Standing and Chrystal Herne are its featured players.

Recent Play Failures in New York Give Managers Early-Season Panic

There Are Some Notable Successes, However, to Offset the Dramatic "Flukes" — A Review of the Past Fortnight's Metropolitan Productions.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

IT'S a far cry from Longfellow's village blacksmith to the big play producers of New York City, yet certain recent happenings in the metropolis seem to indicate that there is at least one point of resemblance between them which fairly pulsates with pathos for the purveyors of American drama.

"Toiling, rejoicing, sorrowing," we are told of Longfellow's humble hero, "Onward through life he goes; each morning sees some task begun, each evening sees its close"—and it is right here that tears for the playsmiths are in order. Each morning, almost, sees some new stage work ready for its New York premiere, and well-nigh each evening sees the premature close of a production for which a long run was fondly hoped. A pitifully few producers can continue the Longfellow quotation and say that "something attempted, something done, has earned a night's repose." Tranquil slumber is difficult in such a case. Not "Macbeth," but the lack of anything like the play-writing genius that created "Macbeth," hath murdered sleep.

This, at any rate, now must be the melancholy conviction of one New York manager who has established a new record by producing a play that lived for but one night in the metropolis, of another whose similar venture went to smash in less than a week, and of several more who have seen their productions of this season "fold their tents like the Arabs and silently steal away" after a fortnight or so of starved existence in "papered" houses. It surely is deplorable, but a brighter side of the picture is presented by the dozen or so of new plays that have scored successes during this same period.

BURTON HOLMES WILL PICTURE PHILIPPINES

Burton Holmes will begin at the Odeon on Tuesday afternoon and evening, Oct. 14, his annual travelogue series of five illustrated lectures, and his offering this season is of especial value because of its informative tenor as bearing upon this country's Far Eastern possessions.

Three of the travelogues will be devoted to the Philippines under the titles of "The New Manila," "Hiking Through Luzon" and "Cruising Through the Philippines." As such a series leads to a mention of nearby neighbors of these islands the other two travelogues of the present series will be "China in 1913" and "Japan in Corea."

All the places pictured and described have been visited by Mr. Holmes during the past eight months and his motion-pictures, colored lantern slides and information, are as a result, thoroughly up-to-date. He carefully compares actual conditions of today with those existing in 1899, the year of his former visit to these same countries. He believes that Americans are especially solicitous to learn all about what Uncle Sam has done in the Philippines. The popular-price matinee course opens at 4 p. m. on five consecutive Tuesdays. The evening course is at the usual prices.

100 new $350 pianos for $248.75

During this sale informal player-piano recitals will be given every afternoon from 3:00 to 4:30 o'clock, to which you are cordially invited.

A great co-operative sale in which 100 persons will share equally a total saving of $10,125

All of the features of the co-operative plan are carried out in offering the player-pianos, with the single exception that the terms on the player-piano are two dollars a week instead of—as on the piano—one dollar and twenty-five cents a week.

Copyright, 1913, by Martin McCarrick, Inc.

¶ Last Thursday morning, the Conroy Piano Co. inaugurated the biggest piano selling event that has ever taken place in St. Louis. The sale consists of a straight-out purchase of 100 new pianos and 50 new player-pianos. It is the purchase of 150 as dependable pianos and player-pianos as ever have been made. They are Marshall & Wendell pianos — the Marshall & Wendell is not a new make piano. It is not an experiment. More real money and more real brains have gone into this piano than into any other piano made to sell for 100 or 150 dollars more. We know the Marshall & Wendell piano is as reliable a piano as was ever put in a home. The real value is put on the inside, rather than in fancy cases. It is made by good, sturdy labor in one of the largest and best equipped manufactories in America; by men, many of whom have been working in the same shop for 20 to 25 years.

¶ Scores of these same pianos have been sold right here in Saint Louis at $350. Hundreds more are being sold every month, all over the United States at 350, 375 and even 400 dollars. Marshall & Wendell pianos are worth $350. Measured by any standard of value you wish, they are worth $350. They are worth it on our floors or on the floors of any reputable piano house in the country

The co-operative sale price is 248 dollars and 75 cents

¶ The price includes the easiest of easy terms and the most liberal conditions of sale, upon which pianos have ever been sold. In fact, we have brought right to your very door—through this Co-operative Association—of which we are members—the same extremely low prices, the same easy terms, and the identical liberal conditions of sale as those offered by the largest piano houses in the United States. These Co-operative Sales are the talk of the piano trade. And we will, through this sale, give the same prices, the same terms, the same privileges and conditions as those given by the largest piano houses in New York City and absolutely no charge for interest

The life insurance an exceptional feature

¶ If the bread winner dies—if the source of income is stopped by death—the piano is not lost to the family. The family does not have to work and worry to meet the remaining payments. We voluntarily cancel all future payments immediately, and a clear "receipt in full" is given to the family of the deceased. Isn't this a comforting and reassuring feature?

$5

The balance on the piano, is payable 1 dollar and 25 cents, weekly. The balance on the player-piano is payable 2 dollars weekly, WITHOUT INTEREST. This gives you 195 weeks time in which to pay for the piano or the player-piano

¶ These 100 pianos will be sold, 5 dollars as an initial payment then 1 dollar and 25 cents a week, with no additional charge for interest.

The 5 dollars just about covers the cartage and delivery, yet this 5 dollar payment is credited to your account. The piano will be delivered immediately. You do not have to wait. You get your piano when you make your initial payment of 5 dollars. The remainder ($243.75) is payable every week, at the rate of 1 dollar and 25 cents. This gives you 195 weeks' time in which to pay for the piano, and still get the benefit of the co-operative price of $248.75. ¶ You can pay in less time than 195 weeks—if you wish. If you do pay in less time—you profit still further, as there is a premium feature which is a part of this co-operative plan, which provides for a cash premium of 15 cents for each and every week's time you shorten the 195 weeks' time to which you are entitled.

$ price 248.75 no interest to pay

Special advantages of this co-operative plan

1. Every instrument is guaranteed without reserve, for five years. There are no "ifs" or "ands" in the guarantee—just a straight-out guarantee as strong as one can be written in the English language.
2. If, after a 30 days' trial the piano is not satisfactory, we will give you your money back.
3. If the 30 days' trial is satisfactory, you then have 11 months more to fully satisfy yourself as to the character of the piano. If then, at the end of the first year, the piano is not everything you think it should be, you are given the privilege of exchanging it for any other new piano in our house, of equal or better grade, without one penny's loss to you.
4. Absolutely no interest to pay.
5. The piano will be tuned twice without charge.
6. A stool to match the piano, and late style scarf are included without extra cost.
7. You are given the opportunity to procure others to take advantage of this sale, which still further reduces the cost of your piano.
8. Delivery of either the piano or piano-player will be made without further charge, immediately upon the receipt of the initial payment of five dollars.
9. And finally, should you die during the time in which you are paying for your piano, we will voluntarily cancel all unpaid payments, and send a receipt in full for the piano to your family.

Player-pianos can be purchased on this same co-operative plan

Fifty player-pianos will also be sold on this co-operative plan. The usual price of these player-pianos is five hundred and fifty dollars each.

The co-operative price will be three hundred and ninety-five dollars, NO INTEREST to be added.

The player-piano will also be delivered immediately upon the payment of five dollars. The payments will be two dollars a week—giving you one hundred and ninety-five weeks' time in which to make your payments—the same as on the piano. The same unconditional guarantee that is given on the piano is given on the player-piano.

You can also get your money back at any time within thirty days. You get the same privilege of exchanging within a year as that given with the piano. All of the unpaid balances will be voluntarily cancelled in event of death.

Also, a player-piano bench and nine rolls of music (your own selection) are included without extra charge.

An arrangement will be made with each purchaser whereby new player-piano music can be procured at a cost of only 5 cents a roll.

These player-pianos are standard 88-note players; that is, they play every note on the piano when the music roll is in motion. These player-pianos have an automatic shifter, which compels the music to play perfectly. Most player-pianos sold at from two hundred to two hundred and fifty dollars more than these will not play perfectly. These player-pianos have lead tubing. Most player-pianos have rubber tubing. The life of rubber is one year—at most. Lead lasts forever. It cannot wear out and the tubing in these player-pianos is so placed it cannot be broken.

This Is Guaranteed to Stop Your Cough

Make This Family Supply of Cough Syrup at Home and Save $2.00.

This plan makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer an ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative. A handy remedy for hoarseness, spasmodic croup, bronchitis, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup remedy has often been imitated, though never successfully. It is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—ADV.

Rupture and Its Cure

The old idea that rupture cannot be cured except through an operation is exploded, and has been proven erroneous. We live in the age of progress, and the science and practice of Medicine and Surgery have been influenced by the wave of progress as much as every other branch of science.

Perhaps no physician in the city of St. Louis has added more people to the list of those enjoying the full physical powers of perfect health than has the well-known hernia specialist, Dr. W. A. Lewin.

Dr. Lewin has treated and cured over 10,000 cases during the past 21 years that he has practiced in St. Louis. He treats rupture without the use of the knife, and without drawing blood. There is no detention from business pursuits. All is accomplished within a few weeks, and no one pronounced cured until the opening through which the intestines protrude is entirely closed and permanently healed. This is accomplished by building up new tissue, commencing at the edge of the ring; by repeating the treatment several times, the ring is finally closed in a natural manner with new tissue, a growth similar to that over a wound that has healed. Dr. Lewin treats men, women and children, and is pleased to meet your family physician if he accompany you to his office.

SENATE LEADER TELLS HOW TARIFF WILL CUT PRICES

Reduction Will Be Gradual and Not Swift and Radical, Says Simmons.

In matters of dress Simmons has no prejudices. Mrs. Simmons attends to all such affairs and takes care that the Senator's wardrobe is always ready to his hand. He wears a plain business suit, with sack coat, the material being steel gray. White waistcoats break the monotony during the summer months. It is alleged that he followed the usual course and blossomed forth with a frock coat when entering the Senate. He gave this to the hired man at the first opportunity. In early years he made his bow in a silk hat. A jovial stranger weighing 250 pounds sat down on this headgear, and it was never replaced. A soft hat has since served every purpose.

Simmons smokes and always carries a plug of tobacco in a small case. He cuts off an occasional hunk. But he does not use the weed to excess.

It is certain that Simmons will not become a chronic orator. He never talks except when he has something to say. He seldom relates a story and does not gossip about his associates. He delights in strolling around alone, with his head slightly inclined downward, absorbed in meditation. He works early and late, but rests on Sunday. He is beloved by all his employes, and many of them would even run errands for him. Accuracy is a requirement with Simmons. His speeches must exactly suit before delivery. His celebrated address on good roads was dictated 13 times before it pleased him.

Wife Campaigns With Him.

MRS. SIMMONS is the Senator's constant companion. Neither cares much for society. They prefer their own home life. Last year Mrs. Simmons went with her husband on his campaign through the mountains. She took pot luck with him on all occasions. Frequently she assisted in preparing the meals in some of the more humble homes. She made a great hit with the plain backwoods people and won many votes for the Senator.

Only one hobby is placed to Mr. Simmons' credit. That is farming. He would rather do that than engineer tariff bills. He has a fine place 15 miles from Newbern, comprising 1500 or 2000 acres. The exact proportions are not known. The place has never been surveyed. It has been in the family almost since the first settlement of the State. The Simmons forbears came over with De Gaffenried. The house is a convenient country place, with a big porch all around it. The residence is known as Furnihurst.

The somewhat startling Christian names borne by Simmons were obtained naturally. Furnifold is a family name. McLendell comes from the mother's side.

Simmons has no recreations. He does not play golf or billiards. He occasionally goes to the theater, but never when a tariff bill is cooped up. At all other times he is working here or down on his farm. His reading is chiefly confined to public documents and works connected with legislation. Every summer he has an entire carload of documents sent out to the farm.

MERCHANTS SWINDLED BY SHORT-CHANGE GAME

"Ten Dollar" Bill Negress Puts in Envelope Discovered to Be Stage Money.

The police are looking for a young negress who in the last few days has swindled several merchants through a "short change" process. About 2 p. m., Friday, she entered the grocery of Frank Leventhal at 3419 Olive street and requested Harry Dotson, a boy clerk, to give her a $10 bill in return for small change.

"I want to send the money 'n a letter to a friend of mine who is in distress," she said.

The woman wore no hat. Dotson supposed she lived in the neighborhood. He handed the $10 bill to her. She gave him two $1 bills and a handful of silver, telling him to count it carefully. As the boy was counting the money the negress put what appeared to be the bank note into an envelope, which she sealed. Dotson announced the change was a nickel short.

"Why, I certainly thought I had $10 when I left home," the negress said. "Here, you keep this till I come back."

She handed Dotson the envelope and took up the $9.95. Several hours later the envelope, which was addressed to Mrs. Maggie Green, 1127 Chester street, Waldo, Kan., was opened. It contained a piece of stage money.

Several other merchants in different parts of the city report similar losses.

Newest Charter Oak Steel Range

It's our celebrated "Royal Standard"—the range with a reputation—the one that has stood the test of time—finer this season than ever before—a $35.00 quality—for only $29.75—terms $1.00 cash and 50c a week.

The Range You Want

You cannot be too particular in the selection of the range for your home—it is something that must last practically a lifetime and must give you faithful service three times a day throughout all these years—it must be built right in order to last—and the oven heat must be uniform so that you will always be successful in all your cooking and baking.

Built of Polished Blue Steel

Particular attention is called to the fact that this Steel Range is built of polished blue steel throughout—not painted or japanned as is the case with most "Steel Ranges" that are offered about town at a similar price—this blue steel will retain its perfect finish forever while paint or japan finishes will burn off almost the first time that the fire is started.

$29.75 $1.00 CASH 50¢ A WEEK

It's set up from the floor on sanitary base—as illustrated.

You Can Rely on This Range

This is the same Steel Range we have sold for years—it is one that we can sincerely recommend to all our patrons—thousands of them are in use in St. Louis homes and on every side we hear nothing but words of the highest praise.

Each season the Charter Oak Co. improve their product by the addition of such new ideas and conveniences as experience can suggest—and this season's model has been brought to a point of perfection that leaves little, if anything, to be desired.

Note the Picture

It shows our new Charter Oak "Royal Standard" Steel Range exactly as it is—a magnificent design—built on big, broad and massive lines—it is set up from the floor on sanitary base so you can sweep under it—and the ornamental castings are made quite plain so they are easy to keep clean—all good features that the careful housewife will appreciate.

A Perfect Oven

The oven is large — constructed on the most scientific principles so that the oven heat is always uniform—assuring you perfect results with all your cooking and baking—the one feature more than any other that has made Charter Oak Ranges so popular with St. Louis women.

The Price—$29.75

The Income Tax

Serious Attempt by One Who Will Not Pay Any Income Tax to Feel About It as the People Who Will Pay It Feel—Panic Among Poets—the Rate Does Not Increase From 1 to 7 Per Cent Because of the Useless Excess Some People Have, but Because of the Probable Increased Cost of Getting Anything From the People Who Pay More Than 1 Per Cent—The Doubtful Inducement to Get Married.

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

I.

THE income tax is with us;
We have the thing to pay—
The nabob with a barrow,
And the poet with a dray.
The saving if you're married
Is something, it is true;
But it is still so small that one
Scarce knows what one should do.

II.

One only saves ten dollars
By dint of being twain,
And matrimony is at that
A very doubtful gain.
A wife, 'tis true, is thrifty,
And may save more than that;
But like as not she'll turn around
And spend it for a hat.

III.

They say that Rockefeller
Will pay a pretty speck;
But we are from Missouri,
And we'll have to see the check.
We never yet have managed
To capture him, somehow,
And we're not entirely confident
That we have got him now.

IV.

They say he'll pay a million
If made to pay a cent,
But one can't readily believe
That this is his intent.
He's very, very clever,
This multimillionaire,
And his head assuredly is not
A loafing place for hair.

V.

We'll no doubt get Carnegie—
He's easier than John;
He likes to show his money
While a crowd is looking on;
But we'll never get anither
Library frae him noo,
Hoot mon! as Harry Lauder says,
And mind, I'm tellin' you.

VI.

We'll learn what John Hays Hammond
Is making, anyway;
And if he does get any such
Big wages as they say.
They say a cool half million
A year goes in his nest;
But now we'll see his old pay check,
The same as all the rest.

VII.

We'll also catch the fellow
Who blows about his pay,
And doubtless lies about it
In a most amazing way.
The law is not concerning
Itself about his claims,
And we'll get his name and what he gets
With all the other names.

VIII.

The income tax is with us;
Get out your sheet of rates,
And see if you desire to stay
In these United States:
The Government's expensive,
And everyone must pay;
But we have a dandy country,
And we fancy you will stay.

THE income tax has won its long race with the millenium. It is here, and the millenium is not in sight. It will be some time before we thoroughly understand it. For the present it is enough to know that beyond $3000, single, and $4000, married, we must pay 1 per cent per annum up to $20,000, when the rate becomes 2 per cent, and from that on up to $500,000, where the rate becomes 7 per cent. The intermediate rates between 2 and 7 are devised for a few front families; the seven itself is exclusively designed for Mr. Rockefeller. There are various estimates of what Mr. Rockefeller will pay. They range from $500,000 to $2,000,000. Personally, I will be surprised if he pays anything. There must be some way out of it.

Probably the most disappointing feature of the income tax is the inducement it makes to persons caring to be married. One saves only $10 by getting married. It is as much a question whether it is worth $10 as it is if there is in the end any saving at all. The uncertainty in the latter respect pertains to the new tariff. If, as some of the Democratic orators claimed in the heat of the last campaign, two can live as cheaply under the new tariff as one could live under the old, the inducement will be very great, and probably everyone will get married. Upon the other hand, if the new tariff is disappointing in this respect, we may expect marriages to diminish and divorces to increase. Tariff is the most complicated subject we have ever discovered. There seems to be nothing it doesn't effect in some roundabout way.

The tax dodger is in some perplexity. He is not sure how he is going to dodge the income tax. If he can't dodge it, it will be the first tax he ever saw that he couldn't dodge; but that is almost no comfort. One thing is certain, and that is that anyone on salary will pay his income tax. One's employer simply shows the revenue inspectors the books, and the income tax is deducted from one's pay check. That is the most dodge-proof thing in the whole law. One could butt one's brains out trying to get through there.

The possibilities of the tax if everybody paid are tremendous. However, the Government is not deceiving itself on this score. That is the reason it has made the sliding scale from 1 to 7 per cent. It will cost almost nothing to collect the tax from anyone paying the 1 per cent. From that up the cost of collection will increase, so that the rate increases. It is very much doubted by everyone whether the cost of collecting Mr. Rockefeller's tax, for instance, will be less than 7 per cent.

It will be some chase.

The Bible in Congress

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.

As part of his preparation for every speech he makes, representative Adamson of Georgia reads the Bible. Regardless of whether his subject is courts or submarines, railroads or cotton baling, currency or torpedo boats, he reads the Bible. As a result his speeches are illuminated with Biblical quotations.

This week in the House the Democrats and Republicans began quoting the Bible against each other, and Adamson was in his element.

Representative Mondell, a Republican from Wyoming, taunted Representative Hardwick of Georgia for trying to get an increased appropriation for the Augusta public building. He recalled that Mr. Hardwick had "unmercifully belabored" the public buildings bill last year.

"The committee is composed of Christians who desire to return good for evil," explained Austin of Tennessee.

"Well, I did not understand how much the Christians controlled the Democratic caucus or I would have asked a few increases myself," replied Mr. Mondell.

"Christians pay for things out of their own pockets. This is to come out of the treasury," observed Representative Sereno Payne of New York.

"Let me say," interposed Mr. Adamson, "if the gentlemen knew more about Christianity they would have more consideration for the Democratic caucus. The Savior Himself recognized that all good things ought to be done in a discreet and correct manner, so as not to be hawked about to the derision and misrepresentation of enemies, when He commended, 'When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door pray to thy Father which is in secret, who seeth in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.' I will add, the people are going to reward the works of the secret Democratic caucus."

Mr. Payne: As I read the history of that, there had been no example of a Democratic caucus up to the time those words were uttered by the Lord. (Laughter).

Mr. Adamson: You are having a Democratic example now, and when you get the tariff bill and the currency bill before the country the people will all rise up, saying: "By their fruits ye shall know them," and glorify and perpetuate the Democratic party.

STONE IN FAVOR OF SPECIAL SESSION ON ELECTION LAWS

Wants Legislature to Pass Act Conforming With Senatorial Amendment.

LOOKS AT HIS FENCES

Political Situation Pleasing to Him, Despite Reports of Strong Opposition.

Gov. Major is being urged by Senator Stone and other Democratic leaders to call an extra session of the State Legislature to enact a law providing for the direct nomination of candidates for United States Senator at the regular August primary, when the nominees for other State officers are chosen.

In an interview given out at Jefferson City yesterday, Gov. Major reiterated the view he had previously expressed to the effect that there is no necessity of repealing the present senatorial nominating laws and providing specifically for the nomination of Senators at the primary election.

Heretofore the senatorial candidates of each party have been selected at the general election and the nominee of the winning party elected at the succeeding legislative session. This law has not been repealed and Senator Stone's friends say that a change is made necessary by the recent adoption of the new amendment to the Federal Constitution, making compulsory the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people.

Legislature Has No Voice.

Under the new Federal provision, the senatorial candidate of any party, receiving the highest number of votes at the general election, is entitled to the senatorial prize, regardless of the political complexion of the Legislature.

"There is no question about the legality of nominating Senators under the direct primary act," said Gov. Major to the Post-Dispatch's Jefferson City correspondent. "There is no necessity, therefore, for a special session to repeal the present senatorial primary statute, which everybody agrees never was a valid law."

Supreme Judge W. W. Graves, who has loomed up as a formidable rival to Senator Stone's re-election ambition, is disposed to favor the extra session in order that all doubt on the subject may be removed.

Senator Stone spent yesterday in Kansas City, after a two-day visit to St. Louis, during which he investigated the condition of the local Democratic household and conferred earnestly with a number of the faithful at the Planters Hotel.

Incidentally he paid a visit to a throat specialist who asked him how many cigars a day he smoked.

"I told the doctor," said the Senator, in describing the incident, "that I managed to consume about seven or eight a day, although as a matter of fact I smoke probably 15. He then advised me that for the sake of my throat I ought to limit myself to two.

"Now, the doctor also gave me good advice on other things and I am feeling better for it."

He Is Maintaining Harmony.

Senator Stone said he expected to take up the matter of an extra session with Gov. Major at Jefferson City, Monday. So far, Senator Stone has retained remarkably harmonious relations with the Francis-Major wing of the Missouri Democracy (otherwise "Major and I"), despite the arduous endeavors of this factional force to bring out candidates in opposition to the senior Senator.

As matters now stand, Senator Stone has gathered into his political fold, practically all the followers of Senator Reed, a large share of the Folk contingent, especially in the cities, and a considerable sprinkling of county chieftains, through the all-important postmastership appointments, now, so far as Missouri is concerned, under the official protecting wing of former Gov. A. M. Dockery, Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

The political perspective is excellent from the Stone point of view and the insistence of Judge Graves, friends that he enter the race, coupled with the longing which Public Service Commissioner Atkinson entertains for the senatorial job, doesn't seem to disturb the Senator's rubber-heeled coterie of advisers.

The suggestion of Atkinson as the senatorial choice of the 'Major and I" forces is not treated seriously by St. Louis Democratic leaders. Stone's most influential advisers, however, realize Judge Graves would go some in the senatorial sweepstakes.

Graves Has Strength.

While the Supreme Court Justice is friendly with the Major administration, he has a powerful following also among the opposing contingent of the Democratic organization as represented by William S. Cowherd of Kansas City and Senator Reed.

Out "in the brush," as the State leaders refer to parts of the Missouri interior, Judge Graves is said to have the support of some very astute politicians. His long and meritorious record on the bench and his reputation as a brilliant and polished lawyer, of surpassing ability as a debater, are among the qualities urged by his friends for seeking to induce him to enter the senatorial race.

If Judge Graves should decide to challenge Stone, his lieutenants declare, he will not run as the candidate of any faction, but rather as an old-fashioned Democrat, who despises a factionalist worse than he does a Republican.

Bill Passed by Council Appropriates $2500 and Loans a City Building.

SITES ARE DISCUSSED

Jazzolo Would Repair Old Emergency Hospital and Provide Day Nursery.

Councilman Fletcher's bill providing for the establishment of a free municipal lodging house, which passed the Council Friday night, probably will become a law within 10 days. The House of Delegates, with the exception of two or three members, are friendly to the measure and Mayor Kiel is on record for it.

The bill carries an appropriation of $2500, to be expended for lodgings under the auspices of the Health Commissioner. Any public building owned by the city may be used for this purpose, according to the terms of the bill.

The old city hall, at Eleventh and Chestnut streets, has been considered by some of the city officials as desirable.

Old Emergency Hospital Proposed.

Delegate Andrew Gassolo of the Fifth Ward believes that a more central location is at Fourteenth and O'Fallon streets, the site of a four-story building formerly used by the city as an emergency hospital.

"If this building is repaired, and I am sure it can be at slight expense, the city ought to turn it into a lodging house," said Gassolo yesterday. "There should be an annex in the building for the children of poor parents who are unable to provide warmth and safety for the children when they are earning a living.

"The city has needed something of this kind for years and I am certain every member of the House will favor the pending bill after minor amendments to it, which I have indicated, will be made."

The Four Courts Building at Twelfth street and Clark avenue and the police stations throughout the city have been used heretofore in the winter months to shelter the homeless and unfortunate. No adequate provision for the comfort of those so housed was made because of lack of funds.

Health Commissioner in Charge.

Under Fletcher's bill, Health Commissioner Starkloff will have jurisdiction over the lodging house and good sanitation will be the first requisite to its operation. It is expected that 500 or 600 persons can be taken care of each night at the municipal lodgings and all of those who are able to work will be impressed into service by the city, sawing wood, carrying coal and doing other odd chores at the public institutions.

"If the city had the means at its disposal," said Fletcher, "I would favor the expenditure of $10,000 for a municipal lodging house. We shall see the real benefits from such an institution next winter and the city can enlarge its scope as more facilities are required."

The Keller lecture is one of a series under the direction of Hattie B. Gooding. The first will be a recital at the Odeon, Oct. 22, by Mme. INDICT BLIND MAN AS SEANCE ADVISER OF TRIPLE SUICIDE

Aged Survivor Also Is Charged With Murder in Giving Fatal Drink to Two Women.

PRISONER DENIES PROFIT

He Is Charged With Impersonating Voice of Dead Son Telling of Peace in Death.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MURFREESBORO, Ark., Oct. 4.—T. A. Turner, the aged and feeble survivor of a triple suicide agreement that cost the life of his wife and adopted daughter, and J. G. Ferrell, a blind broom peddler, who was the chief beneficiary, have been indicted here on charges growing out of the death of the two women.

Turner is charged with giving the solution of strychnine and morphine to the women to drink before he partook of it himself. He was revived with difficulty. Ferrell is charged with engineering the spiritualistic seance at which the voice of Turner's dead son, Robert Ingersoll Turner, told his parents of the peace beyond the grave and advised them to end their lives and join him in the comfortable life beyond. The trials of the two men will be called Oct. 14.

Turner and his family were followers of Ingersoll, but recently had added spiritualism to their beliefs. Miss Carter, the adopted daughter, was perfecting herself as a medium by taking a course of lessons in a correspondence school at Des Moines. Ferrell, a friend, was a frequent guest at these seances at Marvell, where all had lived. Recently Farrell went to Glenwood, a saw mill town, and wrote to the Turners to come there, as it was a rich field for spiritualistic work.

Three Unfortunates Together.

Turner was old and feeble. Miss Carter was a semi-invalid from an ailment that had been pronounced incurable and Mrs. Turner was an abnormally large woman. The health of the man and young woman left all of the housework for Mrs. Turner and she complained frequently and bitterly of the requirements placed upon her. It is said that each of the family looked forward to death as a merciful deliverance.

It was after the family had removed to Glenwood that the son's voice was heard at the seances. Always he told of the pleasant surroundings after death. The son died recently in Mexico, and, during the seances, he usually compared the peaceful hereafter with the turbulence in Mexico.

Ferrell announced the death of the Turner family after he had gone to the house for his daily call. He reported all three dead, but persons who answered his alarm found that Turner was not dead. Eventually he was revived.

Blind Man Denies Gift.

Turner has told Prosecutor Abe Collins that after he and his wife and daughter had agreed that it was best for them to die they deeded a business lot and building in Glenwood to Ferrell and that they gave to him $50 not needed for their burial. Following this and other clews brought evidence before the grand jury that resulted in Ferrell's indictment. It is charged that he was responsible for the voice of Robert Ingersoll Turner being heard at the seances and that the frequent suicide advice was his. Ferrel denies the deed and the cash gift.

On the day of the deaths Turner bought stockings to complete the burial clothing of himself, wife and daughter and then mixed the poisons. In a letter he left, he asked that they be buried in plain coffins without handles and told where to find cash to pay the expense.

Since Ferrell's denial of his part in the seances, Turner says he wants to live long enough to prosecute Farrel, after which he will again be willing to die.

ENGINEER AND FIREMAN FIGHT AS TRAIN SPEEDS

PARIS, Oct. 4.—A desperate fight between the engineer and fireman on the tender of the locomotive of a speeding passenger train caused great alarm among th passengers of the Bayonne-Pau Express. The men renewed a quarrel between cities which had been stopped at the railway station by the intervention of the train crew.

The engineer sprang at the fireman and the fireman hit him on the head with a hammer, felling him. In falling the engineer grasped the brake lever, applying the brakes and stopping the train.

The engine crew was relieved and another engineer and firemen were sent out befor th train proceeded.

JAPS WIN IN MANCHURIA

TOKIO, Oct. 4.—Dairen is fast becoming the gateway to Manchuria and commercial supremacy in Northern Manchuria is slipping out of the hands of Russians into those of the Japanese, according to the annual report of the Russian Chamber of Commerce at Harbin, which has reached here. The report states that the Harbin manufacturers are at the mercy of Japanese coal merchants and that the transportation facilities are being grasped by the Japanese.

The whole year's crop of wheat and beans in Manchuria is being bought up by the Japanese, the report says, and they have established flour and oil mills in South Manchuria. Sova beans, which is the principal product exported from Northern Manchuria, are exported almost entirely through Japanese merchants. Most of the foreign goods are transported to Harbin through Dairen, only a small portion coming through Vladivostock.

The Standard Rotary Sewing Machine
Is the Standard Bearer in This, the Greatest Section in the Entire Middle West Devoted to the Selling of Reliably-Built Sewing Machines

The Standard Rotary Sewing Machine is the best Sewing Machine we could find in a search among all the world's best makes—best mechanically—best in every other way.

The Standard Rotary makes either the two-thread lockstitch or single-thread chain stitch on the same machine.

It runs far more quickly, decidedly easier and much faster than possible with any other style shuttle.

It is the fastest sewer—it makes 175 stitches while other machines make 100, and it does this with one-third less footwork, at a saving of three hours out of every seven.

The Standard Rotary has the largest bobbin of any lockstitch machine, and holds 100 yards of No. 80 cotton thread.

Feed motions are positive—no springs used, hence the machine will feed over all thicknesses of goods and seams without "chewing" the cloth, no matter what the length of stitch.

With every Standard Rotary Machine, we give a complete set of A1 steel attachments—self adjusting—capable of producing the highest class work.

Allow us to show you the new Special Model of the celebrated Standard Rotary Sewing Machine priced at $29.75

You May Pay $1 at Time of Purchase and $1 a Week Until Machine Is Paid For

WOULD OUST MAD KING

Plan to Make Prince Ludwig Bavarian Ruler Reported.

MUNICH, Oct. 4.—Newspapers declare today that the Bavarian Government has revived its plan for dethroning the mad King, Otto, and placing the Prince Regent, Ludwig, on the throne. This plan was suggested at the time of the death of the old King last year, but Prince Ludwig vetoed the movement.

The Government has introduced a bill for increasing the Prince Regent's civil list, hoping thereby to convince the members of the clerical party that it would be cheaper to place him on the throne as King.

WOMAN TRACED BY DOG IN MYSTERY OF PEARLER'S MURDER

Picturesque Character, Who Rides Rods of Train Like a Man, Tells of Crime.

STRUGGLE ON HOUSEBOAT

Says Arkansan Beat Her and Rescuer Clubbed and Slashed Her Companion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DES ARC, Ark., Oct. 4.—Though a little yellow dog led to her arrest on a charge of murdering John Howard, a pearler, Belle Delaney, 50 years old, insists that the dog remain in the cell with her, and demands extra rations from the Prairie County jailer to feed the dog.

Howard, who had worked on White River and who is said to have sold pearls valued at about $10,000 in recent months, was murdered in his houseboat 12 miles up the river from Des Arc. His head was crushed and across his abdomen was a cut which alone would have caused his death. The body was wrapped with heavy chains from head to feet and tossed into the river.

Belle Delaney, a wanderer, made her home with Howard for a week before the crime. The evidences of a death struggle on the floor of the houseboat led to the search for the body, which was found after it had been in the water for several weeks.

Traced From Town to Town.

Sheriff A. V. Harris then started to find the woman, tracing her to Little Rock and later to Hot Springs, where she was arrested. She confessed to the officers that she had knowledge of Howard's murder, implicating Fred Shanks, a White River fisherman, in the crime.

According to the story of the Delaney woman, Howard came home from Des Arc in an intoxicated condition and began to beat her. Her screams attracted Shanks to the rescue. After taking her to a safe place, she says, Shanks returned to the houseboat and killed Howard, later weighting the body with the chains and throwing it in the river. She says that Shanks went through the dead man's pockets and took from them about $9, of which he gave her $5, and she began her wandering.

Says Negroes Saw Crime.

She asserts that several negroes witnessed the murder, and that Shanks slashed Howard across the abdomen after hitting him on the head with a bat. She says the death struggle was terrible, but still insists that she did not see the crime committed.

The police believe that Howard had a large sum of money and that the murderers secured it. But they are at a loss as to where to begin on the hunt for the money, for neither of the accused persons has appeared to be possessed of funds.

The Delaney woman is a picturesque character. She rides any kind of a train and any place on the train, being as much at home on the rods, or even more so, than on the cushioned seats of a passenger coach. After leaving the houseboat belonging to Howard, whom she had met in DeVall's Bluff a short time before, she went to Helena, Forrest City, Brinkley and Little Rock.

Chariot for Her Dog.

She was easily traced by the little yellow dog. The woman carried two bran sacks, in one she had cooking utensils and the other was the chariot in which the dog rode when tired of tramping over gravel ballasted railroads.

She has been given a preliminary hearing and held to the Prairie County grand jury, which meets next month. Shanks, who denies he participated in the murder, will also be held for the action of the grand jury.

GIRLS WALKING TO COAST FUSS AND TRAVEL ALONE

Indianapolis Hikers Accuse Each Other of Not Showing Due Attention During Illness.

DODGE CITY, Kan., Oct. 4.—Because they couldn't overcome the feminine tendency to fuss, an overland trip to San Francisco by two Indianapolis girls ended in a row here and they are traveling separate paths.

The girls started on a walk to the coast in June. They were inseparable chums and their walk was uneventful until they reached Dodge City. Here Miss Mae Lille was struck by a motor cycle and her arm was broken. She went to a hospital. When she was able to travel her companion, Miss Blanche Kimball, was taken ill and was in the hospital a week.

When she was able to travel the girls quarreled over whether each had been as attentive to the other as she should have been. The result was that Miss Lille boarded a train and went to Garden City, while Miss Kimball started from here to continue the walk. At last reports Miss Lille was 50 miles ahead of her companion.

TWO GIRL TEACHERS QUIT SCHOOL ROOM FOR FARM

SAN ANGELO, Tex., Oct. 4.—Two college girls, both teachers, have turned farmers and have purchased a tract of land near town. They will do all the work themselves, from feeding the chickens to plowing.

Miss Christine Schott of Galveston, an instructor in the High School here, and Miss C. L. Biglow, who has been teaching at Ann Arbor, Mich., recently decided they preferred a farmer's life.

They expect to find more profit and fun in milking cows than in demonstrating difficult problems in trigonometry. Instead of digging at Latin and Greek roots they will dig for potatoes. The two young women are athletic. Last summer they paddled a canoe for 200 miles on the Hudson River. They have bought the Dr. S. S. Warren place.

MRS. PANKHURST'S BIG LECTURE FEES EXPLAINED

Daughter Says Anything Contributed by America Will Help Cause Everywhere.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, after reading the dispatches from New York this morning, reporting the commotion among the American suffragettes caused by the large fees which the suffragette leader is to receive for her lectures, commissioned her daughter, Christabel, to explain her point of view.

"The women's movement is international," said Miss Pankhurst. "Consequently anything contributed by Americans to help to win the woman suffrage campaign in England will help the cause throughout the world. England is more conservative than any other country. If woman suffrage should be obtained there, it will be easier to win elsewhere."

Miss Christabel says that Miss Jean Wickham of the Woman's Social and Political Union, who is arranging Mrs. Pankhurst's tour, is receiving more invitations than it is possible for Mrs. Pankhurst to accept, in spite of the fee asked. She adds that Mrs. Pankhurst has no doubt she will be freely admitted by the immigration authorities.

BEBEL'S ESTATE $100,000

Charge That Socialist Was Tax Dodger Is Denied.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—An authoritative denial was issued today of published statements that the late August Bebel, the Socialist leader, was a millionaire. His estate is valued at about $100,000, of which he bequeathed $5000 to the Social-Democratic party and $2000 to the Labor Press. It had been reported that he left half of his estate to the party.

An accusation that Bebel was a tax dodger and had invested his property abroad to escape German assessments also was denied. It is declared he made his annual returns to the tax officers with minute accuracy.

Hope for Bald Heads

Well Known Politician Nearly Bald Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A western politician, well known on account of his baldness and his ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair; many of his friends did not know him, and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the growth of my hair to the following simple recipe which any lady or gentlemen can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair, but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded, gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home."—ADV.

SALOON LICENSE NOT TO BAR ALL MUSIC IN CLUBS

Excise Commissioner Anderson Says They Will Be Ruled Like the Hotels.

HE CITES PRECEDENTS

Difference, as He Sees It, Will Be Expense and Recognition of Closing Laws.

Bona fide clubs such as the St. Louis and Missouri Athletic clubs will not have to dispense with music at receptions or billiard tables at all times, even if the Supreme Court upholds the contention of Circuit Attorney Thomas B. Harvey, that they must take out a saloon license and observe the law the same as saloons.

Excise Commissioner Anderson gave this opinion to a reporter yesterday and cited the rulings of all his predecessors in support of it. Hotels in St. Louis, in recent years, have operated saloons under a State license subject to all the excise laws and have been permitted to operate billiard rooms on the premises as well as to give concerts.

The law prohibits music, card games, billiards and other forms or divertisement in conjunction with a saloon, but all Excise Commissioners have exercised discretion in determining whether a billiard room on one floor and a dramshop on another, or in a distant part of the same floor, was a violation.

How Mulvihill Ruled.

Former Commissioner Mulvihill ruled in the case of McTague's Cafe, that a partition dividing one room into two sections, one for a barroom and the other for the serving of meals to men and women, was sufficient to permit music in the dining room. Other orderly cafes were permitted to operate on similar plans.

Former Commissioner Caulfield ruled that pianos might be installed in a barroom provided the proprietor or his agents did not operate them. The Court of Appeals had held that it was not a violation to install a piano which customers alone operated by dropping coins in a slot or otherwise.

Attorney John F. Lee issued a statement on behalf of the St. Louis Club as follows: "If a club is made to pay a dramshop license, then it must cease to dispose of liquors to its members or remove the billiard tables from the clubhouse and discontinue music, balls and receptions within the premises."

Would Mean Sunday Closing.

Anderson's statement of the law and the rulings of other Excise Commissioners indicate that the only effect of forcing dramshop licenses on bona fide clubs will be to increase their expense about $700 a year and compel them to observe Sunday and early morning closing of the bar, just as hotels do at present.

The June grand jury, in its final report Friday to Judge W. M. Kinsey, said: "The plain language of the statute is that no person shall sell liquor without a dramshop license and the effect of said St. Louis Club decision (1894) is to engraft upon the statute an exception in favor of bona fide clubs."

The grand jurors indorsed Circuit Attorney Harvey's action in filing suits against the St. Louis, Missouri Athletic clubs and the Brewery Workers' Association, to test the Supreme Court's decision of 1894, exempting clubs from the regulations of dramshops. Harvey contends that only by putting all clubs and places where liquor is sold under the jurisdiction of the local Excise Commissioner can the illegal lid club be effectually suppressed.

TELLS OF BUYING MEN'S VOTES; PAYS THEIR FINES

Kentucky Banker Remains in Prison for Contempt Until He Gets Sellers' Consent.

WINCHESTER, Ky., Oct. 4.—D. B. Hampton, bank president, after spending a week in jail and being fined $30 each day for refusing to answer questions of the foreman of the grand jury with reference to vote buying at the August primary, sent a written proposition to the grand jury, agreeing to admit that he had given money to two men, on the condition that he would be permitted to pay their fines for accepting the money.

The proposition was accepted and Hampton made a statement to the jury which resulted in indictments being returned against Rome Martin and James Glover for receiving bribe money. They entered pleas of guilty and were fined $50 each. Judge Benton, in fixing the lowest fine, warned the men that on a second offense they would be disfranchised from voting and holding office.

Hampton, in his statement to the grand jury, made it clear that the two men had given him permission to give their names to the jury and that he was to pay their fines.

DOG HAS FILM SHOW HABIT; GOES NIGHTLY

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Oct. 4.—Mr. and Mrs. Lee Thomas have a dog named Noisey that displays as much interest in movies as most persons. He had the habit of following Mr. and Mrs. Thomas downtown each evening and into the moving picture show. He became a nuisance and they drove him back several evenings, only to find him in the show when they arrived.

Finally they thwarted him by locking him up each evening. But this scheme was soon fathomed by Noisey, and Mrs. Thomas searched vainly for the dog. When Mr. and Mrs. Thomas arrived at the moving picture show, they were told that their pet had preceded them and he was found sitting on a chair in the front row.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have given up the idea of keeping Noisey at home and he is now to be found on the baldheaded row at the "movies" every night. The doorman charges him nothing.

CHURCH TO OPEN UNDER-AGE FREE KINDERGARTEN

Equipment for Cooking Class, Including Individual Stoves, Is Donated.

The under-age free kindergarten of the Church of the Holy Communion, Leffingwell and Washington avenues, will open Monday at 9 a. m. and will be open thereafter every day except Saturday and Sunday from 9 a. m. to noon. Miss Mary Alexander, who took special training in Boston during the summer, will open a free play school for little children in the afternoon and take charge of little children on Sunday so that their mothers can attend services.

Full equipment for a cooking school, including individual stoves, was recently donated by Miss Orian Dyer, who was married, Thursday, to Major Clark Smith of the United States Army. On their return from their Mediterranean wedding trip, Mrs. Smith will take charge of the school. The parish house has been completely remodeled for its new uses.

WILLEMSTAD, CURACAO, Oct. 4.—Gen. Manuel Hernadez, better known as "El Mocho," and Dr. Leopoldo Baptista, two of the most influential antagonists of President Gomez of Venezuela, arrived here today from San Juan, Porto Rico, on board the steamer Philadelphia.

MORMON PRESIDENT ASSAILS NEW FASHIONS

Joseph Smith Says Tight and X-Ray Skirts Originated Among Lowest People.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 4.—The head of the Mormon Church, President Joseph F. Smith, at the opening session of the Latter Day Saints' semi-annual conference here today, condemned woman's dress.

Characterizing them as "abominable indecent fashions," President Smith declared that tight and diaphanous skirts originated among the lowest classes of women in degenerate cities. He said he hoped the daughters of Latter Day Saints would avoid wearing such dresses. The conference, which is being attended by delegates from all over the world, is the largest ever assembled here.

Though no conclusion has been reached, it is the present intention of the Attorney-General to file a civil anti-trust suit for a dissolution of the road. The question of possible criminal proceedings will be considered later.

"Man of the Woods" Flees to Canada to Escape Game Wardens

Artist Joseph Knowles, Who Ends His Two Months' Stay in Maine Forests, Maneuvers to Keep the Skins He Took in Exile to Keep Him Warm.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

KING AND BARTLETT CAMPS, SPENCER, Me., Oct. 1.—To avoid the disgrace of being stripped of his fur clothing when he steps out into civilized life, and to protect his claim to the the furry hides that have stood between him and death out in the wilderness, Joseph Knowles, the exponent of wild life, will end his gruelling experiment over the Canadian border and will emerge from the forest on foreign soil.

The isolated painter who is completing successfully the first attempt of civilized man to revert to the wild life of primitive man is conscious of the cordon of trouble that is tightening about him. He knows that the minions of the law await him. He pictures the scene in his active mind out there in the wilds. He sees himself stripped of the things that bind him body and soul to nature in her depths. He sees the Wardens dragging his worn and suffering self to court to answer to the laws that his fellow men have made.

Having won his battle with nature, Knowles has undertaken a battle of wits with the law that he knows will show him no mercy. He has thrown all discretion to the winds, and, exposing himself to every discomfort and danger that lurks in the bleak and treacherous forest tract between here and Quebec, has set himself the most severe test he has yet undertaken.

Skulking Like Outlaw in Forest.

Like an outlaw skulking in the forest shadows, artist Knowles is today picking his way through swamp and forest, over rocky mountains and through the ravines, blinding his trail by traveling in the streams and employing every method of woodcraft he has ever learned.

Whatever accident befalls him, whatever suffering from bitter cold and gnawing hunger may be his lot, he has voluntarily thrown himself on the mercy of nature rather than on the mercy of men.

"I shall send them a list of game I have killed and pay whatever damages they impose," declares Knowles in his message announcing his flight. This statement clears his flight of any intention of defrauding the State of Maine. Knowles is not evading his responsibility. He is not a criminal, and is willing to satisfy the law. So far as his financial responsibility for his acts is concerned, and there is no other punishment exacted by law for the unlicensed killing of game, the Forest Man accepts the law's penalty without question.

Unless he is forced by illness or accident during his perilous journey to give up his wild life, or is apprehended by game wardens between here and the Canadian border, Knowles will greet a circle of waiting friends at Megantic, Quebec, on Oct. 4. He will have completed two full months of life in the forest, entirely dependent on his own resources to maintain life, and secure his meager comforts, without the aid of any modern weapon, tool, implement or device of any kind. On Aug. 4 he entered the forest nude and empty handed, relying entirely on his wits and muscles for hunting, fishing, fire building and the other necessary labor for existence.

Blazing Brand Signal From Him.

A signal torch, waving on the shore of King and Bartlett Lake was the farewell that Knowles gave to his friends in the log cabins on the opposite shore. His farewell message, written with charcoal on birch bark, was found shortly afterward beside the dying embers of the torch.

In the darkness of the night, on Sept. 2, a blazing brand was observed waving on the eastern shore of the lake, at the end of the mountain trail that leads to Spencer Lake. The anxious friends of the Forest Man had been closely watching day and night for some signal that would tell them just where Knowles would emerge from the forest. They knew from his more recent writings that Knowles would plan to evade the wardens, and believed he would appoint some secluded place on a blazed trail for his meeting with those who had gathered to greet him.

While the torch was still waving, a boat was launched, and two of the observers crossed the lake. There, on the stub of a broken sapling, was found a roll of bark, bound with thongs of deer skin, evidently a challenge to the wardens. This was the final message of the Forest Man, announcing he would emerge from the forest in Canada.

This sudden overturning of the long-laid plans to give Knowles a rousing reception here and welcome him back to civilization and the comforts he had for two months forsaken, was a distinct surprise. It had never been considered possible that the Forest Man would be stripped of his hard-earned garments of fur.

Game Warden Makes No Exception.

But so well did Knowles reckon his chances with the game wardens that he struck right at the most distressing part of their plans. It has developed that the wardens are forced to seize any part of game illegally taken, and that they do not intend to make any exception in the case of Knowles.

The game wardens have laid their plans for the capture of Knowles when he emerges from the forest. It has been generally agreed among them, it is understood, that this is the easiest and best way to bring him to account. There is still in the wind, however, rumors that Will Adams, a deputy warden now in the Spencer Lake region, plans to go in after Knowles. This is the same warden who last week undertook the arrest of a Pittsburg hunter named House for killing a bear, and later found that he could locate no law on which to prosecute.

The new plans of Knowles are a secret among his friends here, who are rooting for the Forest Man to win his fight to retain the trophies of his primitive life. After Knowles has had time to safely cross the border line a party will follow him from here and turn over to him the personal effects which he left with Harry M. Pierce, owner of King and Bartlett camps, when Knowles entered the forest.

(Next Sunday's Post-Dispatch will tell how Knowles came out of the forest.)

"My Last Message From Forest"

By Joseph Knowles.

Written on birchbark with charcoal.)

(Copyright 1913, by Joseph Knowles.

FRIDAY, Sept. 26.

I WILL come out of the forest on the Canadian shore of Lake Megantic on Oct. 4. I shall camp on the boundary mountains and from there will go down to the point where I hope to meet my friends.

Do not disclose my plan until I am safely across the line. I shall not cross the line until Oct. 3.

I hope it will not be a great disappointment to those who may be planning to meet me on the shore of Spencer Lake.

I have killed game in order to continue this existence till Oct. 4. I tried to live within the law, but found it impossible.

I want to avoid a disgraceful scene with the wardens. I know they will strip me of the hides I have worked so hard to get and which I have prized so much.

I shall have something to say concerning the Fish and Game Commission when I emerge. And I shall send them a list of game I have killed and pay whatever damages they impose.

Whatever mystery may be connected with this report I will clear up when I come out of the timber belt.

I canot make any more drawings in the woods. I shall be busy enough from now until I am safely out of the forest.

She Stopped Her Son From Drinking

A St. Louis Woman Stopped Her Son From Drinking With a Simple Home Recipe That She Gave Secretly.

She Tells What She Gave.

A well-known resident of St. Louis, whose son had used liquor to excess for years, broke him of the habit by using a simple home recipe which she mixed at home and gave secretly. In reply to the question as to what she used, she made the following statement: "I used a simple prescription which I mixed at home, and it is as follows: To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of muriate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound and 10 grains of pepsin. I gave a teaspoonful three times a day in his coffee. Any druggist can supply these ingredients at very little cost. The recipe can be given secretly in coffee, tea or milk, or in the food, as it has practically no taste, color or smell and is perfectly harmless. A strange thing is, this recipe seems to work as well on the tobacco habit in any form as on the liquor habit. Many of my friends have used this recipe for the tobacco habit with excellent results. I believe any mother or wife can do as I have and rid their dear ones of these awful habits."—ADVERTISEMENT.

Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy.

Trial Package Mailed Free to Any Sufferer.

If you have catarrh of the head, nose, throat; if catarrh has affected your hearing; if you sneeze, hawk or spit; if you take one cold after another; if your head feels stopped-up; you should try this Remedy discovered by Dr. Blosser, who has made a specialty of treating catarrh for over thirty-nine years.

This Remedy is composed of herbs, flowers and seed possessing healing medicinal properties; contains no tobacco, is not injurious or habit-forming; is pleasant to use and perfectly harmless to man, woman or child.

Catarrhal germs are carried into the head, nose and throat with the air you breathe—just so the warm medicated smoke-vapor is carried with the breath, applying the medicine directly to the diseased parts. If you have tried the usual methods, such as sprays, douches, salves, inhalers and the stomach-ruining "constitutional" medicines, you will readily see the superiority of this Smoking Remedy.

Simply send your name and address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 62 Walton st., Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you a free package containing samples of the Remedy for smoking in a pipe and made into cigarettes, together with an illustrated booklet which goes thoroughly into the subject of catarrh. He will send by mail, for one dollar, enough of the medicine to last about one month.

Mysteries of Rheumatism Practically Solved

S. S. S. is a Regular Wizard in Driving Out Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is often the effect of some other blood affliction that has left its impress in the joints, muscles and mucous coverings of the body. It works into the tissue cells, those tiny, little bodies in which nutrition goes on. And it is here that a most remarkable medicine known as S. S. S. does its most active and most effective work.

Its action is marvelous. Bed-ridden rheumatics get on their feet as if by magic. That cold, clammy sensation that made you hug a red hot stove is gone in a twinkling. That excruciating pain that made a feather lay as heavy as a ton of coal on the sufferer is gone. You get up and dance with glee.

Your rheumatism is gone—absolutely! It is an actual logical fact, that Swift's Sure Specific flushes your blood, gives your entire blood circulation a fine thorough bath. It just naturally and in a twinkling irrigates every atom in your body. It rushes into every cell, causes every bone, muscle, ligament, tendon, mucous surface and every nerve to thrill with freedom, with health, with new-found springiness.

And best of all, S. S. S. though a powerful searching, overwhelming enemy to pain and the causes of rheumatism is as pure as the dew on a peach blossom, as powerful as the heroic works of nature, as searching as the peremptory demand of the most exact science.

Ask for and insist upon getting S. S. S. the world's cure for rheumatism.

For private, personal advice on stubborn chronic rheumatism write at once to the Swift Specific Co., 203 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Their medical department is famous on all blood diseases, and is equipped to make personal blood tests, approved by the highest medical authorities. Get a bottle of S. S. S. today. Then away goes rheumatism for all time.

FINS AND FEATHERS

By Jock Bellairs.

Local sportsmen are in a quandry as to just where they stand in the matter of hunting wild water fowl. This is especially true of those who shoot along the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, or who belong to clubs immediately adjacent to these waters. The game department of Illinois has given word that nimrods may rely on what their license specifies and in case of change due notice will be given. This should be applicable to Missouri.

In this State the laws on game, birds and beasts, have been changed by the General Assembly so that the day's bag is only 10 birds and the limit for a hunt 15. Deer, buck only, are open from Nov. 1 to Jan. 1; quail, Dec. 1 to Jan. 1; squirrel, July 1 to Jan. 1; wild turkey, Nov. 1 to Jan. 1; dove, Sept. 1 to Jan. 1. There is no open season for pheasant, woodcock, or the pinnated grouse. For duck, geese, brant and snipe our laws permit shooting from Sept. 15 to the end of April, and it allows only September, October, November and December for plover. Now the Federal authorities step in and set these days for water birds: Plover, yellow legs, Sept. 1 to Dec. 16; mall coot, gallinules, Sept. 1 to Dec. 1; duck, geese and brant may be hunted from Sept. 15 to Jan. 16, and snipe from Sept. 15 to Dec. 16.

That pertains to the general hunting, where the main water arteries are not concerned. And so that every nimrod may understand just what the Department of Agriculture has provided in the latter, the entire law applicable to this section follows:

"A closed season shall continue between Jan. 1 and Oct. 1, both dates inclusive, of each year, on all migratory birds passing over or at rest on any of the waters of the main streams of the following navigable rivers, to wit: The Mississippi River between New Orleans, La., and Minneapolis, Minn.; the Ohio river between its mouth and Pittsburg, Pa., and the Missouri River between its mouth and Bismarck, N. D.; and on the killing or capture of any such birds on or over the shores of any of said rivers, or at any point within the limits aforesaid, from any boat, raft, or other device, floating or otherwise, in or on any such waters."

It is a mistake to suppose the Government put a closed season on wood ducks in Missouri and Illinois. The embargo as to these native birds, the handsomest of all ducks, relates only to Wisconsin, West Virginia, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. In Illinois and Missouri woodcocks are protected to Sept. 1, 1913, and this applies also to band tailed pigeons, little brown, sandhill and whooping cranes, swans, curlew and all other shore birds save those listed in the game restrictions, cited in the foregoing.

Capt. O'Brien Returns From Hunting in Texas.

Capt. Martin O'Brien is back from his month's outing in Texas. He spent the time mostly at the ranch of his uncle, William J. McMurray, between Corpus Christi and Oakville, Tex. It rained about every other day, but Capt. O'Brien managed to get in some fishing days, and some days at hunting.

He says fishing in Texas is great, and there the game problem has been solved pretty thoroughly.

"There are all sorts of deer, plenty of turkey, lots of quail and you have to kick rabbit out of your way," the Captain says. "You may, perhaps, think this gives you a right to shoot them as much as you please. There is where you make a mistake. You can shoot what you need for food. You can catch what fish you want to eat or use at home. But you cannot take or ship a single fish or any game whatsoever through or out of Texas. That check has been on for some time. It has had a wonderful effect in giving game and fish a chance to multiply. There is only one drawback about Texas. That is the rain. It rained the day we got there, and about every day after that. But it is a great State, and knows how to protect its game and fish."

Fishing Good in Spots; Ducks Plentiful Nearby.

The duck came down with the cold and drizzle of the week before last. They landed in great numbers in the sunken lands, particularly near Clay Root. The hunters who do not consider the new laws irksome, and who have not put their guns away because of the decreased bag limit, were rewarded for a trip there. William E. Fish brought back the limit in teal and mallard. He says the ducks were plentiful, and the few hunters who went down there were happy. Some fair shooting was obtained near here, in Illinois, along the stretches of marsh reached by the Iron Mountain Railroad and also north of here.

Fishing continues good in places. Stream fishing out in the State has been good. Some rare trout fishing rewarded Tom Warnock and a fly-casting friend, who spent a week near St. James and fished the run from Meramec Springs. Some of the speckled beauties lured by the fly weighed two and a half pounds. There has been some excellent fishing on the Current, White, St. Francois, Huzza, Niangua, the Pineys and Gasconade rivers. Lake fishing has been fair. Spaniah Lake is said to be picking up. Murdock Lake offered some good crappie fishing. Horse Shoe is coming back. Creve Coeur Lake is only fair. At Horine the Bell Lake people and the Windsor Lake Club have had fair sport.

The Kimmswick Fishing and Hunting Club members went to their quarters on the Iron Mountain through the rain of last Sunday. The men worked to install the new big ram recently purchased to insure a perpetaual flow of water into the lake and the women and children superintended things at the two club houses. The Tannhauser Club had a fine crowd at Wickes, and Cliff Cave and White House Slough, all on the Iron Mountain, were visited by fair crowds.

BEVERIDGE WRITES LIFE OF MARSHALL IN WOODS

Adopts Plan After He Learns Great Jurist Preferred to Work in Open.

DUBLIN, N. H., Oct. 4.—Former Senator Albert J. Beveridge has spent the summer under the great pine trees on his Mount Monadnock estate dictating a life of John Marshall, because, in preparing for this work, he discovered that the great Chief Justice did most of his work under forest trees.

Beveridge became an admirer of Marshall early in his law student days, and he wanted to know more of the man. He found there was no authoritative life of the man who built the foundation of all our constitutional law, and he determined to write one. All through his official career he was a student of Marshall's life and work.

During his senatorial days he was discussing Marshall's work with Senator Dolliver when it occurred to him that Marshall probably worked in the open and Dolliver agreed with him. Beveridge looked up the point and found that the great lawyer much preferred to work under trees, so he adopted a similar course. Four publishers have offered to print the book.

EVEN BANK DEPOSITS GROW DURING DROUTH

Kansas State Report Shows the Amazing Total of $118,000,000 in September.

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 4.—The deposits in Kansas State Banks Sept. 4 totaled $118,170,478.86 against $106,049,142.85, an increase of more than $12,000,000 in a year, despite the loss of the corn crop and serious drouth damage to the forage crops.

In the same time the loans had increased about $6,000,000 since September, 1912, showing a clear gain of more than $6,000,000 in the State banks. The National bank statement of Aug. 9 shows deposits of $71,000,000 in Kansas. Bank Commissioner Sawyer says:

"Since June, when the State bank deposits showed $111,912,346.26, the wheat crop has been harvested and much of it has gone to market. The unprecedented drouth has also forced the marketing of many cattle much earlier than usual and the increase in deposits comes largely from these two sources. The loans have increased almost two million dollars, which shows that the banks are meeting the demands of the people arising from the extreme conditions of the summer. It may reasonably be expected that the deposits will decrease from now until the next harvest."

Despite the many cheerful messages sent out of Kansas since the drouth stories spread, this bank report was an agreeable surprise.

"I HAVE SAW" COURSE NEW HIGH SCHOOL WORK

Indiana Pupils Also Will Be Required to Spell Simple Words and to Write.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Oct. 4.—Educational frills have been introduced at the Jeffersonville high school, but elementary studies are not to be neglected, and there is hope of the "three R's" coming into their own.

Spelling has already been made important, and every pupil in the high [illegible] part.

At the first test, though simple words were chosen, only one in five made a perfect score. Emmett Taylor, principal, also will introduce the writing drill and probably writing from dictation to test the spelling. Twenty minutes will be given to each subject.

The students are to be required to brush up on grammar, and the phrase "I have saw" is to be abolished if possible from the lips of graduates. It is likely arithmetic will have its turn.

Merchants in the city praise the return to these fundamentals and many who employ stenographers and clerks have been heard to remark that it was none too soon.

DEER RUNS THROUGH KITCHEN AND ESCAPES

Dogs in Hunt Lose Trail and Fail to Pick It Up on Other Side of House.

MICHEAUD, La., Oct. 4.—Capt. William Hooks of the Micheaud estate and his guests on a deer chase lost their quarry because the finely antlered stag ran through the Captain's kitchen.

The stag had been raised in the Micheaud forest and circled before the dogs, with the riders hastening to cut off points. Suddenly near the hooks home the dogs lost the trail and the riders came back.

There the cooks told Capt. Hooks that while they were busy about dinner the stag jumped through an open window, floundered for a moment on the hardwood floor and then dashed out through the door, heading for the swamp. When the dogs came a moment later they lost the trail at the window and were too excited to pick it up on the other side of the house.

BUILDING LEAGUE PROPOSES MAKING LOANS ON FARMS

Committee Instructed to Draft Law Giving Association Power.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 4.—A new solution for the question of farm credits was offered here at the meeting of the Missouri State League of Building and Loan Associations. It was the unanimous opinion that the building and loan associations should extend their operations to include loans to farm lands.

A legislative committee was instructed to draft plans for legislation giving the associations the right to operate in rural districts, and to work out the necessary change in the plan of loans.

The chief changes necessary are loans on land as security rather than buildings and long time payments rather than monthly payments. The farmers want loans on which yearly or semi-yearly payments can be made. The building and loan associations are not incorporated for farm credit business, but it is the plan of the league to have the changes for operation among farmers ready within a year.

J. E. Garm of Joplin advocated the extension of the plan so that farmers will be included as directors in the associations lending in rural communities. He said that the building and loan association carries the central idea of co-operation necessary for rural credits and offered the extension plan as a solution to money for farm improvements, crop movements and farm trading.

The committee appointed to perfect the plan follows: Leon Block, Kansas City, chairman; O. H. Hoss, Nevada; S. T. Gresham, Springfield; G. V. R. Mechin, St. Louis; J. W. Plowman, Hannibal.

AMERICANS AGAIN ANGLE FOR "GREAT BRITISH ESTATE"

RIVAL DRAKE CLAIMANTS

Ardr Undampered by Government Announcement That All Such Stories Are Myths.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Oct. 4.—Despite the expose of the Sir Francis Drake estate myth, there are many persons in this country who still believe they are entitled to great fortunes unclaimed abroad and that all that is necessary to collect this wealth is to get together some genealogical data and engage a lawyer to cross the ocean and file their claims.

A mass meeting of alleged heirs was held this week in the opera house in Georgetown, Ill. There were 100 present and they came from many points in Central Illinois and other states. Some came from Maryland, and Isaac Lawrence, came from Wichita, Kan.

The principal object of the meeting was the assessment to pay the expenses of lawyers. In addition to an appeal for money, the heirs heard a report from J. L. Smith and Thomas Smith, who made a special trip to London to conduct an investigation. They reported they found a lawyer by the name of Gunn, who was thought to have been the representative of the heirs. Gunn denied receiving any money as retainer fee to look up the case, although the heirs here insist that he was sent large sums. The Smiths dismissed Gunn, according to their report, and engaged other solicitors.

Estate Worth $100,000,000.

According to the story related by the Smiths, the new lawyers went over the records of estates and found that the Smith-Payne estate "was worth $100,000,000, instead of $90,000,000 as originally reported." The story of the additional $10,000,000 was heard with enthusiasm, but this was chilled somewhat later by the announcement that the lawyers must be furnished with a "complete genealogical tree," showing the ancestors of the litigants and the succeeding generations. The heirs were notified to make another contribution. All responded. The money will pay the expense of the Smiths who made the first trip over and who will go again some time during the coming month.

During the meeting there was an exciting argument between the heirs concerning credit for working up evidence. Isaac Lawrence, a Wichita man, asserted that he was the first heir to present anything tangible in the way of data proving heirship. He claimed to have devoted 14 years to this cause and that all records and dates were secured by him at his own expense. He asserted that he expected to make the trip to Europe personally, but when the time arrived he became sick and he sent J. L. Smith as his substitute.

Lawrence declared that his data and evidence were discredited by the Smiths. He charged that the Smiths threw away all of his records and documents. His announcement of this treatment created much ill feeling and two factions developed, one supporting Lawrence and the other the Smiths.

The Smith and Payne families, according to the claimants, are descendants of millionaire merchants of England, who died without near relatives, the distant relatives having emigrated to America.

According to this version, this estate is now in the custody of the crown and will be turned over to the American claimants as soon as the required proof is obtained.

PLAYGROUND FOR TWO LEITER BOYS ON YACHT

Youngsters Will Have Own Deck Space, Fenced So They cannot Fall Overboard

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A playground, 16 feet square, well screened to keep the two healthy and vigorous Leiter boys from tumbling overboard in their play, had been built on an after deck of the yacht Niagara before that craft started on a tour of the world Wednesday. As additional protection for the boys while on deck, special harness had been made, and they will wear this while at play. Long straps will be fastened on the deck, so that if a nurse or other person forgets for a moment, a boy will not be lost in the waves.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter plan to be gone a year, and the boat, which they leased from Howard Gould, has been stocked for a long voyage. The first stop will be Bermuda, and Christmas dinner will be eaten in Rome. Guests will join them at various points, to remain aboard for days and weeks, to suit their own convenience. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who are in Bermuda, will join the party in Rome.

FORCE WOMEN TO DRESS

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 4.—Charles Meyerhoff, a member of the City Council, says he proposes to ask the Council to pass an ordinance that will place restrictions on a woman's dress. He is especially against the slit skirt.

"Just think of the way women dress these days," he remarked. "Why, the other day I walked down Main street in a heavy overcoat and passed a woman who wore a skirt which was cut 'way down. The slit skirt is something awful. How would I look walking down the street with one leg of my trousers cut all the way down?"

GOVERNOR FREES FUGITIVE CONVICT WHO CAME BACK

August Koors, Who Gave Himself Up at Frankfort, Ky., Recently Pardoned.

MISERY IN STOLEN LIBERTY

Not Once in Years That He Was a Rover Could He Escape Fear of Recapture.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COVINGTON, Ky., Oct. 4.—August Koors of Covington is free of the shackles of the law and of his conscience for the first time in 25 years. A pardon from Gov. McCreary of Kentucky is the law's receipt for a penalty paid in full inside and outside of prison—mostly outside.

Koors was sentenced for a life term in the penitentiary for killing his brother-in-law, H. H. Bruns, in defense of his sister, later escaped from prison.

For nearly a quarter of a century he was a fugitive, harassed by his conscience and in fear of the law. In all that time he found no joy in freedom. He wandered all over the United States and South America. He had long been forgotten by the law, but conscience was taking its toll in remorse and ever-haunt fear.

Finally he settled in New York. There was a raid made upon the house in which he lived. Koors thought the police were looking for him, the fugitive convict. He fled to the Hudson River to drown himself. He paused to ponder. He tossed a coin, "heads" to the death, "tails" to surrender to the prison whence he had fled nearly 25 years before. Tails won.

So one day last July he returned to Frankfort and presented himself to Warden Wells and told of his escape. He had so long been forgotten that Warden Wells had to look up the records to verify his story before he would believe it.

Like Old Man at 53.

Koors was taken back to the penitentiary to complete his life sentence. Thursday, however, Gov. McCreary, believing that through 25 years of the torments of conscience, the man had paid in full, gave him a pardon. So he returned to Covington to begin life anew.

It takes August Koors four hours to tell the story of his life. He had just come home, after 23 years' absence, 10 of which he had lived in prison and 22 in the purgatory of remorse and fears of a fugitive convict. He is now 53, but his body is bent and his hair is streaked with white, while his hands are palsied. He easily looks to be 70 years old.

When one hears his story one agrees with him that it is better to suffer in prison than to endure the tortures of a stolen freedom.

The eyes of the man seemed always to be gazing into the far-flung vista of 37 years, as, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Hermann Munker, Erlanger, Ky., he unreeled the moving picture of his personal tragedy—the murder, the life sentence, his 10 years in the penitentiary, his escape, his wanderings under the lash of fear and conscience and remorse, his voluntary return to prison and the pardon, which the Governor of Kentucky gave the other day.

"I dared not make friends," he said. "The new friend might know an old friend of mine. He might be an agent of the police. For 22 years I was like a shipwrecked sailor on a desert island.

"Only of books dared I make friends. They were full of sympathy and consolation. They educated me and gave me courage."

And yet when he ended his social self-exile by confession he found the world more humane than it was when he withdrew from social intercourse with it. Hands were outstretched to help him.

A Good World After All.

"This is a great, good and glorious world," he exclaimed. "Even the prison is better than it was. When I returned I found that the lock-step and stripes had been abolished and that prisoners are permitted to eat their food with knives and forks like men.

"I was afraid of the rest of humanity so long. I am now a part of it again in my proper identity as August Koors.

"And yet I was never a bad man. I am speaking now of my dead past and, therefore, can speak without conceit. My mind simply exploded one day in 1891 and I killed my brother-in-law, Bruns, because he had been abusing my sister.

"I had served 10 years of my life sentence then at Frankfort prison, when I learned something that caused me to believe that perhaps my sacrifice of my life for her sake was not justified. I have found out since that I was wrong. Anyhow I made up my mind one day in 1891 that the sacrifice would end then and there.

"I was a trusty and had the freedom of the grounds. In the prison warehouse they kept the civilian clothes worn by the prisoners when they entered. I took one of the suits and in the vest I found a pair of smoked glasses. I put these on, too, and so completely was I disguised that I walked out of the prison grounds without anyone even noticing me.

Narrow Escape From a Posse.

"I headed for Louisville. Toward evening I was startled by hoof-beats and I hid in the underbrush by the roadside. As they rode by horsemen raised the ground about me with pistol fire. I escaped harm and on my knees I thanked God for my deliverance and pledged myself to His service. I have kept that promise to the extent that a man who is living a lie under an assumed name could do so.

"I had 35 cents. I boarded a train and told the conductor I wanted to go as far as the 35 cents would take me. Fear and remorse remained at my side.

"When a man is remorseful and fearful his imagination becomes active. His sense of hearing becomes acute. I thought I heard the people on the train speaking about me. I jumped off the train—and remorse and fear remained with me.

"And finally I got to Louisville and I crossed the river to Jeffersonville, Ind., where I suddenly recalled there is a reformatory, and, terribly frightened, I hastened through the town with remorse and fear at my heels.

"In an Indiana village I found a friend and he sent for my mother, who lived in Covington. She brought me $100.

"Then and there August Koors ceased to be. I became George Bruggen and remained so for 22 years. I went to San Francisco and got work in a harness factory. I had almost forgotten about Frankfort, when one day I met a man I had known in Covington.

" 'Your's Gus Koors,' he said. I admitted it. He promised he would not betray me. But the fact there was one man who knew who I was made me terribly uneasy. I moved to another part of California.

"In my years of wandering I felt in danger as soon as I made a friend. So I moved on. From California I went to Mexico, then to San Antonio, to Kansas City, to St. Louis, making friends and running away from them in insensate fear.

"About five years had elapsed. In that time I had written one letter to my mother. There came a longing to see her that was greater than my fear of arrest. So I returned to Covington for a day in 1896—and that was the last time I saw my mother.

"I hastened on to Pittsburg and then to New York. I lived in New York 15 years. I changed jobs constantly.

"I was working in Brooklyn, when, one day, I overheard my employer tell someone that he had known me a long time, but knew nothing about my past.

"I was frightened. Why should they be speaking of me so? They must be suspicious. I had stood up under punishment of fear and remorse so long. Suddenly, then and there I broke. I was stricken with paralysis. I have only partially recovered.

"Hours and hours it would take for me to tell you all of my story—of my adventures with remorse and fear.

"One day I received the first letter from home in many years. It told the news of home, some of it 15 years old. My father and mother were dead; my sister, for whom I had given up so much of life, was gone; uncles and aunts and many others I had held dear had passed away. I kissed the letter, carried it carefully concealed for three days, cried every time I read it over and over again, then through fear that someone would find it, I tore it up, crylink like a little baby that I must part with it, for fear that I would be found out.

"Nearly everyone whom I loved was dead. Why not I also? I thought. But I would die with a penalty unpaid. So I tossed a dime to decide my fate. 'Heads' was to mean death by suicide; 'tails,' return to the penitentiary. I tossed the coin 10 times and 'tails' won. So I returned to the penitentiary last July. The Governor pardoned me after I had been in the prison two months. At last I am free of fear and remorse.

"I intend now to redeem to the fullest extent the promise I made God when, as a fugitive convict, I lay in the underbrush by the roadside under a hail of bullets fired by the man-hunters."

MAKES $4970 ON 80 ACRES DESPITE DROUTH

Northwest Kansas Farmer's Profit More Than $61 an Acre, Twice Cost of Land.

SMITH CENTER, Kan., Oct. 4.—Here in Northwest Kansas where the drouth was as severe as in any part of the country, A. M. Rinehardt has closed his books for the year on his 80-acre farm and finds that he has had an income of $4970, not counting the pasturage of 180 head of hogs.

Virtually the whole 80-acre farm is sown to alfalfa. He sold 150 tons of hay for $1800, 475 bushels of seed for $2850, and 40 tons of threshed hay for $320. This Rinehardt figures as clear profit, as the increase in the hogs and other income of the farm from garden, poultry yard and other sources have paid all the expenses.

This leaves him a profit of more than $61 an acre, twice what the land originally cost.

Singers Sigh for Lord Lieutenant.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The fact that Carmarthenshire is without a Lord-Lieutenant has presented a difficulty to those who wish the Carmarthen Women's Choir, which recently won the first prize at the National Eisteddfod at Abergavenny, to sing before the King and Queen, as their Majesties can only be approached for this purpose through that official. Sir James Drummond, who was Lord-Lieutenant for 15 years, died June 15, and no successor has been appointed.

A Post-Dispatch want ad will sell it—anything, from a trunk to a tenement—from a range to a ranch.

SPELLS OF WEAK KIDNEYS READ AND SEE WHY

Some People have Trouble with the Kidneys every Autumn. They become frightened when the Symptoms appear. There is a reason. It can be avoided.

During the month of October the kidneys are especially liable to become deranged.

The perspiration that has been going on freely during the previous months is at least partially stopped during October. The skin and the kidneys are very similar in their action. They both eliminate from the blood, poisons. As is well known, the skin can act in place of the kidneys in a small degree, and vice versa. When one is affected the other is apt to be.

The sudden checking of perspiration during the month of October throws upon the kidneys the extra work of eliminating the blood poisons.

The crisp weather of October naturally increases the appetite. It requires some self control not to over eat during the first cold days. During the hot weather previously the amount of food consumed is much less than the appetite craves during October. This also tends to produce irritation of the kidneys by the excess of material in the blood.

Peruna is a gentle diuretic. It assists the kidneys in meeting the extra burden thrown upon them through October weather. It is well to take it, according to the directions on the bottle, during the whole month.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.—ADV.

Safe Remedies

Don't Neglect the Kidneys

The subtle and delusive character of kidney disease is well known. The patient and even the doctor often fail to recognize its existence until the disease has become well established, little thinking the backache, headache, indigestion, weakness of heart, loss of appetite and that tired feeling is caused from kidney trouble; the kidneys failing to perform their function of removing the poisonous matter from the blood.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy which soothes and heals the inflamed parts and gradually restores them to their normal condition. You can be among the thousands who have testified to their complete relief from suffering by the use of this wonderful medicine. It has been the standby in correcting kidney and liver troubles for 36 years.

"I wish to say that your remedies have been used in our family for about fifteen years. We are never without a bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy in our home, and it has saved many a doctor's bill. It is a wonderful medicine for all diseases of the kidneys and liver."—Florence E. Schmidt, R. F. D. No. 1, Dunkirk, O.

MRS. KELLER EXPECTED TO TESTIFY FOR SELF

HARRISONVILLE, Mo., Oct. 4.—At the opening of today's session of the trial of Mrs. Ida May Keller, charged with the murder of her husband and 7-year-old daughter, attorneys for the defense announced they would place four witnesses on the stand to prove Mrs. Keller was not in her right mind when she made the alleged confession introduced by the State.

It was expected the defendant would take the stand in her own defense and give her version of how her husband and little girl came to their death by blows from an ax on the night of June 14 last.

A market day crowd thronged Harrisonville and the small courtroom was packed long before court opened. As on previous days, women were in the majority among spectators. Scores of children took advantage of a school holiday to attend the trial. Defense attorneys said they hoped to complete their presentation of evidence today.

PERU OFFERS US BEEF AT 10 CENTS, RETAIL

WASHINGTON Oct 4.—Americans can have beef at 10 cents a pound, instead of the $1 price threatened by Chicago packers, if they will throw their markets open to Peruvian cattle, according to A. B. Leguia, exiled President of Peru, who called on Secretary of State Bryan.

Leguia says America can get the best quality of beef if they will only consider reciprocity with Peru.

He believes that the United States policy with respect to Mexico will triumph in the end. Speaking of woman's suffrage, he declares that this movement is practically unknown in his country.

After leaving Washington, Leguia will make a tour of the principal American cities. While in this country he expects to buy a supply of horses for his 400,000 acres of grazing lands in Peru.

GOOD STORIES FOUND IN NEW BOOKS

"A Soldier's Diary."

THIS book gives a light-hearted account, in the Irish manner, of experiences in South Africa (1899-1901) by Murray Cosby Jackson (late Sergeant Seventh M. I.), a son of Lieutenant-Colonel Halkett Jackson. He wrote it as he went along, and adorned the MS. with spirited, humorous pen-and-ink drawings, which provoke many a smile. He notes how Capt. Leigh in an engagement with Botha, was badly wounded, and got his field glasses smashed. Then adds: "Botha allowed no looting; he only asked Capt. Leigh for his field glasses, and was much amused when he found they were smashed by one of his bullets."

Cockney Tommy Reprimanded.

CAPT. LEIGH was explosive, and decidedly interesting, but he was the terror of the cockney recruits:

"I remember once a man turned out with a straggly, scrubby-looking beard. Now Capt. Leigh ("Buster" was his nickname) always liked us to keep as soldierly as possible, and made us wear helmets, and everything regimental, though he was not foolishly strict on trek; so when he came on parade on this occasion, and came to the man with the whiskers, he stopped and glared at him for about a minute, with his face getting redder and redder. Then his eyes began to roll, and out it came in a bellow:

"'Damn you! go and shave!! I'm the only Bashibazouk in this crowd!!!' (He always wore a beard himself). I don't know whether he got a D. S. O. or anything; he ought to have; he saved a gun on two separate occasions."

Oddities in War Horses.

THE horses pressed into the service in the South African war were strange and various. Sergt. Jackson depicts specimens vividly. There was one thick-set, cobby little mare who would always get herself as untidy as possible, and used to remind him "of a drunken woman with her bonnet on crooked." One of her favorite games was to refuse water at a dam or deep pool till there was a tight ring of horses round it drinking, when she'd lob one ear forward and flounder in shoulder over shoulder to see how many she could knock in, and then she'd stand contentedly sucking in water and dribbling it all out again, listening to the language." Then there was "a great raking black mare", that fell to the lot of a little cockney recruit named Van der Steyn, "that bounced him about like a pea on a drum." But Van didn't care about "bahncing about like a blinding pancake," so he swopped it with one "Chickweed." But the mare ran away with "Chickweed" twice in one morning, so there was more swopping.

Fouche and Napoleon.

IN his extremely interesting volume "The New France" (Chapman and Hall), W. S. Lilly notes that Fouche was the only man who had the courage to stand up to his imperial master:

"Napoleon, who, perhaps, was less of a gentleman than any man that has ever achieved greatness, took pleasure in brutally reminding him of his vote for the murder of Louis XVI.

"'Yes, sire,' Fouche imperturbably replied, 'that was the first service which I had the happiness of rendering to your Majesty.'

"On another occasion 'Duke of Otranto,' the sovereign said, 'I ought to have you beheaded.' 'Sire, that is not my opinion,' was the Minister's calm reply.

Tribute to Bourget.

LILLY begins his study with a review of the principles of 1789, which brought into existence a new France, and ends with M. Paul Bourget, who possesses l'ame moderne, and in whose works all the tendencies of the present epoch are reflected. He gives a brief sketch of two among Bourget's books specially typical of his view of certain tendencies of thought and certain social phenomena in the new France—"Le Fantome" and "Le Disciple." Lilly sets Bourget down as the greatest French novelist after Balzac, and contrasts their psychological powers thus:

"Balzac's psychology is that of the seer, the voyant. Bourget's is that of the moral anatomist. Balzac is 'the great inquisitor of human nature.' Bourget is the accomplished analyst of human passions. Balzac, as George Sand said, 'knew and dared everything.' Bourget confines himself to what may be called experimental or applied psychology."

The Insects' "Homer."

ONE of the most interesting biographies of the season is "Fabre: Poet of Science," by Dr. C. V. Legros, translated by Bernard Miall, and published by Fisher Unwin. Born as long ago as December, 1823, Fabre took to the study of insects by instinct—before he was out of petticoats—and, as so commonly happens in such cases, there was nothing in his parentage to account for such a marked bent of mind, or for the ability he has displayed in other directions. His folk were poor small farmers, and his early surroundings almost squalid, the winter evenings being often spent in the cowhouse in order to save fuel and while away the time.

From "Virgil" to Pick.

HIS father was the first of the family to take to town life, attempting, with poor success, to run cafes in various towns; and when only 16 he had to quit the studies which had taken him as far as the translation of his always-beloved "Virgil," and earn his living as best he might—even as a hawker of lemons or a navvy on the Beaucaire-Nimes Railroad. But the insects were his never-failing friends; and such was his general ability that, at this period, he came out at the head of the list in an examination for a bursary at the normal primary school of Avignon. After brilliantly retrieving a character for idleness, which his devotion to entomology had at first earned him, he left the school with his superior diploma at the age of 19, and commenced his professional life as a primary teacher in the College of Carpentras. His salary was only $140 a year, and his work hard; but his devotion to study never flagged.

Rich on $360 a Year.

MEANWHILE, he had married, and found the support of a family an increasing embarrassment; so that when, after more than one disappointment, he obtained the chair of physics at the College of Ajaccio, the salary of $360 came as a great relief. The aspects of nature in the Island of Corsica also delighted him; but fever played havoc with his constitution, and his appointment to the lycee of Avignon was most opportune. His salary there was smaller than at Ajaccio, and his family had increased; so that he was forced to add to his slender income by hack work; yet he continued his studies in botany and zoology, entomology in particular. Here he made the acquaintance of John Stuart Mill, whose generosity in accommodating him with a timely loan he has never forgotten. After 20 years, he at last broke with the ungrateful university, and removing to Orange, occupied himself in writing those brilliant textbooks of popular science which have held the highest place in French education for a quarter of a century. In 1878 the first volume of his celebrated "Souvenirs Entomologiques" appeared; and, as soon as his work had brought him in sufficient to allow of the move, he retired to the little hamlet of Serignan, where he has lived ever since, studying his beloved insects, and from time to time bringing out his monumental yet vivid volumes of their biographies. Only of late have the shadow of pecuniary worry and the chill of public indifference been lifted from him; but now, though past work, he is spending a happy and honored eventide of life in his chosen hermitage.

French Trappist Monastery.

"WAYFARING IN FRANCE," by Edward Harrison Barker (Macmillan), is most happily written. In the course of his wanderings from Auvergne to the Bay of Biscay the author shows us the people and their ways, as well as the places, which include the famous chateaux of Montaigne Fenelon, Biron Montesquieu, Hautefort. He stayed a night at the Trappist Monastery of Echourgnac, where they drain the land, brew beer and make wine. The father who showed him round the monastery explained that they gave help to the local poor every day—some thirty or forty—and that about the same number of wanderers stopped daily at the gate for bread and cheese, which was never refused them.

"Men looking for work?" I asked innocently. "Yes," replied the monk, without moving a muscle of his stolid face, "and who hope that God will not give them any."

St. Bernard Hospice.

ON the summit of the pass of the Great St. Bernard stands the oldest of all Alpine refuges, which for a thousand years has given help and shelter to storm-beaten travelers. The present oldest building, which was erected 300 years ago, is occupied by 15 monks.

The dogs, which are no longer allowed to search on their own account, but are always accompanied by three or four monks, are of the short-coated breed. The shaggy variety were tried some years ago, but were found useless, as the snow and ice clung to their coats and impeded their movements. Fifteen dogs are usually kept at the hospice. Of these four or five are females, which, in accordance with a wise regulation, are always kept to mind the house. Several pups are sold each year, the usual price being $40 each.

Today's wants point out hundreds of places where persons who must board can find real "homes." A board wanted ad will find your need if it isn't advertised.

BOYS SENTENCED TO ATTEND SUNDAY SCHOOL

Brothers, 8 and 13 Years Old, Haled Before Oklahoma Court for Stealing Corn.

DURANT, Ok., Oct. 4.—Among the conditions imposed upon Philip and Oliver Miller, 8 and 13 years, respectively, by County Judge Rappollee, when they were paroled after being found guilty of stealing corn, was that they should attend Sunday school every week.

"It is better that we fill up the Sunday schools with children than that we fill our reform schools with them," said the Judge. "We do not want such children in the county jail every week day when they should be in public school."

These boys, who live on a farm near Albany, were delivered to the authorities by a neighbor from whose crib they stole corn. They were placed in the county jail until a hearing could be had. Their father is "Uncle Bill" Miller, a respected citizen of the Albany community. Judge Rappolee lectured the father, who promised to comply with the conditions imposed.

Seeks Death in Children's Grave.

DUBLIN, Oct. 4.—At the funeral of the seven victims of the tenement house collapse, which took place in the presence of thousands of people, Mrs. Salmon tried to jump into the grave in which her two children were being buried.

No Fuss, No Pain, Sure and Quick. Nothing Like It. "Gets" Them Every Time.

You never used anything like "GETS-IT" for corns before! You're sure at last that every stubborn corn that you've tried so long to get rid of is a "goner." ROOSEVELT STARTS FOR SOUTH AMERICA ASSAILING BARNES

Former President Refuses to Retract Anything Printed in Speech He Didn't Make.

CRITICISES TAFT, WILSON

Plans for Six Months' Trip in Amazon Outlined; Wife and Niece Sail With Him.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The frank north wind that blew down the bay as Theodore Roosevelt sailed away for South America this noon had nothing on the Colonel as he expressed his opinion of "Boss" Barnes and told how Judge William E. Werner, Republican candidate for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, had sought the support of him and his Progressive party.

In spite of the fiasco of the night before, when, at the farewell dinner tendered him, copies of a speech he didn't deliver were given out officially as transcripts of his address—to his disgust—Roosevelt was as buoyant as ever when he reached the pier just before noon, ready to board the Lamport and Holt liner Vandyck enroute to Rio Janeiro.

He arrived in a big limousine accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and his niece, Miss Margaret Roosevelt. He found a host of relatives and others of the faithful waiting to wish him good luck. The gangplank had a decided upward tilt to it when the Colonel, who, if he gets any stouter, is bound to be called pudgy, puffed and snorted as he struggled up the ascent.

Says He Has Nothing to Retract.

When he got to his quarters he backed up in a corner of the drawing room of the suite which he and Mrs. Roosevelt had engaged, and bade the newspaper men come on.

He didn't back water on what he had written, even though he had not spoken it. He let it be understood that he had no desire to retract in his criticisms of Taft's Mexican policy or of the side swipe he had taken at Taft's and Wilson's attitudes in the Far East. Nor had he any apologies to make about what he had been quoted as having written about how he "took the Isthmus of Panama."

"As a matter of fact," said the Colonel, "I had intended to speak on these matters, but after the speech was written other subjects arose to claim my attention. I found that my original speech would take one and a half hours to deliver, and Miss Keller and others asked me to leave out the references to South and Central America so that I could give my time to the other topics.

"They suggested that I hold that back until my return. By so doing the speech was cut down to 45 minutes. I did as I was asked, and then, by some mistake, my whole original speech was given out to the papers. It was their error."

Accused Colombia of Bad Faith.

The excised parts of the speech dealt severely with the republic of Colombia, which he accused of bad faith, and also suggested that the same method of armed intervention as he had employed in San Domingo should be used in Mexico. He further complimented Brazil, Chile and the Argentine as being entitled to respect, but he had nothing to say of the South or Central American states.

Big as was the crowd to see him off, it was rather repressed in its enthusiasm. There was some waving of handkerchiefs as the boat backed out into the stream, but nothing of a cheer that would suggest the rousing send-off he got four years ago, when he set out for Africa. Nor did he get the salute of 21 guns that Governor's Island gave him on the previous occasion.

The Colonel will be gone six months. He purposes lecturing the natives of the three biggest countries of South America and exploring the jungles. He is taking along a complete equipment for his hunting journey, for he will try to reach places where no white men have ever been. Anthony Fiala, the arctic explorer, outfitted the expedition and goes with it.

Women to Quit Party.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Margaret Roosevelt will remain with the party until they reach the limits of civilization. Then they will come back home. Fiala will act as official photographer of the party, taking the place Kermit Roosevelt held on the African trails. G. K. Cherry and Leo L. Miller, naturalists of the American Museum of National History, and Frank Harper, Col. Roosevelt's private secretary, are the other members of the party. Cherry is an ornithologist, while Miller, who will be picked up when the ship touches Barbadoes, will look after the mammals.

In explanation of the lectures he will deliver, the Colonel said:

"The political and social aspect of the trip is the carrying to our brother in the South a message concerning the ideals of a new and greater democracy which have come into being among us here."

At the University of Rio de Janeiro he will speak on "American Internationalism." At Sao Paolo of "Character and Civilization," at Buenos Ayres on "Democratic Ideals."

President to Buy Wheel For Boy Hit by His Auto

Executive Immediately Lifts Messenger From Under Machine, and Physician Finds His Injuries Are Not Serious.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—While President Wilson was motoring through the southeastern section of the city early tonight, returning to the White House from a long ride through Maryland, his automobile struck Robert Crawford, a 15-year-old messenger boy, slightly bruising him about the knees.

Young Crawford was taken to a hospital at once by Dr. Grayson, the President's physician, who was along. An examination showed no bones were broken and that his injuries were not at all serious.

The boy was riding a bicycle and trying to dodge stones hurled at him by another youngster, when he suddenly swerved directly in front of the President's car as it rounded a corner. Chauffeur Francis Robinson quickly applied the emergency brake, stopping the car with a jerk before the wheels could pass over the boy.

The President, who was riding in the front seat with the chauffeur, was at the boy's side in an instant, lifting him from beneath the car while the secret service men disentangled the demolished bicycle from the automobile. Crawford's principal solicitude was for his wheel.

"My wheel, my wheel," he whimpered. "I'll have to carry the messages now."

The President promptly assured him that he would buy him "a nice new wheel" and directed Dr. Grayson to attend him constantly. The boy was taken in the secret service automobile to a hospital in which his mother is employed.

BONDSMAN NABS FRIEND TRYING TO ESCAPE FROM CITY

Arrests Him as He Is About to Buy Ticket and Takes Him to Police.

Chris Schawacker, a professional bondsman, personally arrested Ross K. Schutt of 3743 Delmar boulevard at Union Station last night and took him to police headquarters, where he is held on Schawacker's representation that he is under a bond of $800 on a charge of grand larceny and was about to leave the city.

Schawacker, who signed Schutt's bond when a warrant was issued against him several months ago, told the police that he had reason to believe Schutt was going away and that he waited for him to appear at Union Station. He said Schutt was about to purchase a railroad ticket when he arrested him.

Last February Schutt, who is an architect, 32 years old, was arrested at 5105 Delmar boulevard, where he lived, on suspicion of having stolen a diamond ring, valued at $800, from Robert Evans, a banker of Marble Falls, Tex., who was a guest at the Planters Hotel. The ring was found in a Seventh street pawnshop, where it had been pledged for $350. The case was settled out of court, Chief of Detectives Allender told a reporter last night, by Schutt's payment to Evans of $400 and a smaller diamond in his possession at the time of his arrest.

Evans is an uncle of Eugene Phillipe, a bank clerk with whom Schutt formerly lived in bachelor apartments at 3949 West Pine boulevard. He visited his nephew and was said to have spent $500 in one week for meals and refreshments for Phillipe and Schutt. His ring was missed after a dinner party which he gave to the two young men and others at the Planters Hotel.

Chief Allender said that after Evans departed for home, Schutt was arrested at the instance of a young woman in the West End, who accused him of having stolen the diamond he gave to the Texas banker. A warrant was issued and the case is pending. Chris Schawacker is bondsman in this case.

According to Chief Allender, a bondsman has a right to arrest at any time a man charged with crime whose bond he has signed.

"Now that President Wilson has signed the new tariff bill," remarked Jiggs Jr., at breakfast, "I demand hereafter four lumps of sugar in my coffee every morning, instead of two."

"On what ground," asked Jiggs Sr., "do you base such a preposterous demand?"

"On the ground that sugar, being on the free list, should be at least twice as cheap as heretofore, father."

"Your premises are wrong, son. Sugar, under the provisions of the new tariff, does not get on the free list until 1916."

"Then," said Jiggs Jr., in disgust, "let us arise and sing 'In the Sweet By-and-By.'"

MONKEY WITH RARE MALADY MISSING FROM LABORATORY

Inoculated Animal Disappears From Cage at Johns Hopkins and Is Returned Later.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 4.—A small monkey, which scientists of the Pathological Department of Johns Hopkins Hospital believe holds the key to the discovery of a cure of a rare and fatal disease, mysteriously disappeared from its cage in the Hunterian Laboratory yesterday.

Whether the animal was stolen or escaped from its cage and intelligently closed and fastened the door behind him remains as much a mystery as the ailment with which it was believed to have been inoculated and upon which there have been five deaths at Johns Hopkins Hospital in the last year.

Physicians and scientists all the world over, it was declared, have tried without success to transmit this disorder to some of the lower animals for the purpose of studying it.

The anxiety of the scientists over their missing subject was turned to joy when the Simian was returned to the hospital tonight by a man who had read an advertisement of its loss. He said he had bought it of a stranger Friday.

The experiment hinged upon the return of the animal. If the results are satisfactory, new and important truths to the medical world are looked for.

FAMILY REUNION IS PUZZLE IN RELATIONSHIP

Eight Who Gather in Edwardsville Don't Try to Solve Problems of Consanguinity.

Edwardsville had a family gathering yesterday where the subject of relationship was taboo. Not that it was an unpleasant topic, but it was too difficult for accurate designation.

Only eight persons participated in the gathering. They were Mrs. Jane Black, Mrs. Eliza Sauvage and Mrs. John Berg of Alton, Mrs. J. T. M. Crocker of Edwardsville, Mr. and Mrs. George Sauvage of Alton and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Crocker of Edwardsville.

The latter two were the host and hostess. The first four were the mothers of the latter four. They were also their four mothers-in-law, for each child of the mothers had married a child of one of the others, the romances of two sons and two daughters being thus involved.

In addition, one of the mothers was the mother of one of the other mothers, Mrs. Berg being a daughter of Mrs. Eliza Sauvage. Mrs. Crocker, the hostess, is a daughter of Mrs. Berg, and George Sauvage, one of the guests, is Mrs. Berg's brother.

There were a few other relationships in the situation, but the reporters gave it up at this point.

POLICEMAN IS BEATEN INSENSIBLE BY FIVE MEN

Attacked by Crowd When He Follows Them Into Vacant House.

Policeman Fred Sprague, 50 years old, of the Dayton Street District, saw five menentering a vacant house at Prairie and Lincoln avenues at midnight last night, and becoming suspicious, followed them inside.

As soon as he was within the door, the men attacked him. One seized his club and beat him with it over the head and shoulders. Others took his revolver and star and struck him with their fists. Then they fled, leaving him lying insensible on the floor.

Two hours later he recovered consciousness, and crawled from the house. His strength lasted until he reached a police telephone and asked help from his district. Patrolmen who answered the call found him lying in a swoon on the sidewalk beside the patrol box.

He was treated by a physician in the neighborhood, who said the policeman's skull was probably fractured. He was taken to his home, 2939 Aloer place.

KIEL IN SPEECH TO GERMANS SAYS HIS TASK IS HARD ONE

DELEGATES ARE ARRIVING

Celebration of War of Liberation Will Begin Tomorrow and Continue a Week.

Mayor Kiel touched upon the criticisms which Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston passed on St. Louis, in a short speech yesterday afternoon before the Missouri branch of the German-American Alliance, in convention at the St. Louis Turner Hall, 1508 Chouteau avenue.

"Mayor Fitzgerald was here a short time ago and told St. Louis of its many shortcomings," said Kiel. "The people in St. Louis don't admit we have any shortcomings."

The Mayor continued that the difficulties in administering his office are "very hard," and said that his policy is "to try to please the greatest number of people." He recalled the fact that his father and mother were born in Germany.

More than 200 delegates were present at the session, which opened at 2:30 o'clock and adjourned three hours later. Dr. Charles H. Weinsberg presided.

William Peterson of St. Louis declared that sentiment of the German-American Alliance is against prohibition and in favor of local option.

The Missouri convention is preliminary to the national convention of the German-American Alliance, which opens in St. Louis tomorrow, in celebration of the centennial of Napoleon's defeat by Prussia. Hundreds of delegates arrived in the city yesterday, and many of them were present at a smoker given last night at the St. Louis Turner Hall by St. Louis members of the organization to the Missouri delegates.

Immigration Almost Ceased.

Hugo Muench, former Circuit Judge, spoke at the night meeting on "German Immigration to the West." He said that immigration from Germany to the United States has practically ceased, and that "it becomes measurably more difficult for those who desire to preserve in this country the best traditions of the German race, and a satisfactory knowledge of its splendid literature, to accomplish that purpose without the aid of such fresh blood as formerly came from abroad."

Judge Leo Rassieur related the history of the organization of 10 regiments, 80 per cent of which were Germans, in Missouri at the beginning of the Civil War, and declared that the boldness of the members of the St. Louis Turn Verein in capturing Camp Jackson saved St. Louis to the Union. He declared that statistics show 176,817 men who were born in Germany fought in the Federal armies.

In the excitement of an argument against prohibition, Prof. U. A. Schuermann of Kansas City switched from German to English, while discussing a Kansas City ordinance proposed for the regulation of saloons. It provided that no saloon should be conducted within 400 feet of a church or school. He declared that the ordinance would have set aside 12 square miles in the city in which no saloons could be opened.

The exercises attending the celebration of the German War of Liberation will continue a week, closing Saturday with the unveiling of a monument in Forest Park to Friederich Ludwig Jahn, originator of the present system of physical culture. Germany will be represented by Alfred Geissler, German Consul at Chicago, who bears credentials from Emperor William. Austria-Hungary will be represented by Michael Ritter von Straszewski, its Consul in St. Louis.

Wednesday the Big Day.

The delegates to the State convention represent approximately 70,000 members of the Alliance in Missouri. The national delegates, 600 of whom are expected to attend, will bear credentials from organizations composed of about 2,000,000 members in the United States.

The principal demonstration will take place Wednesday, which will be "German Day." A torchlight parade of 11 divisions, with a military escort, is expected to have 15,000 marchers in line. It will be followed by festival exercises at the Coliseum, in which a mixed chorus of 2000 voices will sing German national songs.

On the program will be living pictures of the War of Liberation and tableaux by St. Louis Turners, showing soldiers saluting Columbia and Germania. The national convention sessions will continue until Wednesday at the Planters Hotel. Afterwards the festivities will be of an informal nature.

The Jahn monument will be unveiled by Miss Marie Stifel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Stifel. Mrs. Magda Schmitz is president of the Women's Reception Committee, the other members of which are Mmes. E. Goldschmidt, D. Schramm, H. Hesselbart, Anna von Hoffman, E. Richter, K. Polster, Bertha Lenz, H. Engelke, A. Stamm, S. Weber, E. Fugger, E. von Reppert, F. Borkseck and A. Fiegal.

PANAMA SHAKEN BY SECOND QUAKE, CANAL UNDAMAGED

Shock Lasting From Ten to Fifteen Seconds Rocks Buildings and People Flee.

CONCRETE WALL CRACKED

Tremor About Half as Severe as That Recorded Wednesday Night.

PANAMA, Oct. 4.—Another earthquake occurred on the Isthmus at 5:06 o'clock this afternoon, the duration being from 10 to 15 seconds.

Buildings were severely shaken, but apparently no damage was done except the falling of plaster and the opening of slight fissures in a few structures.

Reports from the canal zone officials indicate that neither the locks nor any part of the canal was damaged in any degree whatever.

The recording instruments indicated that the shock this afternoon had about half the intensity of that Wednesday night and covered practically the same area, with the central point of the disturbance about 110 miles from Panama City.

The instruments further showed that a tremor also occurred at 5 o'clock in the morning and that in all there were about 18 distinct movements.

Shock Felt at Colon, People Run Into Streets.

COLON, Oct. 4.—An earth shock lasting four or five seconds was felt at Colon a few minutes after 5 o'clock this afternoon. The disturbance was not nearly as sharp as that Wednesday night. Canal officials at Gatun report no damage to the canal. Residents were much alarmed and many sought safetly in streets.

The massive walls of the Panama railroad freight house, built in 1857, were cracked in several places as a result of the earthquake. A concrete building in the course of construction also was damaged.

Two Severe Shocks Rock Naples and Nearby Provinces.

NAPLES, Oct. 4.—A severe earthquake shock occurred here at 7:20 this evening. It lasted 30 seconds and was followed by another shock at 7:30. Both were undulatory and caused a panic, though the damage was insignificant. Shocks occurred also in the nearby provinces, particularly Avellino, where the inhabitants abandoned their houses. In the province of Foggia many of the villagers are camping in the fields.

ROBBERS USE PERFUME AS ADJUNCT TO THEFT

Pedestrian Says Odorized Kerchief Put Him to Sleep and Cost Him $155.

Abraham Mellock of 2232 Carr street related a story to the police of the Carr Street District last night.

He was standing at Eighteenth and Carr streets about 8:30 p. m., he said, when two well-dressed young men approached and one of them waved a highly perfumed handkerchief in front of his nose.

Abraham immediately felt a sensation similar to that produced when one falls into a peaceful slumber. He imagined the pair that had waved the kerchief picked him up in their arms and carried him through brilliantly illuminated thoroughfares. He was not quite sure, he told the police, but he believed he was carried over the proposed route of the Veiled Prophet's pageant, and at the journey's end he felt himself being deposited on a gilded and plush-covered throne.

Then he awoke and discovered he had been robbed of valuables amounting to $155, of which $55 had been cash and the rest jewels.

The strangest part of his experience, he said, was the fact that when he recovered himself he was stil standing on the same corner where he had been waiting for a car, when the two men with the perfumed kerchief approached him.

LANE BALKS; $7.50 DINNER CUT TO 50 CENTS A PLATE

Secretary Refuses to Attend Denver Affair Which Is Not Within Everybody's Reach.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 4.—Franklin Knight Lane, Secretary of the Interior, declined tonight to attend a banquet in his honor at the Chamber of Commerce, which was to cost $7.50 a plate.

Lane said that he would attend such affairs only on condition that they be given with the simplest formality; that they should be open to the public and prices placed within reach of everybody.

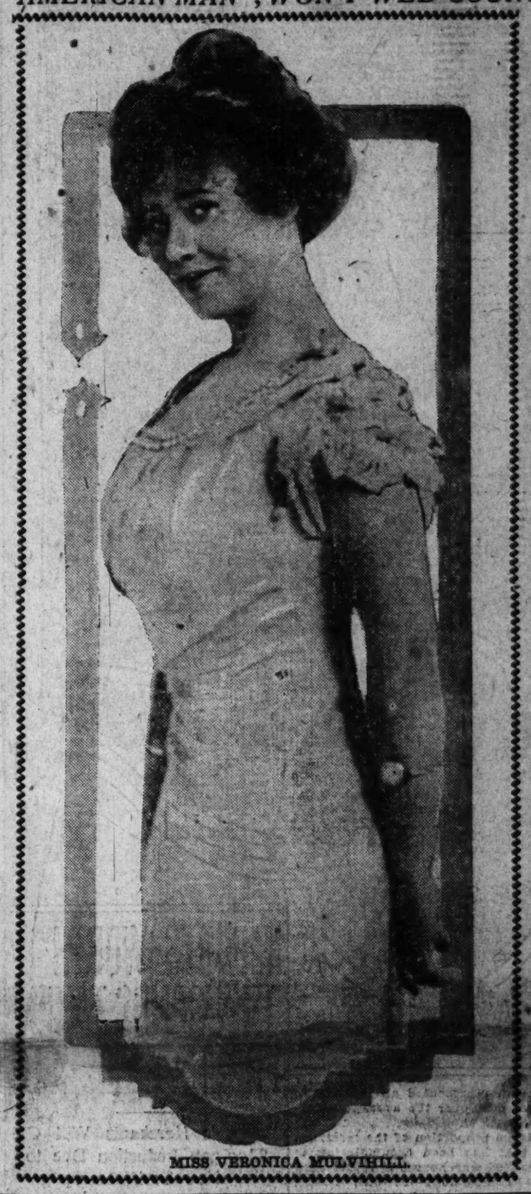
FRAM AT PANAMA CANAL

Part of Crew Which Was With Amundsen Is Aboard.

COLON, Oct. 4.—The Norwegian steamship Fram, in which Capt. Nilsen, the explorer, will go through the Panama Canal en route to San Francisco, arrived here today with a crew of 14 who accompanied Amundsen when he discovered the South Pole.

ST. LOUIS GIRL "STRONG FOR THE AMERICAN MAN", WON'T WED COUNT



MISS VERONICA MULVIHILL.

MISS MULVIHILL SAYS SHE NEVER HEARD OF PORIGIO

She Met Another Count, and He Was Very Nice, but She Isn't Engaged.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Miss Veronica Mulvihill of St. Louis, who went abroad quietly enough last summer with her father, Michael J. Mulvihill, returned today on the Victoria Luise, the belle of the ship, and was sought at Quarantine by reporters, anxious to question her on her reported engagement to the Count von Pergio, or Pergola, or Peristyle, of Austria, which was cabled to America several days ago. They got an emphatic denial, and the Post-Dispatch correspondent, who asked whether Miss Mulvihill was betrothed to Walter Schwars, a rich young St. Louisan, got the assurance that the two are no more than "the best of friends."

"It's not true. I'm not engaged," she said. "A Count? The idea! Never! I'm strong for the American man. And I had no accident, either, except failing to catch the ship that father and I first intended to sail on, the President Grant."

"Did you meet or hear of Count von Pergio, or Porigio, or Pistachio, while you were over there?" asked the Post-Dispatch correspondent.

"Count Porigio?" she repeated, in a reflective tone. "No, there was no Count Porigio. There was a Count Monperigo, at Carlsbad. Yes, he was very nice to me, and, of course, at Carlsbad, where people have nothing to talk about but their ills and other people's affairs, perhaps they gossiped about it. You see, in Europe, when a man wearing a title looks cross-eyed at an American girl the old dowagers over there get worked up.

"I wonder what Walter thought when he read those stories?" interposed Mulvihill.

"Yes, I was thinking about Walter," said Miss Veronica.

"You'll have to telegraph him," said Mulvihill pere.

"Yes, I will," assented Miss Mulvihill.

At the pier in Hoboken Safford Delano, a young man, came aboard and surprised Miss Mulvihill's first-cabin admirers by kissing her most enthusiastically.

At the Mulvihill home, 2414 North Grand avenue, last night, Mrs. M. J. Mulvihill said she did not know whether her daughter and Walter Schwars, of 4397 Westminster place, were engaged, but that Schwars had a telegram from the young woman telling of her arrival.

UNDERWOOD TO RUN FOR ALABAMA SEAT IN THE U. S. SENATE

Majority Leader in House Says Election Would Satisfy His Life Ambition.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Representative Oscar Underwood of Alabama today announced himself a candidate for the Senate for the term beginning March 4, 1915. In his statement, the Alabama Representative expresses his appreciation for the consideration shown him by the voters of the Ninth District of Alabama, but says that before retiring to private life it is his ambition to serve his State in the Senate of the United States. The statement of the majority leader follows:

"For the best part of 10 years I have served the people of the Ninth Alabama District in the Congress of the United States. No man has ever been treated better by a constituency than I have been, and in return I have tried to serve them faithfully and loyally.

"Now that I have determined not again to be a candidate for Congress from the Ninth District, I wish to express to my friends and constituents my sincere appreciation of their friendship and loyal support of my political fortunes in the past 20 years.

"With the enactment of the tariff bill I have completed the work in the House that it has been my ambition to accomplish. Before retiring from public life I should like to have the honor of representing the people of the State of Alabama in the Senate of the United States, and have, therefore, concluded to announce myself as a candidate for the Senate in the Democratic primary election.

"If elected I will devote my entire time and attention to the duties of the office and endeavor to faithfully and loyally serve the people of Alabama."

Underwood will enter the Democratic primaries in Alabama next spring with several other prominent Alabama Democrats, including Representative Henry D. Clayton and Richmond Pearson Hobson. It is understood, also that Representative James Thomas Heflin may be a candidate.

MONTHS REQUIRED FOR TARIFF LAW TO REDUCE LIVING COST

Representative Underwood, Who Helped Frame Bill, Says Its Beneficial Effects on Consumers Will Not Be Felt Until All Goods Purchased Under Old Law Are Sold.

TREASURY EXPERTS STRIKE FIRST SNAG

Five Per Cent Differential in Favor of American Vessels May Take $10,000,000 From Customs Revenue; Income Tax a Problem.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Just because the new tariff law is in effect people must not expect to find prices cut right away or the cost of living reduced all at once, according to Representative Underwood, one of the authors of the bill.

Indeed, it will be many months, Representative Underwood believes, before the effect of the tariff becomes apparent to the consumer.

"It is only competition, caused by the new law, that is going to reduce prices,' Underwood said today. "Goods that merchants now have in stock were bought under the old high tariff and until those goods are sold out the merchants will not accept the basis made by the new law.

"It will be several months before the effect of the new tariff on commodities is felt and in many cases it may be a year. Manufacturers who have large stocks of raw material will not make reductions until their stock bought under the high tariff has been used up.

"The effect on wool probably will not show until next spring, the full effect on sugar not for several years."

Treasury Department Issues Orders.

Treasury officials have taken steps to make the new law operative as soon as possible. Collectors of customs east of the Mississippi River have been instructed to work under the provisions of the new law beginning Monday. Customs collectors west of the Mississippi have been ordered to put the law in force on Wednesday. Copies of the law have been sent to every collector in the United States and to Treasury agents abroad.

According to Treasury experts, approximately $100,000,000 worth of merchandise is being held in the warehouses at the several ports of entry in the United States. It is believed this merchandise will be released beginning Monday and Wednesday.

Regulations are being prepared under the direction of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hamlin covering the tariff as a whole.

Officials Strike Snag.

Officials of the Treasury Department are puzzled by the tariff provision allowing a 5 per cent reduction of duties on goods imported in American ships, with the condition that the differential should not be construed to abrogate or impair any existing treaty between the United States and a foreign nation.

Literally interpreted, it is declared the provision would give a 5 per cent decrease to goods in American bottoms and automatically grant the same privilege to the same ships of many nations whose treaties with the United States guarantee no discrimination between their vessels and those of America. This construction would be a horizontal reduction of 5 per cent in the tariff for importation from most of the great countries of the world, and probably would decrease the tariff revenue by $10,000,000.

The question undoubtedly will be referred to President Wilson and Attorney-General McReynolds and ultimately will reach the United States Supreme Court.

Whatever interpretation is placed on the provision, it is pointed out that serious questions will rise as to 23 nations whose treaties with this country do not guarantee against discrimination.

The countries which would thus be charged the full Underwood rates are Brazil, China, Chile, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, France, Germany (except several German states), Greece, Guatemala, Hayti, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Persia, Peru, Portugal, Russia, Salvador, Siam, Switzerland, Turkey, Uruguay and Venezuela. Also the treaty with Great Britain does not guarantee equality of treatment for vessels of her colonies such as Canada and Australia.

Income Tax a Problem.

To collect the revenue from the people under the income tax provisions will require the work of many experts in the beginning and the maintenance of a force of experts all the time. William H. Osborne, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, began the formation of regulations and rules governing the collecting of the tax.

It is probable that L. F. Speer, at present chief of the corporation tax department of the Internal revenue division, will be appointed deputy commissioner of the internal revenue division and assigned to the task of collecting the income tax.

Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture today issued regulations covering the importation and handling of imported meat and meat food products to conform with the new law.

The regulations provide for foreign certifications as to ante-mortem and post-mortem inspection in the countries in which the animals are slaughtered. In addition, meats will be inspected by the Department of Agriculture at ports of entry before admission. Foreign meats, under the new regulations, after they enter will be on the same basis as domestic meats.

Diseased Meats Barred.

The general rule is that no meats that are diseased or which contain harmful dyes, chemicals, preservatives or other foreign ingredients will be admitted.

These regulations, unless otherwise provided, relate only to meat and meat food products derived from cattle, sheep, swine and goats. Products from other animals are regulated by the food and drugs act.

The Treasury Department is about to instruct Collectors of Customs to assess duties against imports from Germany (except Prussia), Canada and Mexico and other countries not having special treaty arrangements with this country, at the full rates laid down in the Underwood tariff act, unless they were imported into the United States in ships of American registry. In that case they will be entitled to a differential of 5 per cent.

The maximum duties will not apply to goods from Prussia because the old treaty is still in force.

The Canadian shipping on the lakes will be charged full rates for the cargoes imported into the United States, while similar goods brought across the lakes in American ships will enjoy the 5 per cent remission.

The immediate effect of this position is expected to be hasty application from the countries adversely affected for a revision of their existing treaties with the United States. Russia will also be obliged to negotiate a completely new treaty to replace that denounced last year.

Bryan Indorses New Tariff.

Secretary Bryan indorsed the new tariff law as the best tariff measure since the civil war and predicted the early passage of the currency bill.

"All who have taken part in preparing and passing it are entitled to great credit," said Bryan. "It is a better bill than we were able to pass 20 years ago, and I rejoice that present conditions are such as to make the present law possible.

"The Wilson bill was compelled to carry a burden that will not fall upon the present law and ought not to have fallen on that law. The Wilson law provided for an income tax, which was held unconstitutional by a divided vote, the necessary majority having been secured by a change of opinion on the part of one of the Judges between the two hearings of the case.

"The nullification of the income tax portion of the Wilson law reduced the Government's income until it would not meet the expenses of the Government and this compelled an increase of indebtedness that threw upon the bill an undeserved odium, which, together with the fact that the Senate deprived the bill of many of its best features, robbed the party of the benefit which would ordinarily have come to it from a reduction in import duties.

"Then, too, the bill went into operation at a time when financial conditions were bad and many attributed to the law defects for which it was not responsible.

Tariff Party a Great Asset.

"I mentioned the law of 19 years ago because it is the only thing since the war with which we can compare the present law. Both economic as well as political conditions make it possible to do more what could not be done then. We have, too, at this time, a solid party, which is a great asset. The President and the Democrats of the House and Senate have been in full sympathy and have worked unitedly in the accomplishment of this important work. They share the honors together and the honors are sufficient to give distinction to all who have participated.

"Oct. 3 marks an important epoch in the economic history of the generation, and I am confident that it will not be long before the country will be able to celebrate a second triumph for the President, Congress, the party and the country when the new currency bill passes and receives the President's signature."

$920,000 IN DUTIES PAID IN NEW YORK

Customs House Opens One Hour Earlier to Provide for Rush of Importers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—In anticipation of the rush of importers to release the many millions of dollars worth of imports that have been held in bonded warehouses awaiting the signing of the tariff bill, the doors of the custom house was opened today at 8 o'clock, one hour earlier than the usual opening time. At that time sixty custom house brokers, representing hundreds of importers throughout the country, were in line, the number increasing as the day wore on.

The additional work that was brought to custom house employes fell most heavily upon the Third Division, which exercises control over the bonded warehouses. There are half a hundred of these in this city, Hoboken and Jersey City, the contents representing the enormous sum of $50,000,000 of imports.

This storage represents the accumulation of many months. Throughout the greater part of the year the importers, as one expressed it, have been living from hand to mouth, withdrawing from bond only such merchandise as was essentially necessary to meet pressing demands. Now the doors are flung wide open and wholesale withdrawals brought the confident expectation that the energizing effect upon trades will be immediately felt.

Ordinarily the custom house closes at noon on Saturday but today the bonded warehouse division remained open until 3 o'clock. Then it was announced that there had been 4000 withdrawals during the day and that $20,000,000 in duties had been paid in. This sum represented an increase of 100 per cent over the average Saturday's receipts.

A large proportion of the merchandise that has been accumulating in the bonded warehouses is represented by 10 commodities—cottons, linens, leather gloves, leaf tobacco, silks, woolens, nuts, drief fruits, pickled fish and dressed furs.

There are hundreds of other classes in the long-dammed-up imports, but the foregoing list covers more than half of the entire value. As schedule K, which includes woolens, does not become effective until Jan. 1, it is not expected that much of this fabric will be withdrawn prior to that time.

Changes in Trade Conditions With Canada Are Predicted.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 4.—Far-reaching changes in trade condition with the United States, to the mutual benefit of both countries, are hoped for by business interests of Toronto and the West.

It is contended by local tariff experts, however, that the removal of the wheat duty alone by Canada will not secure free entry of Canadian wheat to the United States. Duty must also, they contend, be removed on by-products of wheat.

A close analysis of Clause 646 in the Underwood tariff would seem to make it clear that Canada would not only have to remove the duty on wheat, but also on all wheat products, before duty on Canadian wheat alone would be removed.

The chief benefit of the new tariff will be to Canadian cattle breeders. Butchers' cattle may go up to $7 or $8, says one local dealer. Herds are held up at border points waiting for removal of duty. The new tariff is also an advantage to the leather trade in Canada.

Berlin Paper Urges Protest Against American Ship Discrimination.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—In commenting on the new American tariff, the Taeglische Rundschau today demands that the German Government protest most forcibly and decisively against any attempt to deprive imports carried to the United States in German ships of the 5 per cent reduction.

"Americans," says the newspaper, "must be treated in such matters with an iron hand."

The other newspapers do not comment on the new tariff.

The Foreign Office insists that the guarantees of the "most-favored-nation" treatment contained in the old Prussian-American treaty is applicable in this case, but no special statement in regard to the matter will be made until the Foreign Office has investigated further.

Several newspapers comment on the enactment of the tariff measure as a great personal victory for President Wilson and warn German exporters against undue hopes of increased exports.

Several other Democrats are expected to contest with Miller for the nomination.

IMPORTS WORTH THOUSANDS TAKEN FROM WAREHOUSES

St. Louis Merchants Will Get $300,000 Reduction Due to New Tariff Law.

Imported goods to the value of several hundred thousand dollars were withdrawn from the bonded warehouses in St. Louis yesterday after the new tariff law had gone into effect. The merchants withdrawing the goods paid the old rates of duty, but will receive rebates when the official schedules are received by Customs Collector Gallenkamp within a few weeks.

Gallenkamp estimated that $1,500,000 worth of imported goods were in the bonded warehouse awaiting the passage of the tariff bill. He said the tariff reductions on these goods would amount to about $300,000. Most of the goods consisted of burlap and woolen fabrics, according to Gallenkamp. The reduction on this class of goods will result in a considerable saving to the importers.

Christmas toys to the value of several hundred thousand dollars were in the bonded warehouses here, Gallenkamp said. These will be released in time to be put on sale at Christmas and will be considerably cheaper than heretofore.

To accommodate merchants who bought heavily of imported goods to be held until the new tariff law went into effect the Government opened several new warehouses in St. Louis. Under ordinary conditions not more than $350,000 worth of goods were stored in St. Louis, Gallenkamp said.

Italian Exporters Expect Greater Business With United States.

ROME, Oct. 4.—The signing of the tariff bill by President Wilson has caused satisfaction among exporters who hope to increase their business with the United States.

In Italian exportation, the United States now stands third, being surpassed only by Germany and Switzerland.

Especially gratifying is the reduction in the duty on cotton, one of the principal Italian products, which, however, is now exported chiefly to the East and to South America.

BIG ESTATE UNCLAIMED BY DISOWNED DAUGHTER

Property Worth $500,000 Will Go to State Unless Woman Appears.

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 4.—Personal property belonging to the $500,000 estate of Alexander Duvall in this county was sold at public auction today because Mrs. Amelia Stevens, only heir to the estate, who married against her father's wish, failed to appear.

The sale was conducted by a representative of the Public Administrator to place the estate in shape to be handled by the county. Unless the daughter appears the lands and houses will pass into the hands of the State.

MISS BRITTON ONLY WOMAN IN AUTO RELIABILITY TOUR

She Makes 50 Miles an Hour and Changes Tires Unaided in Nine Minutes.

20 OF 23 CARS FINISH

Tourists Have to Abandon Hats That Are Blown Away—Three Tie for Honors.

Twenty out of 23 cars entered finished the 122.5-mile course in the sixth annual owners' reliability tour, held under the auspices of the Automobile Club of St. Louis yesterday. A crowd cheered as each succeeding car flashed by the finish line at Forest Park boulevard and King's highway, during the afternoon, at intervals of from two to five minutes.

The committee in charge of the run worked at the Racquet Club figuring out the point totals until midnight, when it was announced that there was a tie for first honors, C. H. King, L. Manne and Alvin Zucker each winning 998 points in the touring car class. The tie will be run off in a manner to be decided later by the committee.

At 2:55 p. m. the first of the machines, No. 4, a Locomobile, driven by E. A. Limberg, crossed the line. Other cars finished in rapid succession.

When Miss Ida Britton, the only woman driver in the tour, crossed the finish line, an enthusiastic cheer rose from the crowd, to which she bowed in acknowledgement. Miss Britton drove a large Pierce Arrow, and had four passengers in her car, Dempster Godlove, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Ustick, and her twin sister, Miss Ada Britton.

"It was perfectly delightful," she said as she alighted from her machine. "It was not at all tiresome, and the roads were in excellent condition. I thought only of making time, and paid no attention to the unfortunate chickens which I ran over. We made 50 miles an hour, and 40 miles an hour for 20 minutes sometimes to make up time to reach a checking station. I was a little fearful of the sheriffs."

Changes Tires in Nine Minutes.

Between Baldwin and Manchester, Miss Britton changed tires in nine minutes without aid. She has been driving machines for five years.

Two accidents were reported from the course. No. 9, a Mitchell car, driven by Dr. S. A. Van Hoeffen, with Harold J. Conrad as observer, and three other passengers, broke an axle just outside of Washington when going 35 miles an hour. The car lurched to one side, but prompt action by Dr. Van Hoeffen prevented an accident. The car was towed into Washington and had to withdraw from the tour. A Locomobile driven by B. Shinkle, with J. M. Rodd as observer, and containing two other passengers, dropped out just beyond Washington, and was disqualified for not reaching St. Clair, the third checking point.

An Apperson, driven by W. A. Meston, which started first, finished seventh because of two broken springs. Car No. 18, an Oakland, driven by Lee M. Byrnes, also broke a front spring.

Many hats from the heads of flying tourists were whisked from their heads and rolled to the side of the road. The hats had to be abandoned by their owners, as the rules of the tour provided that machines should be kept in motion between checking points.

Slows Down to Make Time.

The schedule time from the start to Pond, 23 miles, was 63 minutes; from Pond to Washington, 25 miles, 56 minutes; Washington to St. Clair, 21 miles, 53 minutes; St. Clair to Pond, 29 miles, 135 minutes, and from Pond to the finish, 23 miles, 63 minutes. Every machine was penalized one point for every 30 seconds it diverged from the time in which it was scheduled to arrive at the checking point. Some amusing situations resulted. Ed Walsh, in a Hudson, approached the finish about two minutes ahead of time, and slowed his car until its movement was almost imperceptable. He crossed the line on schedule time.

Bart S. Adams was the last to depart. Marked to start fourteenth, he was delayed by motor trouble and finally was towed across the starting line by L. D. Cabanne at 3:08 a. m.

As each car finished, it turned into Forest Park boulevard for the clutch test, in which the front wheels of the car were rested against an eight-inch curb. Failure to climb the curb or spin the rear wheels constituted a penalty. The cars next were driven into Audubon avenue to be subjected to a brake test. There the cars, after going 20 miles an hour, were expected to stop within fifty feet after a given signal.

How the Cars Finished.

Samuel Plant, treasurer of the Automobile Club, was chairman of the Touring Committee and sent the cars away at 7 a. m. Following is the list of entries, with the percentages made by each of the 20 who finished:

BISHOP REMOVES YOUTHFUL PASTOR TO PLEASE CHURCH

Appointment of Guy W. Holmes as Cupples Memorial Minister Is Revoked.

ABILITY NOT AN ISSUE

Stewards Objected to Preacher Because They Believed Him Too Young for Work.

Because of the objections made by the stewards of Cupples Memorial Methodist Church, South, in University City, to the appointment of the Rev. Guy W. Holmes, 25 years old, of Hematite, Mo., as pastor, Bishop E. E. Hoss yesterday decided to revoke the appointment. This was announced after the Bishop, passing through St. Louis on his way from Oklahoma to preside at a conference in Cleveland, Tenn., had consulted with the stewards. The Holmes appointment was made Monday at the St. Louis District Conference in Jackson, Mo.

The Rev. Dr. C. M. Hawkins, Presiding Elder of the St. Louis District, who announced the Bishop's action, said the decision was made without prejudice either to the character or the ability of the Rev. Mr. Holmes. A new assignment will be given him, and the Bishop will name another pastor for the Cupples Church, which was formerly known at University Church.

The young minister, his wife and baby, are with relatives at 5907 Highland avenue, and will await Bishop Hoss' order as to his next charge. He will preach tonight in Christy Memorial Church, Neosho street and Morganford road.

Trained in Speaking.

He is a man of unusually pleasant address, has been especially trained in public speaking, and has had experience on the lecture platform. He is a graduate of Henderson College, and was for several years principal of a church mission in Eastern Cuba, near Santiago. His health broke down under the strain of this work, and he returned to his old home at Hematite, Jefferson County, where he preached as supply minister on the Hematite circuit. Bishop Hoss was so impressed with him that, without consulting him, he appointed him to the important charge in University City, where a large part of a $150,000 building fund is still to be raised.

He said last night that he understood the reason for the stewards' protest was that they had not been consulted by the bishop about the appointment. "No question of my character or ability was raised, so far as I know," he said. "Under the circumstances, I am glad to be relieved of the duty of taking charge of the church, and the Bishop's latest action was wholly in accord with my wishes."

Voted Against Pastor.

The stewards met Wednesday at the Mercantile Club to consider the action of the Bishop in transferring the pastor, the Rev. E. T. Clark, to Christy Memorial Church, and assigning the Rev. Mr. Holmes to the Cupples Church. The stewards decided that because of the youth of the new appointee, his limited experience in the pulpit, and his lack of acquaintance in the city, he would not be likely to succeed in the difficult task of completing the building fund.

So they voted not to receive him as pastor, and not to co-operate, so long as he should stay, in the church's finances. This was an unusual, almost an unprecedented step, for under the Southern Methodist system the Bishop's power in making appointments is absolute. But as the stewards raise the pastor's salary, they hold a practical veto power, which is the more effective because it is so rarely used.

No services will be held today by the Cupples congregation, which meets in a storeroom at 6624 Delmar boulevard. Its building site is a $10,000 lot on Washington and Trinity avenues.

FILIBUSTER TIES UP HETCH HETCHY BILL

Pittman Unable to Keep Quorum and Senate Defers Action Until Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A filibuster prevented action in the Senate today on the House bill granting San Francisco the right to establish a water supply system in the Hetch Hetchy Valley, Yosemite National Park.

Senator Pittman of Nevada, leading supporters of the bill, was unable to keep a quorum, and objections forced an adjournment after a debate of several hours. The bill will be taken up again Tuesday.

Senators Gronna, Borah and Poindexter delayed consideration of the measure by objecting to many provisions. Senator Borah declared it would destroy the beauty of the valley and interfere with the water rights of irrigation farms in the vicinity.

ASQUITH'S 11-YEAR-OLD SON INVENTS GLIDER

"It's Excellent and Behaves Splendidly", Premier's Child Writes to Editor.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Premier Asquith's 11-year-old son, Antony, has written to the aeronautical paper, Flight, describing a glider he has constructed. He tells the editor:

"I'm afraid it is rather battered and warped, but for all that it is an excellent glider. I tried it today in quite a gusty wind and it behaved splendidly, banking up against the wind well. It rose about ten feet, then turned round and glided about sixty feet. If you send this glider down very hard and very much down, it will sometimes loop the loop.

"My friend, Robert Allardyce, is also sending a glider, which is very good, though smaller."

Silent Crowd Send Roosevelt on Way To South America

and at the University of Santiago, Chilli, the oldest university in the hemisphere, on "The Democratic Movement in a Republic."

Col. Roosevelt's voyage is the result of two things. First, an invitation from Argentine, Brazil and Chili to speak to their peoples, and second, the urging of the Rev. Father John Augustine Zahm, Privincial of the Order of the Holy Cross, who is much interested in the exploration of South America because of the little knowledge the world has regarding its aborigines and its flora and fauna. Father Zahm had hoped to go with the Colonel, but he must remain at his post at Georgetown University. He was at the pier to see the Colonel off.

The Van Dyck is due at Rio de Janeiro on Oct. 21, when the party will disembark. The naturalists will at once strike into the Brazilian interior, while the Colonel goes on the lecture tour. He will join the others later. He will stop at Sao Paulo, not far from Rio, where his son, Kermit, is working for a railroad.

On Oct. 31 he will sail for Buenos Ayres, arriving there Nov. 4. After a stay of more than a week in the Argentinian capital, he will go by the Trans-Andesian Railroad to Chili. While in Buenos Ayres he will present to the Military Club there, on behalf of officers of the United States Army, a statue of Gen. Phil Sheridan, heroic size, done in bronze by Gutson Borglum

He May Be Ducked in Task.

This presentation will be made to take on a semi-international flavor. All of the Government officials will be there, and a special review of the army will be held in honor of the ex-President.

Col. Roosevelt, always in search of novelty and excitement, will find both when he enters for the first time the dominion of Neptunus Rex upon crossing the line. Crossing the Equator is a proceeding of much importance aboard ship, and it is understood that the crew and officers of the Van Dyck will not take chances of offending their patron god Neptune by showing any dereliction of attentions to Col. Roosevelt. So he must expect to be whitened with flour and ducked in a tank, as were 12,000 men of the American fleet that he sent on the world cruise when he was President.

GRAND JURY WILL INVESTIGATE DAVIS' DYNAMITE STORY

Venire Drawn in Indianapolis to Inquire Further Into Charges Against Iron Workers.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 4.—The United States grand jury venire for the November term of court was drawn today on the order of Federal Judge A. B. Anderson.

"The grand jury, which will meet here Nov. 11, will investigate the latest phases of the dynamite conspiracy as brought out by the confession of George E. Davis, alias George O'Donnell, who was arrested Thursday in New York. The names of the grand jurors were not made public.

"We expect to make a thorough investigation of everything brought out by Davis' confession, which resulted in the arrest here of Harry Jones, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers," said United States District Attorney Charles W. Miller, "and we hope to have our report ready when the grand jury meets."

In preparing the case, Miller will be assisted by Robert J. Foster, investigator for the National Erectors' Association, who caused the arrest of Davis.

SEVEN PERSONS MADE ILL BY MERCURY IN BISCUITS

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 4.—Physicians believe that biscuits made with bichloride of mercury instead of baking powder are responsible for the serious illness of seven persons on a farm near here this morning. They are: Mrs. Barbara Knauber, 76, who baked the biscuits; her sons, Charles, 31; Joseph, 32; Albert, 25; Mrs. Tillie Schumacher and her daughters, Mary, 3, and Eleanore, 5, who were visiting at the Knauber farm.

When Dr. Walter G. Musekamp of Cheviot arrived he found the seven prostrated, some on the lawn and others on the bed and floor, but all helpless.

In the cupboard Dr. Musekamp found a bottle of bichloride of mercury tablets beside a can of baking powder, which was also in tablet form. It is believed the woman mistook the can of bichloride of mercury for the baking powder. Several biscuits were fed to chickens, a dog and some white mice and they died soon after.

OSBORNE PUNISHED FOR NOT OBEYING PRISON'S RULES

Voluntary Convict Reported Put Into Confinement for Insubordination.

JOY FOR ALL PRISONERS

Sunday Dinner Will Be Served in Penitentiaries First Time in History.

By Associated Press.

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Thomas Mott Osborne, chairman of the State Commission of Prison Reform, who for a week has been serving a voluntary sentence in Auburn prison, has been placed in confinement for insubordination, according to reports current here tonight. Day keepers coming out of the prison this evening made this statement, but as Warden Rattigan is out of town and his assistants declined to discuss the matter, details were unavailable.

Osborne took up his voluntary service as a prisoner to study the psychological effect upon prisoners of their life behind the bars. He stated when he began his "term" that he would submit to all regulations and would expect to be punished for any violations.

Sunday dinner will be served in all the State prisons tomorrow for the first time in the history of New York. In the past, convicts have had only one meal in the mess hall on Sunday, that being breakfast. They carried a light lunch into their cells to last them until Monday. Now a full cooked dinner is to be served.

TWO MEN HELD AFTER RAISED BILL IS PASSED

Wife, Asking Police to Hunt Husband, Prisoner, Unwittingly Aids in Another Arrest.

Patrolman Patrick Brennan, after he had arrested Louis Laffold for spending a $2 bill raised to a $5 note through the unconscious assistance of Laffold's wife, caught Edward Parker, charged with the counterfeiting.

Laffold tendered the raised bill when he bought a drink Thursday night at Joseph Saroglia's saloon, 710 North Twenty-third street. He was arrested Friday by Brennan, who refrained from notifying Mrs. Laffold at her home, 2319 Washington avenue. Mrs. Laffold had reported to the police that her husband was missing.

"Hasn't your husband got a pal that he is likely to be with?" suggested Brennan.

"Oh yes," replied the unsuspecting wife. "He pals with Edward Parker at 1322 Olive street, but I have just been to Parker's room and neither of them was there."

Brennan and Mrs. Laffold went in search of Parker, but he was not at home. Brennan found Parker in a saloon and took him to police headquarters, where several fine pens stained with green and black ink were found in his pockets.

Returning to Mrs. Laffold, Brennan escorted her home none the wiser regarding her husband or his "pal." Warrants have been issued charging Parker with counterfeiting and Laffold with disposing of counterfeit money. Laffold and Parker deny guilt.

FAMOUS SURGEON'S AUTO SMASHED, HE ESCAPES

Mayo and Fellow Doctor Get Into Reserve Car and Win Race to Catch Train.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 4.—While racing for a train today, the automobile in which Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., and Dr. Robert H. Babcock of Chicago were riding collided with a street car and both physicians narrowly escaped serious injury. They had been at the home of James S. Bell, president of the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co., who is ill at Lake Minnetonka, and attempted to reach Minneapolis in time for a train which had departed before their arrival.

With two other cars trailing behind to be used in case of accident, they started for St. Paul to overhaul the departing train at that station. In turning to one side in passing a street car, their machine collided with another car which the driver had failed to see. Their automobile was smashed but the passengers escaped injury. Stepping into one of the reserve cars, the doctors sped on and caught their train.

Dr. Mayo and his brother, both famous surgeons, conduct a sanitarium at Rochester, where celebrated persons from throughout the world are treated.

HUCKSTER SHOT RUNNING FROM THREE HIGHWAYMEN

Halted in Rear of Own Home, He Defies Robbers and Starts to Escape in Yard.

James Algoe of 1441 Cleary street was shot in the arm by one of three highwaymen when he was running into the back yard of his home to escape the robbers last night. He gave the police a description of his assailant.

Algoe, who is 67 years old and a huckster, was returning home with his wagon when three men stepped his horse in front of his stable door. One holding a revolver commanded Algoe to throw up his hands. Instead Algoe ran.

The girl is described as slender, with hazel eyes and brown hair. Her height is 5 feet 7 inches and she weighs 120 pounds. She wore a black dress

MINER, ENTOMBED 8 DAYS, IS WELL WHEN RESCUED

Pennsylvanian Walks Unaided and Pallor Is Only Result of Ordeal.

SAYS HE FEELS "BULLY"

Is Put to Bed Immediately After Affectionately Greeting His Family.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
CENTRALIA, Pa., Oct. 4.—Thomas Toshesky was rescued at 7:38 o'clock this morning from an abandoned chamber of the Continental mine of the Lehigh Valley Coal Co., where he had been entombed since a week ago yesterday. He was comparatively well when released from his underground prison and was taken at once to his home at Centralia, three miles from the mine, and put to bed. He had received food and drink since Tuesday through a hole bored through the barrier of coal which shut him from the world.

It was 7:15 when the last barrier of coal was driven away and Toshesky crawled through the opening from his prison chamber into the tunnel which had been driven toward him by eager, willing rescuers.

Seven minutes later a miner crawled to the mouth of the tunnel and called to the top of the pit for blankets and hot water to be sent down.

Toshesky walked with astonishing agility, considering his experience. The most noticeable thing about him was a pallor.

Entombed Once Before.

Toshesky climbed the path to the rim of the pit almost unaided. A stretcher had been taken to the foot and there were plenty of willing hands to carry him, but he would have none of it. Once before in his career as a miner he had been entombed for nearly 48 hours.

Half way up the pit Toshesky was stopped ad posed for a photograph, together with Dr. G. H. Fortner, who had been in almost constant touch with him since communication was established Tuesday night and to whom is largely due the good health of the man. Toshesky wore the broadest smile of any person when brought out.

"Hello," he said to everybody who spoke to him.

His only reply to questions as to how he felt was "bully."

Inhabitants of his home town turned out to see Toshesky as he was whirled in a motor car along the streets. His wife and five children waited for him at the door of his home. He got out of the machine and walked up the steps to his family, embracing them all in turn, and kissing the baby repeatedly.

Feared He'd Be Crushed.

Toshesky said when he was closed in he thought he would be crushed to death as several thousand wagon loads of coal rolled toward him. Continuing, Toshesky said through an interpreter:

"My dinner bucket and coat at the bottom were lost as the coal rushed. I had all my mine tools with me and my lamp was burning. I had a half quart of oil in a can by my side, and sizing up the situation learned I was entombed in a space seven by 15 feet.

"I had been entombed twice before and rescuers soon got me out, so I felt that they could take care of me. From Friday until Tuesday I was without anything to eat or drink and on the last day my oil gave out. I was in darkness. It was a dismal period then until the rescuers drove the sore hole through. After I got several drinks of eggnog I felt like a new man."

It was cold in the mine and the entombed man didn't have much room. He had a board arranged like a bench to sit on, but he couldn't lie down. If he stood up his feet got wet.

While he expressed a wish to go back to work Monday the physician says he won't permit it.

The work of rescue has cost the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. many thousands of dollars.

PAROLED NEGRO CONVICT CONFESSES BURGLARIES

His Name Discovered in Coat Left in House Leads to Arrest of William Wedley.

William Wedley, a "reformed" negro convict, who was paroled by Gov. Hadley because of heroism in fighting the fire that destroyed the State Capitol, is under arrest and has confessed, the police say, to many burglaries.

His name, written on the sleeve of his coat by a cleaner, led to his arrest. He left his coat at the home of Joseph Kopelowitz, 5857 Page boulevard, Thursday night, after robbing it. After the detectives had had the coat two days they discovered the name. When they arrested Wedley at his home, 4356 Lucky street, they found jewelry, silverware and clothing. A home-made "jimmy" also was found.

Wedley has served three terms for burglary. Three weeks after his parole he was arrested when standing in the hallway of the home of E. F. Smith, 4545 Berlin avenue, but was acquitted on his story that he had surprised a burglar and had tried to capture him to demonstrate to the police that he was actually reformed.

ROB MAN ON BROADWAY

Three quarters of an hour after William Sullivan was robbed of $3 and a watch in front of his home at Broadway and Wash street last night, detectives arrested on the same corner two men who said they were William Street of 2939 North Sixth street and James Coyle of 3628 North Twelfth street.

Sullivan identified them as the men who, at 8:30 o'clock, seized him and went through his pockets. They denied the charge.

Health Good? Pay the Doctor

Wisconsin physicians in convention will discuss a proposal to adopt the Chinese plan of paying doctors. By this system when a man is ill the doctor is entitled to nothing for services, but when he is well he must pay his regular physician for the boon of good health.

ACCUSED WOMAN DESCRIBES SLAYING OF HER HUSBAND

Ida May Keller Says Stranger With Ax Invaded Home While She Slept.

By Associated Press.
HARRISONVILLE, Mo., Oct. 4.—Mrs. Ida May Keller, on trial here for the murder of her husband, Arthur Keller, and their 7-year-old daughter, took the witness stand today and told her story to the jury.

A stranger to whom she referred as "The prisoner," had killed both Keller and the child as they lay in their beds on the night of June 10, she said. Twice during the recital she broke down and sobbed.

Mrs. Keller's account of the tragedy varied little from the statement she made to neighbors the night her husband and daughter were killed. She had lain down on a bed with her clothes on to put the younger children to sleep after Margaret, the daughter who was killed, had gone to bed in her husband's room, she said. Her husband, according to her story, had not yet retired, when she fell asleep. Late in the night, she says she was awakened by a noise and saw the stranger with an ax in the doorway between the two bedrooms, and as she arose the man struck at her with the ax and then ran from the house.

This stranger, she said, was the murderer. She denied that she had ever had serious difference with her husband. Several witnesses were put on the stand by the defense in an effort to discredit a detective who claimed to have obtained a full confession from Mrs. Keller.

LAWYERS HAVE PARNELL'S LETTERS TO COLLEAGUES

Irish Leader's Widow, Who Proposes to Publish Correspondence, Living in Retirement.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The promised Parnell letters which the great Irish leader's widow, the former Mrs. O'Shea, proposes to publish would cause a tremendous sensation if the right selection could be made.

Parnell's most interesting letters were written to his leading Nationalist colleagues, and these Mrs. Parnell has not got. Most of these letters are in the office of the late Sir George Lewis, Parnell's lawyer.

Mrs. Parnell has so completely dropped out of view that many people believed her dead until her recent announcement, caused by the publication of one Parnell letter by William O'Brien, M. P., referring to the famous divorce suit. She lives in complete retirement in a secluded house near St. Ives, Cornwall, and is now more than 70 years old.

Mrs. Parnell's brother, Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, who is now 75 years old, was thrown from his horse during the recent army maneuvers and sustained concussion of the brain, but he is now out hunting again.

Mrs. Parnell has never had any communication with her husband's colleagues since his death and only two of them have ever been her

ALL-DAY BATTLE FOUGHT IN SINALOA; GUNBOATS ON WAY

Rebels, With 2000 Men, Said to Have Had Advantage in Conflict.

By Associated Press.
DOUGLAS, Ariz., Oct. 4.—Constitutionalists and Federals met in an all-day battle at the city of Sinaloa today, according to tonight's rebel advices, which asserted the insurgents had the advantage, although the fighting was still in progress. The constitutionalist troops were said to total 2000. They were commanded by Gen. Iturbe..

Two Federal gunboats in Guaymas Harbor, are said to have been ordered south with troops to reinforce the Sinaloa garrison.

In the last week the Federals repaired the railroad between Empalme and Cruz de Piedra, but the constitutionalists again put it out of commission by dynamiting the trackage.

American Consul Simpich arrived here today from Cumpas, Sonora, having accomplished the release of James Bennett and his son, who were held at Santiago on charges of having fomented political disorders.

Federals Occupy Sabinas, Where Rebels Destroyer Railroad

EL PASO, Tex., Oct. 4.—Couriers from the front today said Federal troops had occupied the city of Sabinas, but that the Federal artillery had been left on the south side of the river. The bridge over the Sabinas River at that place recently was destroyed by the rebels. The railroad between Piedras Negras and Sabinas, formerly operated by constitutionalists, has been destroyed by the revolutionists.

De La Barra Tells Poincare Mexico Will be Strengthened

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Francisco de la Barra, the new Mexican Minister to France, in presenting his credentials to President Raymond Poincare today alluded to the civil war in Mexico in the following words:

"I bring to the French people the salutation of a brother people, which is passing through hours of trials such as those which occur in the history of all peoples. My country certainly will come forth strengthened from this painful crisis. The progress accomplished by my Government in the work of pacification has been extraordinary. The economic vitality displayed by Mexico and the patriotism of children are guarantees of this happy issue."

Years of Suffering

Catarrh and Blood Disease—Doctors Failed to Cure.

Miss Mabel F. Dawkins, 1214 Lafayette st., Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "For three years I was troubled with catarrh and blood disease. I tried several doctors and a dozen different remedies, but none of them did me any good. A friend told me of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles of this medicine and was as well and strong as ever. I feel like a different person, and recommend Hood's to anyone suffering from catarrh."

YOUNG MILLIKEN ON PAROLE FOR A YEAR FOR FAST DRIVING

Millionaire's Son Must Report to Clayton Judge Once Each Month.

John T. Milliken Jr., 16-year-old son of a millionaire grain dealer and mine owner, who has homes at 1150 Belt avenue, St. Louis, and at Crescent, Mo., must report once a month for a year to Judge Wurdeman in the Clayton Juvenile Court and convince the Judge that he has done no fast automobile driving in that time.

Young Milliken was placed under parole for a year by Judge Wurdeman yesterday. If he violates it by fast driving he will have to pay fines of $75 and $50 that have been stayed. He was required to pay the costs, $75.

The boy was tried on two indictments charging him with reckless driving. One indictment charged him with driving through Eureka at 40 miles an hour and the other charged him with driving through Crescent at 40 miles an hour. Prosecuting Attorney Lashly appeared for the State and R. H. Stevens defended. The action of the Judge in paroling the boy was taken without recommendation of Lashly.

The testimony was that young Milliken did not slow down for railroad crossings or sharp curves. Once, it was testified, he drove so fast that another occupant of the automobile fell out.

The boy testified that he had never driven faster than 25 miles an hour in St. Louis County, whereas in Colorado it was nothing for him to go 50 miles an hour.

Milliken's father told Judge Wurdeman that he had done his best to keep the boy from driving fast because he feared for his son's safety. The Judge said the safety of young Milliken did not matter so much as the safety of other persons on the roads and village streets.

In staying the fines and requiring Milliken to pay the costs, Judge Wurdeman remarked that he supposed the witnesses would not claim their fees, but they quickly assured him that his supposition was entirely wrong, as they all wanted the fees that were coming to them.

DISCARDED CIGAR CAUSES $18,000 FIRE IN ASYLUM

KANKAKEE, Ill., Oct. 4.—On complaint of a woman that she had seen him fling a lighted cigar into a bundle of clothes, James Dixon, former night watchman at the State Asylum for the Insane, today was arrested, charged with arson in setting fire to the institution's laundry building on May 24, 1912.

Miss Ella Wilson, a former attendant, gave the State's Attorney information that, after throwing the cigar into the clothes, Dixon had said: "Oh, well, the State is rich."

The loss was $18,000. Another arrest is expected.

ANOTHER SPENCER HELD AS REXROAT MURDER SUSPECT

Prisoner Closely Resembles Slayer and Was Friend of Tango Teacher.

PROTESTS HE'S INNOCENT

Tramp Finds Bundle of Dead Woman's Letters Near Scene of Crime.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 4.—Another "Spencer" has been arrested by the police in connection with the mysterious murder of Mrs. Mildred S. Allison Rexroat, the dancing teacher. His name is Edward G. Spencer and he comes within six inches of answering the description of the slayer as sent out by Capt. John J. Halpin and Sheriff Kuhn of Dupage County.

The latest arrest was made by Chris J Sioier of Assistant Chief Schuettler's office. Sioier trailed Spencer from a residence at 670 La Salle avenue to 3118 Prairie avenue, where he called on Mrs. Ethel Fowler. Later he left and was followed by the detective to a room at 1533 South Turner avenue where he resided.

Sioier arrested him then and took him to a South Sice Police Station where he is being held until Prof. Frank Oleson of the Felicitia Dance Hall, where Mrs. Rexroat was employed, returns from Springfield to try to identify the man. Sioier said today that he wasn't sure that the man he arrested was the slayer but in many ways he answered the police description.

Suspect Is Ardent Dancer.

"Spencer is about six feet tall and talks with a drawl," Sioier said. "He did not wear glasses when I arrested him, but I found a pair in his room. He is a fireman for the Chicago & Great Western Railway and formerly was a motorman for the Aurora & Elgin electric line. He lived in West Chicago for a time and there knew Mrs. Fowler."

The description of the slayer as sent out by Capt. Halpin states that the man is 5 feet 4 to 5 inches in height. The discrepancy in height led the police to believe that Edward G. Spencer is not the slayer. However, he will be held until he can be seen by Prof. Oleson.

Spencer is an ardent dancer and is said to be well known about the South Side dance halls. Mrs. Fowler said he had danced with Mrs. Rexroat many times. He is 30 years old. The police knowledge of the murder. Spencer is questioned him but he denied any married and both he and his wife are acquainted with Mrs Fowler.

A packet of letters which the pretty tango teacher was known to have taken from her trunk and to have been carrying with her the day she left Chicago, presumably for Wheaton, was picked up by a tramp at a lonely spot along the roadside not far from the point where Mrs. Rexroat was slain.

The letters were turned over by the finder to a member of the Coroner's jury, who in turn gave the bundle to State's Attorney Hadley of Dupage County. Hadley made a hasty examination of the missives, of which there were 15 to 20, tied with a blue baby ribbon. Whatever his discoveries were, Hadley refused to tell, but he hastily bundled the letters and sent a messenger to deliver them post-haste to Deputy Chief of Police Schuettler or Capt. Halpin at the Chicago Detective Headquarters.

It is believed the letters will throw important light on the circumstances and persons who figured in the movements of the murder victim just prior to her departure on the fatal trip.

METHODIST BOOK HOUSE ON EDGE OF TENDERLOIN

FREEPORT, Ill., Oct. 4.—Chicago matters occupied the attention of the Rock River Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church today. The conference adopted a report condemning the site of the Methodist Book Concern on the edge of what was termed the "red light district," and appointed a committee to confer with the general book committee about getting a new location.

The executive session of the conference took up the Wabash Avenue Church imbroglio and Marie Trinity Chapel controversy on suggestion of Dr. James Rowe of Chicago, who said he had business to bring before the conference which he did not wish to "get into print." It was rumored that the executive session would consider charges brought against three members of the conference, but this was denied.

Four young ministers were admitted to the conference today, D. H. Ross, Charles Deich, Harold Brett and Charles Patnam. Dr. Rowe said he would not vote for the admission of any man, no matter how brilliant, unless he promised to abstain from the use of tobacco.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

Letters That Showed Bartholdt as Lobbyist Glavis' Sub-Agent

To Hon. Richard Bartholdt, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. Dear Sir—I would like to have you use your good offices in my behalf in a little matter.

I went to Europe last summer under the very kind invitation of the North German Lloyd Steamship Co. and had a most delightful trip. I had room 199, I believe, on the "Saale" going over and on the sister ship, "Trave," coming back I had the same room. The arrangement was for my wife, daughter and myself, but they could not go, and the company very kindly took in my law partner, Mr. Jones, for the trip over, but he paid his fare returning.

I want to go to Europe again this summer for a rest, and I would like to secure the same accommodation and take my wife and daughter with me this time. I would like to go on either the Travre (correct) or Saale and have the same room that I had on that trip. I suppose there is some arrangement that under friendly conditions and circumstances they might give me something better than the full rate, and I would like to have you endorse this letter and send to Mr. Schwab and ask him to do what he can to promote my happiness in this behalf. I will take it as a great personal favor if you will do so. I would like to sail as near the middle of July as the right steamer could be reached.

Yours truly,
C. H. GROSVENOR.

Dr. George O. Glavis, Washington, D. C. Dear Sir—I respectfully recommend Gen. Grosvenor to your consideration. Any courtesy you may be able to extend to him will be highly appreciated by

Yours very truly,
RICHARD BARTHOLDT.

Committee on Immigration and Naturalization,
House of Representatives.
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25, 1897:
My Dear Doctor—Have seen Gen. Grosvenor and informed him that I had arranged that matter. Enclosed please find his letter with my recommendation. He will assist in the Kiefer matter and promised me to see the President. It will be well for you to again mention it when he calls, which he said he would do immediately.

Shall advise you from St. Louis as to my own affairs.

With best wishes, yours very truly,
RICHARD BARTHOLDT.

(Schwab to Glavis.)
March 27, 1897.

Dear Sir—I beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your valued favor of the 26th instant, and take note of the contents.

I shall ascertain if I can obtain the information you desire with reference to the agreement between the steamship lines. The agreement was made so many years ago, it will be difficult to find anything in writing or in print with reference to it.

I note what you say with reference to Mr. Grosvenor and entirely agree with you that we are not in this business "for our health," and that if Mr. Grosvenor and his conferees think that we are going to give courtesies ad libitum in return for such favors as the immigration agitation, tonnage tax and discrimination duties, they are very much mistaken.

I am, my dear sir, yours very truly,
GUSTAV H. SCHWAB.

New York March 30, 1897.

Dear Sir—I beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your valued favor of 20th inst. and note Gen. Grosvenor's letter. You are aware that we are now, and since December last, bound by an agreement among all the lines not to make any reduction below a certain minimum rate of $107.50 to London in the season between April 1 and Nov. 1. Under this agreement the best that I should be able to do for Gen. Grosvenor would be to give him a berth in the room that he had on the Saale last year on this steamer, July 13 from here, namely berth in room 199, for the minimum rate of $107.50 to London, or the whole room for himself and friend for double this amount. The regular charge for a berth in the room is $150, or $300 for the whole room. I leave the matter entirely in your hands to dispose of in this way if you consider it necessary; at the same time I must confess that I have little desire to accommodate the gentleman even with this reduction in view of the way in which the steamship lines are being treated.

I thank you for sending me the report of Senator Lodge and note that the friends of the immigration measure are urging Mr. Reed to permit consideration of the bill under a special order. I hope that Mr. Reed will withstand this pressure. Yours very truly, GUSTAV H. SCHWAB.

BARTHOLDT ACTED AS SUB-AGENT FOR STEAMER LOBBYIST

Letters Show He Helped Ohio Man Get Favors From North German Lloyd.

Further letters which passed between Congressman Richard Bartholdt and the late Dr. George O. Glavis, Washington lobbyist for the North German Lloyd, Hamburg-American and other steamship lines, reveal the St. Louis Congressman in the capacity of subagent to the lobbyist in the extension of transportation favors to a fellow-member of Congress.

The Post-Dispatch today prints a letter written by former Congressman Charles H. Grosvenor of Ohio to Bartholdt, in 1897, soliciting his aid in procuring transportation favors from the North German Lloyd. The letter was referred by Bartholdt to Dr. Glavis with the statement:

"I respectfully recommend Gen. Grosvenor to your consideration. Any courtesy you will be able to extend him will be highly appreciated, etc."

Application Referred to Schwab.

The Grosvenor application, with the Bartholdt indorsement, evidently was referred by Dr. Glavis to Gustav H Schwab of New York, an official of the steamship company. Schwab offered to make a special rate for Gen. Grosvenor, but in one of his letters made this observation with respect to the extension of transportation favors to Grosvenor and others:

"I note what you say with reference to Mr. Grosvenor and entirely agree with you that we are not in this business 'for our health,' and that if Mr. Grosvenor and his conferees think that we are going to give courtesies ad libitum in return for such favors as the immigration agitation, tonnage tax and discrimination duties, they are very much mistaken," indicate that it was not the custom of the steamship companies to extend transportation favors to Congressmen except upon a basis of mutual benefits.

The St. Louis Congressman's influence with the steamship lobbyist seems to have been of such character that his indorsement was sufficient to procure the "favors" for Grosvenor, as was revealed by the letters that passed between them

WORK MOVING FAST ON NEW $150,000 VIADUCT

Towers, Cables and Spouts in Place for Terminal's Union Avenue Structure.

Work on the new Union avenue viaduct, between Brown avenue and Bircher street, spanning the tracks of the Terminal Association, is progressing rapidly. The contract has been awarded and the towers, cables and spouts are in place for the pouring of the concrete.

The viaduct will be of steel and concrete, and will span nearly four city blocks. The roadway will be 60 feet wide, with a 10-foot sidewalk on each side. The total cost of the viaduct and retaining walls, estimated at nearly $150,000, will be borne by the Terminal Association.

Other work done by the Terminal Association recently was the establishment in Madison of one of the largest classification and clearing yards in the United States with 200 acres of ground and nearly 40 miles of track, accommodating 4400 cars. Utilizing this trackage twice in 24 hours, the new yards classify and clear 8000 cars daily for the North St. Louis, Madison and Granite City districts and for through freight.

WOMAN KILLED BY GAS FROM FLATIRON TUBE, IS VERDICT

Jurors Believe She Fainted, Disconnecting Rubber Pipe as She Fell.

A Coroner's inquest was held yesterday to try to determine just how Mrs. Elizabeth Thiele of 3113A Pennsylvania avenue lost her life through asphyxiation Friday afternoon. It was decided that she fell in a faint while ironing clothes, and that in falling she jerked the tube connecting the flat iron which she had been using from a gas jet with which it had been connected. The escaping gas fumes asphyxiated Mrs. Thiele before her husband found her.

According to testimony at the inquest Mrs. Thiele had been subject to fainting spells. She was 23 years old. The verdict stated death was the result of an accident.

The iron used by Mrs. Thiele was heated by a tiny blue flame supplied by gas from a wall jet, a tube carrying the fumes from the jet to the iron. While at work on some clothes it was surmised, she became exhausted and in falling knocked the tube from the gas jet.

Although the kitchen window was open at the time, the fumes smothered Mrs. Thiele and she was dead when her husband, William Thiele, returned from his work shortly after 6 p. m.

Mrs. Thiele's daughter, 3 years old, had been sent to a neighbor's house for the afternoon, and the child was waiting to be called by her mother when the father returned.

Old Age Pension Fraud.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—James Ramsey, of Grove street, Newcastle, was fined $25 and costs at Newcastle Police Court for obtaining an old-age pension by representing that he had no investments, that his wife had no means, and that they were entirely dependent upon their children, when they had investments in various building societies to the extent of $7000.

ALLOONISTS GET READY FOR WORLD CUP RACE AT PARIS

merica Will Have Two Entries in International Contest Next Week.

EGOUD TO MAKE TOUR

nsational French Aviator to Visit United States After Long Trip.

pecial Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World

PARIS, Oct. 4.—The next important ent in aeronautics will be the balon race for the International Cup arting from the Tuileries Gardens e week from tomorrow. The comting countries will be the United ates, France, England, Belgium, ermany and Switzerland.

France, the present cup holder, is be represented by the pilots aurice Blenaime, LeBlanc and Rumemayer.

A letter just received in Paris indicates that the Kansas City Aero ub, one of the winners of the merican elimination race, will not nd pilot John Watt's balloon, so e United States will only be represented by R. H. Upson and Capt. H. Honeywell. Upson is already here aking preliminary flights.

Most of the visitors, including mbassador Herrick and United tates military attache, Lieut. Col. antley Mott, have returned from the heims aviation meeting.

Pegoud Plans Long Tour.

It is stated today that the wonderul French aviator Pegoud, who flies pside down, loops the loop and performs other astonishing feats in the r, will leave Paris this month, first isiting Budapest, Vienna and the hief cities of Spain, India and ustralia before going to America.

The greatest importance is attached y the scientific world here to the tability experiments by Aviator oreau, who has invented a system f automatic stability enabling the viator to fly great distances, even in igh winds, without controlling the machine at all. This automatic conrol is achieved by means of an osillating seat suspended below the ings, the weight of the pilot thus erving as a pendulum, which autoatically governs the machine's balance.

The new method will also enable a ingle aviator to go up in the fast rmy aeroplanes for military reconsoitering. Now two men are needed, ne to run the machine, the other to bserve the enemy.

The scientific writer of the Temps ttaches such importance to Moreau's iscovery that he asks the public to ontribute money so that Moreau, who is poor, may continue his experiments.

Guillaux Loses Cup.

The Pommery Cup for long distance ights has been taken away from Guillaux and given to Brindejonc des Moulinais on the discovery of an error in the name of the town where Guillaux descended on his flight from Biarritz. This town was Brakel, Westphalia, not Broekel, Hanover, the two places being 40 miles apart. Brindejonc's flight from Villacoublay to Warsaw has been adjudged the greatest day's aerial journey recorded.

It has been decided to commemorate Roland Garro's great trans-Mediterranean flight by erecting a marble column bearing an inscribed bronze plate on the spot where the aviator began his journey at St. Raphael, South France.

Charles T. Weymann, the American aviator, is making experimental flights at Chalons with an armored aeroplane of his own design and construction. The machine is protected by a bullet-proof metal casing and the aviator is covered with a shield so made that it can be readily dismounted for transport. The aeroplane is fitted with a motor magneto oil pump placed in a special framework allowing rapid changing to a new set of wings.

BARRIE IN 'HALF-AN-HOUR' HAS MANY PROBLEM PLAYS

One-Act Thriller Grips Audience but Admirers Lament Crude, Potted Drama.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Sir James M. Barrie's one-act thriller "Half an Hour," has made a big hit at the Hippodrome. The piece contains enough to fit out several problem plays, but Barrie's admirers lament that he should condescend to this species of crude potted drama, however powerful.

The piece does not occupy 30 minutes, and it grips the audience from beginning to end as they watch the whirlwind of emotions depicted.

Sir James' alterations to "The Adored One" have turned what promised to be a failure into a success, and the piece is now drawing good houses, though here again critics deplore that he should have bowed to the mandates of Philistinism, which was unable to appreciate the delicate art of the first version. The original fault of the play was its unreality. The new version, although fantastic, has some elements of stage probability about it.

"My Life a Martyrdom No Love No Luxury"

'Smartest Woman Student' Denies Fraud Charge

Victim of Hypocrites, She Says

Missouri Teacher, Who Won World's Scholarship Prize, Tells of Sacrifices.

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Mabel Sturtevant, L. L. B., hailed as "the smartest girl in the world" as the first winner of the Braun scholarship prize, admits that she is a poor financier. Upon this hypothesis she excuses failure to pay back loans from prominent society women and commissions on the sales of books due to struggling college women. Her case presents an interesting study in psychology.

Miss Sturtevant has recovered from the shock caused by her arrest by postoffice inspectors on the charge of using the mails to defraud, and is able and willing to discuss freely the unfortunate affairs of the "Associated College Women Workers," an organization of which she was head. It was through this organization that she solicited loans from wealthy women to aid the girls to make their way through college, but practically all of the money (about $2300) according to the postal authorities, went into her pockets, for, so far as can be learned, she was the organization.

"All the money that is taken in on accounts collectable in the administrations of my affairs will go to the college girls," she said. "The society women who contributed won't get any money—not one cent—until my obligations to the girls are met.

Nothing has thus far been found to show what disposition was made of the money contributed to the cause of the "Associated College Women Workers." There was a suspicion that Miss Sturtevant might have had some financial dealings with the Sioux Indian, "Curley, the Crow," who claims to be a survivor, and the only one of the Custer massacre, because he was employed by the soldiers as a guide and scout at the time of the battle of the Little Big Horn. Miss Sturtevant, however, denied this. She says that the visits of the Indian to her office and boarding place, 614 Garfield place, Evanston, concerned a biography which she was to write for the Indian.

Fourteen years ago Mabel Sturtevant, who is 29 years old, was an ordinary Missouri country school girl, attending one of the rural schools in Linn County. Her parents were poor and the daughter had no exceptional advantage, except her ability for labor and a consuming desire to excel. She got through the eight-year course in the public schools in five years, heading her classes all the way. Then the mother moved to Brookfield, Mo., where Mabel was sent to high school. She finished the four-years' course in three years, winning the curator's scholarship at the University of Missouri.

Then she went to Columbia, Mo., and began at once the law and academic course. In two and one-half years she finished the three years' course, took the final examination and qualified for a prize which entitled her to three months' travel in Europe. She spent the following summer abroad and returned to the university in the fall for post-graduate work. In Europe Miss Sturtevant learned of the will of the late William Braun, a wealthy Englishman, who left his fortune to encourage travel and study by students of remarkable attainments.

The will provided specifically that the annual prize shall be between $2500 and $3000 for the graduate of any university who shall make the highest general average in a contest for the prize, competition open to the world. Miss Sturtevant came out considerably ahead of all other competitors.

Miss Sturtevant tells her own story: "This arrest and notoriety is awful.. They are the outcome of trying to deny myself and help others, the others being the most deceitful and hypocritical women—women who want to work their way through college and still eat cream puffs and crackers, while I know from bitter experience that it can't be done.

"After eating the most wretched meals and doing all my own washing, and wearing rags, in order to get my education, I come to this terrible plight through women who would rather have a new hat than a new book. I am honest and I can prove that I am. It all happened because I meant well, but was no business woman.

Clothes Cost $10 a Year.

"Why, I can say without a regret that I was a wretched looking high school girl, and wish you could see the girls here in Chicago that I have been trying to help. They have silk stockings and fancy pumps, and silt skirts and picture hats and frequently go to the matinee and eat fancy food at downtown lunchrooms.

"I wonder why I would take donations that were meant for the other girls, or hold back their salaries? What would I get out ofit? I have no money; I have no clothes. I do well if I get two meals a day.

"When I was a child my mother supported me. My father and mother had trouble and the burden of my support fell upon my mother. I finished grammar school in five years, and at 15 went to high school in Brookfield, Mo., where we lived. The first two years in high school I supported myself by working all summer and canvassing.

"I taught in the grade schools of Brookfield for two years, and then in the entire four years of work I had accumulated $1600 with which to go to college.

"I must have had a better business head then or luck was with me, for with $1500 I bought a little house in Columbia, Mo., and with the other $100 I furnished part of it. I rented the rooms and lived in two of them with other people who rented of me. The rent was a sure income, and at the end of my college course I sold the property for $1800. Which wasn't a bad business deal. During that college term, which by hard work I shortened from four years to three, I lived on $8 a month. I suppose you wonder at that, but I did it, and had meat twice a week. I never drink hot drinks, and I made my own bread.

"The first year at college I didn't pay any tuitition, as I had won a scholarship to the institution. Then I assisted in the recorder's office and in the art gallery. Besides meeting expenses I sent my mother $80 the first year I was away.

"The second year I doubled my course and finished a three-year law course in two and a half years, carrying academic work with it.

Has Had No Love or Luxury.

"Why, I haven't had romance or love or any of the luxuries other women enjoy, except the mental ones. I've been so busy that I haven't had time to keep up old friendships. I haven't ever developed a taste for silk stockings and fried chicken, so I'd hardly begin to steal other people's money to buy them. The only thing I have ever worked for was an education, and I had all of that I wanted without dishonesty. I worked harder than anybody realizes for everything I learned, and I hope that disgrace is not what it has brought me.

"When I started the association to help other girls who were getting through college, I did so because I knew of the financial hardships. The six of us who started the scheme were working all the while, and got nothing out of it. So we must have done that it might be a big thing to come to a big field like Chicago and start an association under the name of the 'Associated College Women Workers.' I used the money that I got from my home in Columbia to buy furniture for the offices, and to start things rolling.

"Some of the girls who came for help were helpless and couldn't do a thing. Some of them made fancy work and we sold that and took 5 per ent for the association. Then we took 10 per cent. Some of the girls did typewriting and some tinted post cards.

"The Cook County Cook Book was ordered and the girls began to take orders. I was paying their expenses all the while and promising them 50 per cent of the sales. The other 50 was to pay for printing and their salaries, while the girls were collecting the receipts. The books were promised by June 1. The printing company did not deliver them until the middle of July, and, woman fashion, half the women rejected them. The orders were worthless, as they were not signed. Some of the people had moved.

Tells "How Silly She Was."

"To show you how silly I was, I had sold 3000 books, which meant $5000. The girls who expected tuition paid were about twenty, and the tuition would amount to $5000. That left nothing for my book expenses. I tried to pay them and stand off the publishers. I was completely overwhelmed with the outcome. It astonished me more than it did them.

"The whole trouble is the girls needed someone to manage them and their expenditures. I tried to, and you see the trouble I am in. One girl to whom I gave $50, Miss Josephine Mack, spent the entire $50 on finery. It was an outrage, to my mind, to put all that into clothes when she was trying to get through school.

"I attribute the whole thing to Miss Abigail Shipley of Oak Park, who started a year ago to make trouble for me.

"She had in mind the starting of another such organization, and that was the cause of it. She sold books and came in and demanded money, and she got it. None of them thought of what was going to happen to me. When they all came and wanted money I was face to face with the trouble. I didn't imagine they would have me arrested, for I didn't know I had done wrong.

"I have worn my health away working to make good. Oh, nobody knows until they have had the courage to stick to it for 10 years what getting an education under difficulties means! It means starving and scrimping and going in rags and having other girls criticise the clothes you wear, while you are comforting yourself that it is better to get wisdom than millinery.

WIFE KNEW PLAN TO KILL HUSBAND; DIDN'T TELL HIM

Officers Believe Failure to Repeat Threat of Brother-in-Law Mere Indifference.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BENTON, La., Oct. 4.—The curious triangle which resulted in the shooting of C. A. Carlisle by his brother-in-law, "Boss" Chappell, and the subsequent arrest of Mrs. Carlisle and Chappell, is puzzling the local authorities.

No suspicion is entertained that the relations of Mrs. Carlisle and Chappell were questionable or that prior to warning him that Carlisle had decreed that he must die by a specified date, she extended more courtesy to him than was due to a brother-in-law.

The peculiar feature is that after she had warned Chappell that he was to be killed because his calf had broken into Carlisle's field, she did not tell her husband that Chappell had replied that he would kill Carlisle first by shooting him the next day. Mrs. Carlisle went home and the next day accompanied her husband to their cotton field and saw Chappell shoot her husband. After Chappell had left the farm she gave an alarm.

No Remorse Over Death.

The officials believe that Mrs. Carlisle's position in the affair is due to indifference toward her husband and the constant warfare in the family. She displays little spirit, no remorse over her husband's death and only slight interest in Chappell. She tells her story freely; how she warned Chappell and later saw him kill her husband.

She declares she did not see Chappell approach them in the field and knew of his presence only when she heard the click of the lock spring as he cocked his gun and had no chance to stop him or to warn Carlisle. She says that earlier in the day Chappell and her husband worked together mending a line fence.

Carlisle was known as a dangerous man. Several years ago he beat his father-in-law, named Bounds, and that night was shot as he sat at his home. He always blamed Chappell for this wound. Chappell denies he shot Carlisle at that time.

Neighbor of Enemy.

After recovering from his wound, Carlisle removed from this neighborhood, but returned last fall, renting a small farm next to Chappell's. While they met almost daily and their wives, sisters, visited each other, Carlisle made no secret of his hatred for Chappell. A few days ago Chappell's calf got into Carlisle's field and the latter told his wife "Chappell has lived long enough." Then he announced the date on which he (Carlisle) would kill him.

Chappell shows no regret for his crime other than the effect it may have on his future. He will plead self-defense. It is expected that both he and Mrs. Carlisle will deny that she knew of a plan to kill her husband. Mrs. Carlisle has a daughter 10 years old and Chappell has several children.

BOY BURGLARS GOT THEIR IDEAS AT PICTURE SHOWS

Four Kansas City Youths Sentenced to Two Years Each on Pleas of Guilty.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 4.—Four boy robbers who pleaded guilty and said that, taking their cue from successful burglars seen in moving picture shows, they for months had been committing small robberies in South Side residence districts, were sentenced to two years each in the penitentiary today.

The boys are J. C. Brown, Albert Stansberry, Theodore Young and Julius Weiceninger, each 17 years old. The boys said they never had stolen large amounts of money or things of great value, but their pilferings, they said, had kept them in spending money and cigarette tobacco. They usually met in an abandoned house to discuss plans or divide loot.

TURNIPS GROWN ON COURTHOUSE LAWN 'TO FEED THE POOR'

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOBART, Ok., Oct. 4.—The "county fathers" have leased the "cultivatable area" of the courthouse lawn to a man who wanted to plant turnips. The lease was made some time ago to W. W. Rowland, but the populace didn't know the growing contents of the soil until recently. One morning they awoke to find the surface of the pretty square literally covered with sprouts.

"To feed the poor" was the laconic reply of C. Armstrong, the caretaker, to the questions of the curious.

So the poor of Kiowa County will be fed on turnips this winter. But not to the poor alone is this city farm open. Any other persons who like turnips and who haven't any in their gardens may take home a few.

This turnip patch contains two acres and the cost of seed was $2. Cultivation was free and there will be no expense for harvesting.

County Commissioners throughout Oklahoma have had the beautification of the courthouse plats as one of the important problems following the erection of courthouses. Grasses and trees have been planted principally. But no other Commissioners have had the soil planted to turnip seed.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT AN APPETITE?

Many a Miserable Dyspeptic Can Quickly Enjoy a Good Appetite Using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

There is nothing so deplorable as a home where at every meal one member of the family sits in silence eating a special diet while others are partaking of the regular food.

Not only does this condition become almost unbearable to the dyspeptic, but it throws anything but a joyous spirit over the rest of the family.

The presence of dishes before him that a stomach sufferer cannot eat, makes him sick at his stomach and he is actually doing himself an injury when he eats at such a table.

A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet taken after each meal will excite appetite and in a short time one will find the sight of food becoming less and less repugnant until after a few meals one will take courage enough to join with the family in the regular fare.

As soon as this is done and there follows no evil effects then by continuing the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets you will soon be restored to your normal, healthy and vigorous appetite.

One of the real pleasures of eating is the joy of smelling and seeing food. These qualities are essential to the normal digestion for they excite the gastric juices in the stomach and thus make ready the digestive apparatus for the food when it is eaten.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain ingredients that every system needs. Weakened fluids of nature used in digestion are quickly restored to their normal proportion, and in a short time are so evenly balanced that the system can manufacture its own pepsin and hydrochloric acid as it should.

Go to your druggist today and buy a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets,

ST. LOUIS GIRL TO GO TO ATHENS FOR HER WEDDING

TO WED MAN IN NAVY

John A. Byrne, Stationed on Cruiser, Unable to Come Here for Ceremony.

When Miss Dorothy Helen Duffy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Duffy of 5892A Bartmer avenue, learned that her fiance, John A. Byrne, could not leave his duties in the United States naval service in the Mediterranean to come to St. Louis for their wedding this fall, she decided, at his urgent request, to go to him.

So Miss Duffy will sail from New York Saturday for Athens, Greece, chaperoned by her aunt, Mrs. William F. Woerner of 2124 South Compton avenue, wife of the St. Louis member of the Public Service Commission. Mrs. Woerner's little daughter Ruth will sail with them on the Kaiser Franz Josef, a Mediterranean steamer. About Nov. 1 the wedding will take place in the ancient capital city of Greece.

Byrne, a former St. Louis boy, entered the navy after his graduation from Christian Brothers' College in 1910. He recently was transferred from the regular naval service to the Paymaster's Department. He now is stationed at Constantinople on the cruiser Scorpion and found himself unable to get a furlough of sufficient length to return to the United States for the wedding, which he and Miss Duffy had planned as a church function.

Mrs. Woerner was formerly Miss Agnes Judge, daughter of a wealthy iron dealer, who was Miss Duffy's grandfather. The young woman's father is a civil engineer, and was a candidate last spring for the Democratic nomination for President of the Board of Public Improvements. He was formerly Assistant Park Commissioner.

After the wedding in Athens, Mrs. Woerner and her daughter will spend several months in European countries.

MISSIONARIES' CAPTORS ASKED TO NAME RANSOM

Two Men Have Gone to Meet Brigands to Learn Terms Chinese Ready for Battle.

PEKING, Oct. 4.—The American missionaries at Fancheng, in reply to an inquiry from Edward T. Williams, American Charge d'Affairs here, telegraphed today that the amount of the ransom demanded by the Chinese brigands at Tsao Yang for the release of the American and Norwegian missionaries in captivity is not yet known.

The Rev. C. Stokstad and the Rev. Mr. Johnson, who went toward Tsao Yang to communicate with the brigands have not returned to Fancheng.

A dispatch from Hankow says that the brigands at Tsao Yang number 2000 and the Government troops surrounding them total 3000 men. Gen. Li Yuen Hong, Vice-President of the Chinese republic, believes his force will be sufficient as the brigands are undisciplined and poorly organized. The Government troops are equipped with a battery of machine guns.

NEW DIVORCE RULE IS PROPOSED FOR EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Remarriage of "Innocent Party" by Ministers Is Urged by Some.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The next three weeks will witness the making of ecclesiastical history here by the triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Beginning Wednesday, 116 bishops, 305 clerical and 306 lay delegates will meet at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, to hold daily sessions until Oct. 24.

The bishops will constitute the house of bishops, and the 610 clergymen and laymen will sit in the house of deputies. These two bodies will discuss amendments to the church constitution, and their debates will bring to a head questions that have been agitating the church for years.

No provision has been made for presenting to the convention the question of changing the name of the church. Church and laymen of high church tendencies have contended that the present name, "the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America and its tributaries beyond the seas," is cumbersome and not properly descriptive. They have suggested instead the name, "American Catholic Church." Delegates already here have expressed the opinion that in the election of delegates by the various dioceses showed that the low church party was in the majority, and that those who favored another name did not wish to risk defeat at this convention.

Divorce Question Up.

The question of remarriage of divorced persons may be forced on the convention by individual delegates, but no provision has been made for its formal presentation. For several years a sentiment has existed in favor of changing the Constitution so that Episcopal clergymen may be permitted to perform the marriage ceremony for the innocent party to a divorce granted on "scriptural" grounds. At present the church does not sanction the remarriage of divorced persons.

The convention will receive a report favoring a change in the method of representation in the House of Deputies. At present each diocese, irrespective of numbers, is represented by four clerical and four lay delegates. It is proposed to reapportion the voting strength on a proportional basis.

A committee will recommend that a special diocese be constituted, embracing the regular army posts and naval reservations, and the vessels of the navy. Indications are that this change will be sanctioned.

To Pension the Aged.

A committee that has investigated a pension system will recommend that at the age of 65 clergymen may retire and receive thereafter one-half their average salary since they entered the church service. Widows of clergymen will receive yearly pensions of one-half the average salary their husbands received during the years of their marriage.

It will be proposed that the children of the deceased clergyman shall receive for educational purposes $100 a year between the ages of 4 and 7, $200 a year between ages 7 and 14, and $300 a year between the ages of 14 and 21, during dependency.

A plan of church unity will be discussed upon recommendation that the various Protestant denominations join efforts in the mission field to prevent waste and gain power through co-operation. No organization was proposed. This movement will reach its final effort at the world's conference on church unity, to be held here within the next two years.

New Restaurant to Be Opened in Pierce Building.

Joseph Ehrman has opened the restaurant in the basement of the Pierce Building. Ehrman has been known to St. Louisans who like good food for the past 27 years. To make his restaurant popular, he has a rustic effect in the arrangement. He will also have an orchestra and cabaret singing.

FIRE UNDERWRITERS CAN'T INSURE OWNERS OF AUTOS

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 4.—That fire insurance companies cannot insure owners of automobiles against damages to the person or property of others is the ruling of State Insurance Superintendant Revelle.

Revelle is advised that some fire insurance companies are writing such policies and he rules that only those companies which confine their business to automobiles can write automobile liability insurance.

901-FOOT BUILDING SURE

Directors Adopt Plans to Avoid Pending Ordinance Limit.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—At a meeting of the Panamerican States Association plans for the new building, which is to be 901 feet high, were adopted. Among those who spoke in favor of the adoption was Edward E. McCall, chairman of the Public Service Commission, Hudson Maxim and Enrique Perry, representing the Chilean Government.

The reason for the meeting last night, it was stated, was to have the plans adopted before the new law proposed by the Board of Aldermen, regulating the height of building, goes into effect.

"LAUGHING HUSBAND" HIT

London Audience Calls It Brightest Comedy in Years.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The Viennese musical comedy, "The Laughing Husband," which ran all last winter in the Austrian capital, was produced in London this week with immediate success in its English version.

It is voted the wittiest, brightest musical comedy seen on the English stage in years. Unlike most productions of that character, it has a strong, interesting plot. Charles Frohman will produce the play in New York during the present season.

MRS. WALSH NOT TO ENTER HORSES IN ST. LOUIS SHOW

Tells Committee That Her Decision Never to Contest Again Is Final.

Mrs. Julius S. Walsh Jr., informed the Executive Committe of the St. Louis Horse Show yesterday that her decision not to enter her horses in the coming horse show is final and that she will abide by her declaration of a year ago that she never again will enter any of her horses in a St. Louis show. She had been urged by horse show enthusiasts to reconsider and enter her string.

The reason Mrs. Walsh gives is that she did not like the treatment she received last year from St. Louis horse show officials. She is determined not to place herself in a position, she says, to receive similar treatment again.

Mrs. Walsh's refusal to enter her horses at this year's exhibition recalls an incident of last year's show which caused much comment. In one of the rings Mrs. Walsh sent in a horse driven by a negro to compete with Miss Loula Long of Kansas City. Miss Long immediately withdrew and expressed her disapproval of the action of Mrs. Walsh. Mrs. Walsh said she meant no disrespect to Miss Long, but the incident gave rise to considerable feeling among Miss Long's friends and caused factional differences among the show officials.

Mrs. Walsh says her declination to enter this year's show is not because of unfriendliness to Miss Long, with whom she expects to compete at other shows. Miss Long will bring 18 horses to the St. Louis show and will probably be the only important woman exhibitor.

Barmaid Becomes Peeress

Husband Is U. S. Soldier

They Inherit 30,000 Acres

LADY DE FREYNE.

Newly Titled Lady Met Nobleman While Serving in Saloon Near Army Barracks.

Pretty Annabel Angus, former barmaid at a small hotel in a poor quarter of London has just become a peeress of the British realm.

Romance clusters thickly about the British peerage, but few, if any of its houses, have a story that equals that of the rise of Annabel Angus to aristocratic distinction.

The Baron de Freyne, her noble husband, will not be able to enjoy his good fortune for some time, since he has nearly another year to serve as private in the Eighth United States

LORD DE FREYNE.

Infantry in the Philippines, and he is the sort of chap who will stick to his soldiering until the period of his enlistment is ended.

Whether his wife, who has been living at Rothes, a small Scotch village, in recent years, while he has been serving in the army of an alien nation, will proceed to the great De Freyne estate in County Roscommon, Ireland, and take possession in his behalf, is not known. It is highly probable though, that she will elect to remain where she is until she and he are reunited.

The De Freyne family is of French origin though it settled in Roscommon before the days of Cromwell. It has held immense tracts of land in Roscommon, Sligo and Mayo for generations, though its patent of nobility is much less than a century old.

The elder Baron de Freyne was one of the largest landholders in Ireland and the new peer comes into possession of 30,000 fertile acres, to say nothing of vast holdings of stocks and bonds.

It was in 1902 that the Hon Arthur Reginald French, 24 years old, and Lieutenant in the British Army, became fascinated with the pretty girl who served him with drinks at the little hotel saloon he visited near the barracks where he was stationed. The hotel was the property of her father. Lieut. French made ardent love to her and his father was scandalized a few months later by his heir's marriage to the barmaid.

It was a terrible social descent for Lieut. French and the row with his family and the disapproval of his friends in the army became so annoying that he chucked up his commission and disappeared. That was early in 1904. For months the newspapers of the world were full of the strange case of the missing heir and, for long, the supposition was that he had killed himself. Whether his bride really knew where he was or not, is not known, but she appeared to be as ignorant of it as anyone else.

In time, however, it became known that he had gone to New York, where he enlisted under an assumed name as a private in the American army. Since then, he has re-enlisted twice.

Shortly after it became known that he was in the American army, his father made him an allowance of $2500 a year, and he immediately proved that he was made of the right kind of stuff by arranging with a lawyer in Aberdeen, Scotland, to receive this allowance regularly and transfer it to his wife. She has been living in luxury undreamed of in her barmaid days on this income, while he has been getting along on his pay of $13 a month.

The new Baron still retains the assumed name under which he first enlisted in the army and, according to letters he has written to his wife in recent years, his own company associates do not know that he has a title.

There has never been any estrangement between the couple. The shock to his class pride on being "cut" by his friends and denounced by his father was the sole reason for his going away.

He declares that his experience in the American army has been a great thing for him, making a thorough man of him and giving him a democratic view of life that would have been denied to him but for his break with his aristocratic connections.

NEWEST INVENTION WILL LIGHT THRONE OF VEILED PROPHET

Lamps of 5000-Candle Power Brought to St. Louis for Crowning Ceremony.

A newly invented 5000-candlepower lamp, of such brilliancy that it has not thus far been manufactured for commercial purposes, will shed light on the thrones of the Veiled Prophet and his queen at the Prophet's ball in the Coliseum Tuesday night.

The lamp was brought here by A. C. Einstein, president of the Union Electric Co. It was shown to him in an Eastern factory a few weeks ago as an inventive triumph, but a thing whose efficiency was so far beyond the usual demand that its commercial use was doubtful.

Einstein told the makers that he knew of one occasion on which it could be used, and arranged for the installation of one of the lamps in the Coliseum for the ball. It will be about twenty feet above the throne, and the rays will be thrown downward by a reflector. When, at the crowning of the queen, all attention is centered on the queen, the lights in the rest of the ballroom will be dimmed, and the throne will stand out with the brightness of noonday.

For lighting the Coliseum during the dancing, the 12 arc lamps which usually furnish illumination have been removed and 12 500-watt lamps of a new pattern have been obtained.

The ball, it is announced, will take place regardless of weather. In case of rain, the postponement of the parade will be announced by a herald, riding over the route of the parade, but the ball will go on.

As in recent years, it will be required that all persons on the main floor appear in full dress, this meaning costumes without hats for the women and evening suits with white ties for the men. Army and navy and State militia officers may appear in uniform.

Tickets are required for admission to any part of the building.

Coat and cloak attendants will check wraps without charge, it is announced. The doors will open at 8 p. m. Miss Helen Stanley, soprano soloist of the Metropolitan and Chicago Grand Opera companies, will sing at 9:20, 9:40 and 10 p. m. During her solos no one will be permitted to enter the hall, and bands approaching the building will have to stop playing. The solos will be numbers 3, 5 and 7 of a concert of seven numbers. The concert will be followed by the entrance of the Prophet and his retinue, and the selection and crowning of the queen.

Turkey trot and tango music appears in profusion on the dance program, all the numbers of which are officially designated as "waltz" or "two-step." Among the selections are "Snooky Ookums," "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Maori," "Apple Blossom Time," "Here Comes My Daddy Now," and "Great Big Blue-Eyed Baby."

MAN ON WAY TO PRISON VISITS DYING MOTHER

Illinois Prosecutor Grants Favor to Realty Dealer Sentenced for Fraud.

JOLIET, Ill., Oct. 4.—State's Attorney Robert W. Martin granted a special dispensation to James C. O'Connor, a real estate dealer and banker, who pleaded guilty yesterday to 20 indictments for forgery, embezzlement and operating a confidence game, by allowing Sheriff Thomas Stevenson to take O'Connor to see Mrs. Catherine O'Connor, 85 years old, who is believed to be dying. O'Connor was on his way to the Illinois State prison to serve a long sentence.

O'Connor defrauded creditors out of $20,000.

New Method of Flesh Reduction Proves Astonishingly Successful.

Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 4.—Investigation has fully established that Hon. H. T. Stetler of this city has reduced his weight fifty-seven pounds in an incredibly short time by wearing a simple, invisible device, weighing less than an ounce. This when worn as directed, acts as an infallible flesh reducer, dispensing entirely with dieting, medicines, and exercises. Many prominent men and women have adopted this easy means of reducing superfluous flesh, and it is stated the inventor, Prof. B. HEIRS SUE FOR $50,000 WILLED TO BERNHARDT

Relatives of Woman Admirer of Actress Say Testator Was Mentally Incapable.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Sarah Bernhardt is in litigation about a legacy of $50,000 left to her by an English woman admirer, Miss Lilly Scorer.

Miss Scorer had been infatuated with Mme. Bernhardt for many years and every week, wherever the actress might happen to be, a bunch of carnations, her favorite flower, was sent by Miss Scorer. Mme. Bernhardt formerly saw her friend three or four times a year and on these occasions Miss Scorer, who habitually dressed in black, wore a white dress and prepared herself for the interview as for the most sacred religious rite.

A few weeks Miss Scorer died, leaving everything, including a house in St. John's Wood, to Mme. Bernhardt. The will is being contested by the cousins of the dead woman on the ground of mental incapability.

On hearing of the bequest, Mme. Bernhardt offered to let the relatives retain the house and offered to give $2000 to the testator's servant, but their reply was a demand that she renounces all interest in the estate.

BILLIKENS GIVE PROMISE IN FIRST GAME; WIN 6 TO 0

Dennie's Men Play Slovenly at Times, But Work of Carrol and Gassoway Is Commendable Throughout.

By Daniel Dillon Jr.

ST. LOUIS UNIVERSITY, making its 1913 gridiron debut, defeated Shurtleff College on the St. Louis U. campus yesterday afternoon, 6—0. The game was a typical preliminary battle—both teams being slow and slovenly in their work, and the men, as was to be expected, in poor physical condition.

The chief interest in the fray was that it offered the Blue and White rooters their first opportunity to size up the possibilities of the raw material with which Dennie must work this year. The demonstration was highly satisfactory in that it showed the Grand avenue mentor has a moderately husky, fairly fast squad of willing workers who in all likelihood will develop into at least a creditable eleven before Syracuse is met on Thanksgiving day.

Carroll Plays Well.

Certainly the team this year will not be a few-star caste. Carroll, at quarter, looks like he may develop into a clever open-field runner and Gassoway lumbers along something in the style of Fritz Lehman and is a hard man to down. Outside of these two every man in the lineup wears a blue and white jersey and is only distinguishable by his position. This condition bodes well for teamwork, even if it does mean an absence of scintillating individuality in the Jesuit field this season.

Shurtleff trotted out a squad that was a bit huskier than the local team and much more emerald shaded. What the Alton lads do not know about football would keep Walter Camp busy a lifetime tabulating. At that, though, in midseason the team is apt to put up a rattling good game, as they fight hardest within their own 10-yard line—always a good indication of the "insides" of a team.

Lack of Good Punter Responsible for Shurtleff Eleven's Defeat

SHURTLEFF essayed the forward pass four or five times, but its execution was so ragged that the play had no chance to be a ground gainer. St. Louis stuck stolidly to straight line plunges, varied with an occasional end run and play of tackle.

Both teams were decidedly shy on punting ability and in fact it was due to Sutton's poor kicking that St. Louis U. owed its lone touchdown. Carrol made three trials for drop kicks from the field. Two of them were miserable efforts, but the third, a short kick from the 25-yard line, missed tallying by inches.

The day was much better suited for baseball than football. A crowd of 1500 witnessed the contest. The quarters were 10 and 7 minutes alternately.

Shurtleff Line Holds.

St. Louis kicked off to Shurtleff and thanks to Sutton's ineffectual kicking soon had the play in Shurtleff's territory. At one time the Blue and White backs rushed the ball to their opponents' 10-yard line only to lose it on downs. Shurtleff then carried the play to mid-field, where the quarter ended with the pig skin in their possession.

The second quarter was in the main a repetition of the first. St. Louis U. by short plunges carried the ball to Shurtleff's 25-yard line from where Carrol tried a drop kick that went wide. Interference, as was to be expected in the initial game of the year for both teams, was conspicuous by its absence. In fact, Coach Dennie said some of the St. Louis men want into the game with the haziest conception of the team's signals.

The third quarter saw the single score of the afternoon. St. Louis, after the aforementioned Mr. Sutton had uncovered one of his famous 10-yard punts, obtained the ball on Shurtleff's 25-yard line. The next three minutes of play showed the possibilities Dennie's team. The line men charged hard and opened holes and Gassoway and Harrison effectively assaulted Shurtleff's right side of the line.

Gassoway in particular ran strongly every time he was given the ball and finally went over for a touchdown. Carrol, after punting out, missed an easy try for goal.

Dennie Shifts Lineup.

Dennie in the last quarter and, in fact, during the whole four periods, used good judgment in continually shifting his lineup and giving the bigger portion of his squad a chance to disport themselves.

After the game the St. Louis coach said he was mighty well pleased with the showing of his charges and was willing to predict that his 1913 team would be superior to the 1912 eleven, which harbored three or four very clever individual players, but was short on concerted play.

The lineup:

St. L. U.		Shurtleff.

C. Mclaw	Left tackle	Peach

WILLIAM JEWELL HOLDS JAYHAWKERS 7—0 IN MUD

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 4.—The University of Kansas football team defeated the William Jewell College team here today, 7 to 0, on a field so heavy that good playing was impossible.

Greenlees of Kansas made the only touchdown after two minutes of play in the fourth period. Weldline kicked goal. Rain fell during most of the game and frequently players fell while advancing with the ball.

CENTRAL COLLEGE HOLDS C. B. C. TO TWO TOUCHDOWNS

Ratican and Collins Score for Kelly's Men, Beating Fayette Team 14—0.

By Ralph Bryan.

Fighting hard for every inch of ground they were able to gain, and finally winning by two touchdowns, Christian Brothers' College managed to register its second victory of the season by defeating Central College, of Fayette, Mo., at the King's highway Campus yesterday afternoon. The final score was 14 to 0, both touchdowns coming in the third quarter.

In the visitors from Fayette the local team encountered a far tougher proposition than they did in their rivals of a week ago. Throughout the entire game they put up a stiff opposition to the attacks of their heavier opponents, their tackling being of the low and hard variety and their light backs time and again tearing through C. B. C.'s line for considerable gains.

Kelly's Team Improved.

The local team showed quite an improvement, however, over their exhibition of last Saturday. Its style of play showed more teamwork and less of the individaul exhibition than had been displayed before, with far better results from the spectator's viewpoint. Nevertheless, much credit is due Collins and Ratican, as they were directly responsible for both their team's touchdowns.

The game opened in far different style than the previous game in which Ratican scored a touchdown on the opening kickoff. Central received the kickoff, and in five downs had advanced the ball 35 yards by means of line plunges through C. B. C.'s still weak line of forwards. C. B. C. finally held, and for the rest of the quarter the game was a see-saw.

Quinn Runs 35 Yards.

The first spectacular gain was made by C. B. C. at the opening of the second quarter as a result of a pretty forward pass, Ratican to Quinn, netting 35 yards. No scoring was done, however, until the third quarter, in spite of several brilliant dashes by Collins and Ratican.

The first touchdown of the contest came early in the third period after a pretty run of 60 yards through Central's line by Collins, Ratican kicking the goal.

Shortly afterwards, in the same quarter, Ratican got away for a run of 45 yards around Central's right end for the second and final tally of the day, kicking the goal himself.

Central came back strong in the final quarter and held the purple and gold scoreless, leaving the final score 14—0.

The lineup:

C. B. C. (14).	Position.	Central Coll. (0).
Quinn	Left end	Crowe
W. Eesman	Left tackle	Willcoxen
Loeffler-Gebert	Left guard	Urton
Monges (Capt.)	Center	Laurence (Capt.)

McGinnis	Right end	Collins
Collins-Murphy	Quarterback	Rutledge
Gallagher	Left halfback	Wilson
Ratican	Right halfback	Howard-Fowler
Goetzman	Fullback	Mabrey

Touchdowns—Collins 1, Ratican 1. Goals from touchdown—Ratican 2. Time of quarters—10 minutes. Referee—Turner (Dartmouth). Umpire—O'Reilly (St. L. U.).

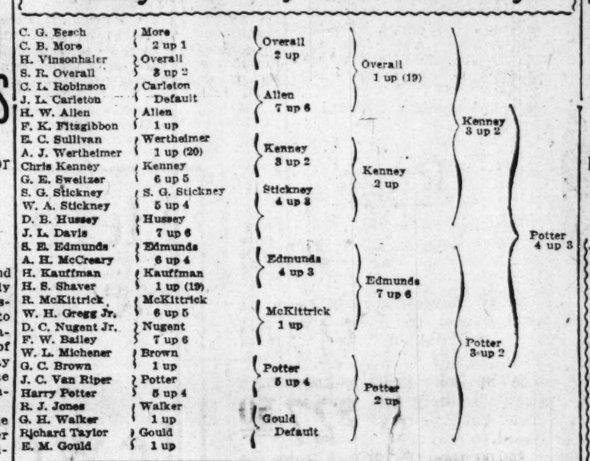
Analysis of City Golf Title Play



Mowrey Injured While Cardinals Beat Reds, 11-2

Small Crowd Turns Out to See Semi-Final Game of Season at Robison Field.

By W. J. O'Connor.

While 5000 fans fussed around the intercity amateur game in Fairground Park, admission free, no more than 400 patrons of the national game paid to see the Cardinals conquer the Reds, 11—2, in the penultimate game of the local National League season at Robison Field yesterday afternoon. It was the Cards' eleventh victory of the year over Cincinnati, the two teams having played 21 games.

Mike Mowrey was slammed in the mouth by a wicked groundar off Groh's bat in the eighth inning and four of his perfectly good teeth were spilled in the dust. Mike quit the game in disgust and may not play in the fall series. Beck replaced him.

Perritt pitched for the Cards and was opposed by Packard, a southpaw. The Cards hammered Packard to all corners, winning pulled up. However, Tinker suffered Packard to remain during the entire matinee, showing that Tinker didn't care any more for the national game than the fans.

There was nothing interesting to the game other than Mowrey's double with the bases filled in the third. However, the score cards were wrong in 17 out of 18 places, having Sheckard and McLean and Cather down to perform for the locals. But who cares? The score:

POWER BOATS TO RACE ON MISSISSIPPI TODAY

Twenty-six motor boats are scheduled to start in the single-cylinder power boat race on the Mississippi River this afternoon. The start and finish will be opposite the Western Rowing Club, 5000 South Broadway. Eight prizes are to be awarded to the successful owners. The starting gun will be fired at 3 o'clock.

Rolla Miners Beat Normals, 51—0.

ROLLA, Mo., Oct. 4.—The Rolla Miners proved victorious in the first football game of the season this afternoon played on Jackling Field against Cape Girardeau Normal. The final score was 51 to 0. The long runs made by Bland, fullback, and the splendid work of Capt. Stribling at center, together with the good headwork of Kissaddon at quarterback, won the praise of all who witnessed the game. The Miners will play Christian Brothers College on Jackling Field next Saturday.

Crimson, Under Wraps, Defeats Bates Team, 14-0

Brickley and Mahan Kick Field Goals on Muddy Field.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 4.—Playing a conservative game the Harvard football eleven registered 14 points against Bates and held their opponents without score on the water-soaked gridiron of the stadium today.

At no time was the Crimson goal threatened and only once, when an onside kick netted 35 yards, did Bates gain first down. The Harvard team's offense was found wanting at times, especially in the third period when they failed to score and were held for downs on Bates' three-yard line.

Harvard did not, as was expected, present its full strength today. Pennock and Trumbull, veteran linemen, who have been out of the game until this week, did not appear, nor did Coolidge, first-string end, but the "big three" in the back field, Brickley, Hardwick and Mahan, were there. Brickley scored an easy field goal from the 20-yard line, Mahan booted a more difficult one between the uprights from the 35-yard mark.

Yale Held, 0-0, by Team Harvard Defeated, 34-0

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 4.—University of Maine's football team, which last Saturday was smothered by Harvard, 34 to 0, gave Yale the biggest surprise in years on Yale's field this afternoon by holding the Blue to a nothing to nothing score. The Maine collegians, although rushed off their feet at times, presented a magnificent defense whenever their goal was threatened.

Yale used a new variation of the Minnesota wing shift that was a great ground gainer, but whenever a score seemed imminent there was hesitancy and then fumbling which cost touchdowns. Once the Blue rushed the ball more than half the length of the field by brilliant running only to be held for downs within a foot of the line.

Maine's defense was excellent and only once did Maine make first down—the last play of the game. Capt. Ketcham of Yale played a different game in his new position at left guard. Lineup and summary:

Yale (0).	Positions.	Maine (0).
W. Carter	Left end	Purington

BROWNS FORFEIT GOOD CHANCE TO FINISH SEVENTH

Rickey's Men Lose First Game After Having Big Lead—Second Game a Tie.

Browns Need 2 Games to Vacate Last Place

THE Browns will have to win both games of their double-header with the Naps in Cleveland today if they are to vacate last place in the American League standing. The victory of the Yankees over the Athletics in yesterday's game, coupled with the Browns' defeat by the Naps, boosted the New Yorkers into seventh place.

The Browns will play two games today. If they win both the standing will be:

Browns	58	95	.379
New York	57	94	.377

If they break even, the standing will be:

New York	57	94	.377
Browns	57	96	.372

If they lose two, the standing will be:

New York	57	94	.377
Browns	56	96	.368

CLEVELAND, O. Oct. 4.—Cleveland and the Browns played a double-header today. Cleveland won the first game 5 to 4. The second was called on account of darkness at the end of the eighth inning with the score a tie 0 to 0.

The Browns scored three runs and took the lead in the first inning of the first game. Austin singled, went to third on Pratt's single and scored when Jackson threw past Dunlap. Pratt reaching third. Walker singled, scoring Pratt. Sloan got an infield single. Walker scored from second on Bisland's infield out. In the fifth they completed their total, Austin singling and taking third on two infield outs and then scoring on Sloan's single.

Austin's Error Hurts.

Cleveland scored one run in the first inning. Leibold singled and took second on Austin's bad throw. He went to third on an out and scored on Lajoie's single. After Graney had singled in the second he was forced by O'Neill. Leibold then tripled, scoring O'Neil.

In the fifth Chapman's single, a pass to Jackson and Lajoie's single, added another run. Cleveland took the lead in the seventh. Chapman walking, Jackson singling, Baumgardner making a wild throw to first and Olson singling.

In the second game, Mitchell, out of game for more than three weeks because of a lame arm, divided honors with Weilman. Neither team had any serious chance to score. The scores:

RELIABLE POTTER TRIMS KENNEY IN CITY GOLF FINAL

Superior Approaching and Putting Enables Country Club Man to Beat Kenney, 4 Up, 3 to Play.

By Clarence F. Lloyd

SUPERIOR long and short game playing enabled Harry Potter, representing the St. Louis Country Club, to defeat Christian Kenney of the Glen Echo Club, in the final round of the City Golf Championship tournament on the Bellerive Country Club links yesterday. The score at the end of two rounds of play was 4 up and 3 to play. Potter won the match on the fifteenth hole of the second round, making play in the last three unnecessary.

While Potter outplayed Kenney, his golf wasn't nearly so good as some of the matches he played earlier in the tournament. He made the morning round in 78, one less than bogey, but didn't do so well in the afternoon. He required 68 strokes to complete the 15 holes played. Had they finished the round, bogey on each of the remaining holes would have given Potter an 81.

Kenney's miserable short game, usually the department in which he shows best, made the going easy for Potter. This was especially the case in the morning when at the end of the first 18 holes, the new city champion had Kenney 4 down.

The short rest between sessions failed to enable Kenney to pull himself together. Miserable approaching and putting after the afternoon round started saw Kenney slump to 7 down.

Not until the ninth hole of the second round did Kenney threaten his opponent. After the eighth had been halved in five, Kenney won the ninth. That made him five down, but he lost No. 10 and Potter again had the advantage, 6 up. Kenney then won the next two holes, the eleventh and twelfth, showing traces of his real form, and putting Potter's lead to 4.

On both of these holes, Potter missed a couple of easy putts and the gallery whispered that the municipal champion might be faltering. By holding Kenney even on the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth, however, he succeeded in winning the match, 4 up.

Potter and Kenney had won the right to figure as finalists in the tournament by defeating some of St. Louis' best golfers in the earlier rounds of the event. However, the match yesterday was inferior to some of those in the preliminary rounds.

Had Potter played the same brand against Sterling Edmunds as he did yesterday against Kenney, Edmunds would have figured as a finalist instead of the new city champion.

The long going didn't seem to affect Potter, as many had been led to believe. They had opined that the huskier Kenney might weather the 36 holes better than the slighter Potter. Inasmuch as Kenney failed more on his short game than he did in driving, it might be said that his bulk proved of no advantage.

Potter Makes Only Sensational Play; Arthur Stickney Wins Consolation

IT was [illegible] an ordinary golf match. Only one thing marring the match was a real sensation [illegible] play turned. Potter was the author [illegible]s. Driving off No. 14, Potter hooked. The ball landed on the edge of the woods in a clump of weeds. From this disadvantageous point he made a wonderful approach that landed him on the edge of the green. His No. 3 rolled about three inches from the cup.

Kenny laid up well on his two and on his three he bumped Potter's ball into the hole. That gave them a half for this hole and proved an unfortunate break for Kenney. Had he holed out, it would have prolonged the match at least another hole.

Only a small gallery followed the players in the morning, but the enthusiasts had increased to a couple of hundred in the afternoon.

Starting the last 18 holes four down, Kenney's friends were hopeful, though not confident. They only realized that he had gone around the last nine 32 against Stuart Stickney a few days before. A handicap of four to Potter, however, considering his excellent play during the tournament, was conceded too big a lead for Chris to overcome.

Finals in the other classes were played as follows:

Consolation—W. Arthur Stickney won from J. C. Van Riper, 1 up.

Class A—Tarleton Brown won from Otto Immenhausen, 9 up 8 to play.

Class B—Clarkson Potter won from E. McPheeters, 9 up 8 to play.

Class C—Eddie Lewis won from C. Hatfield, 6 up 5 to play.

WABADAS PLAY TODAY BEFORE CARDS' GAME

Probably more fans will turn out to see the Wabadas and Banner Buggies, amateur baseball teams of St. Louis, than will appear for the game between the Cardinals and Reds at Robison Field this afternoon. The amateurs are to provide the preliminary to the Cards-Reds mixup. Bill Brennan, one of the National League umpires, will handle the game for the "kids."

The young teams are claimants of the amateur championship of the city. The first game will commence at 1:30 o'clock. The game between the Cardinals and Reds will end the National League season.

Finals in City Tennis.

A. A. Fath and Irwin Flexsler defeated W. Walker and Robert Lyons for the final match of doubles in the Carondelet division of the municipal tennis tournament yesterday. The score was: 2—6, 6—4, 6—3.

NATIONALS WIN A FARCE GAME FROM RED SOX

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The final curtain on the 1913 American League baseball season in this city was rung down today when Washington took the last game of the Boston Red Sox, 10 to 9. The contest was a farce throughout, players of both teams indulging in comedy and giving opponents an opportunity to fatten their averages. Catchers and pitchers were thrust into fielders. Fielders found themselves behind the bat, and even Clark Griffith deigned to step into the box. The fans were not unlike the [illegible] visiting cavalrymen who have been [illegible] at Winchester, Va., all summer, but [illegible] of the soldiers were on hand with [illegible]

BOSTON, Oct. 4.—Herman Leib, [illegible] of the Philadelphia Athletics, [illegible] the Boston Nobles in the opening game of the final National League series with the Middle Irish of Philadelphia here today. The score was: 7—1, 4—4, 6—5.

DOYLE WILL PLAY, SNODGRASS TO GIVE WAY TO ART SHAFER

Chances Are Giants Will Go to Post Tuesday With at Least One Star Missing.

TEAM STARTS SLUGGING

McGraw Well Pleased With Hitting of Regulars in Game Against Phillies.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Making the most of their last chance to tune up for the world's series in a regularly scheduled game, the Giant regulars had a lively workout against Philadelphia today and showed again that a bat in their hands just now is a dangerous weapon. Seldom this season have they ran up a greater total of hits than the 13 they made off Brennan and Marshall this afternoon.

Manager McGraw watched the safe drives blister the turf with a gleam in his eye that evidenced his satisfaction at the prowess his men were displaying with the stick. Four of the solid raps were for extra bases. Fletcher hit for a home run, a double and a single in his five times up, while Fred Merkle put the second circuit drive of the day to his credit. George Burns joined the hitters for extra bases with a double.

Snodgrass Still Limps.

In the field the Giants play was snappy, only Doyle and Snodgrass showing lack of the form that is expected of world's series contestants. It was evident that Snodgrass' "Charley horse" was still bothering him, as he limped badly during the short period he was in the game. Doyle gave evidence of almost complete recovery from the injuries he received in his automobile spill of last week, but still favored his shoulder somewhat in throwing.

There is practically no doubt now that Doyle will get into the series, probably in the first game, although the chances are that McGraw sees that his star second baseman is not yet in prime condition for the opening game on Tuesday he will put Arthur Shafer on second in that game and play Herzog at third.

Reason for Worry.

That Doyle will guard the keystone position from the start, if McGraw believes the strain will not affect his later work, however, seems a certainty, for it begins to look as if Snodgrass would not be able to get into the series. With both Doyle and Snodgrass out, the Giants manager would see a real outfield problem, the solution of which might have an important effect on the series.

Shafer is the logical man for the place. He played the position for some time early in the season, and has worked out there within the last few days. But he also is the logical man to fill any infield gap and if McGraw is forced to put him on second in Doyle's place the "Little Napoleon" would have to depend upon a comparatively inexperienced man, such as Cooper, in the outfield—unless, indeed, he took a chance on a further shake-up of his infield, which is considered unlikely.

The Giants will have a final workout Monday at the Polo Grounds in an exhibition game with the Philadelphia Nationals. The session will be a "field day," with such entertaining features as a 100-yard race, in which Shafer, Jim Thorpe, the Indian, and Lobert of the Philadelphias will compete.

PIKEWAY ELEVEN RUNS UP 58—0 SCORE ON SCRUBS

Washington University's varsity eleven, having no regular game scheduled for yesterday afternoon, put in a busy forty-minute session battling the scrubs. Excepting in the last half of the game, the scrubs failed to come up to what was expected of them and allowed the varsity to romp to a 58—0 victory.

The afternoon's workout showed that Coach Edmunds, with his light squad is counting a great deal on the open style of play to put the Pikers to the front this year, as the majority of the scoring was due to forward passes and open formations.

Lewis at fullback, and Perrings and Hetzel on ends, showed up in a fashion that almost insures them of permanent berths on the myrtle and maroon varsity.

Hoerr and Smithers Win.

Melvin Smithers and Roland Hoerr won their way into the final round in the city tennis championships in the doubles at the Delmar A by defeating M. D. McDonald and Jim Westbury yesterday afternoon, 6—2, 3—6 and 6—1. The winners will meet Holtman and Von Reppert for the championship this afternoon at 2:30. Von Reppert, in the tournament in the singles, created a huge surprise a few days ago by defeating Roland Hoerr for the title.

Giants Today Are Twenty Per Cent Stronger Than Beaten Team of 1911, McGraw Thinks

Youthful Players Have Since Become Veterans

Nervousness, Due to Inexperience, Made the Gothamites Change Their Batting Style in First Clash With the Mackmen.

JOHN J. McGRAW

By John J. McGraw,
Manager of the New York Giants.

AS manager of the Giants there are naturally many things which I cannot say before the series and many that I can. In this preliminary article I intend to avoid generalities as much as possible and to deal with facts as I know them.

Taking the two contenders, team for team and man for man, I believe that my club is the better one. In this estimate I include the team play and the spirit of the men, neither of which are negligible factors.

The whole situation sifts down to just this: I consider my club to be 20 per cent stronger than it was in 1911. The Athletics beat us in 1911, although all the games were close except one, and one little "break" in a close game swings the result to one team or the other. The last game alone was a slaughter.

The question is whether this added 20 per cent of strength is enough to overcome the edge that the Athletics had on us in 1911 and to give us the long end of the world's series purse this year. I believe it is, all other things being equal, and I am going to try to show where our increased strength will overcome the 1911 advantage of the Athletics.

As long as I have been in baseball it has never been my custom to bank much on the world's series. The team which gets the "breaks" usually wins it unless the clubs are very unevenly matched. For instance, the St. Louis Nationals, if they got the "breaks," might beat the Athletics in a series of six or seven games, but, of course, the chances would be against it.

This year I feel differently about the series, however. The National League has dropped some prestige by its representatives having lost the big title three years in succession. I feel personally responsible for this, in a way, because it was my club which represented the National League in the last two series. Therefore, I am very eager to bring the title back to the older organization this fall myself. And I think I have as good a chance to win a world's series right now as I ever had in my career.

Athletics Spy on Giants.

LET us consider the methods of Mack and myself. The contrast in our styles has been evident even before the first game is called. Mack has had his scouts and regulars watching the Giants play day in and day out for two weeks. I have been reliably informed that every regular on the Athletics has had a look at my club in action. As in previous world's series, I am going to bank on snap judgment for myself. Advance information has never helped me very much.

Before each world's series I have been swamped with tips from well-meaning friends who have desired to help me beat my rival. I suppose that "Connie" Mack has had the same experience.

Even American Leaguers have come to me with a list of weaknesses of the batters my pitchers must face, in the hope that we could gain an advantage in this way.

These tips, for the most part, are valueless. My experience in baseball has taught me that what is weakness against one style of pitching often develops into strength against another style. The twirlers are forced to find out for themselves what a batter can hit in their collection.

There are, of course, some well-known "grooves" that can be found out in advance. If a hitter is weak on the ball inside the plate, that is general knowledge and will help a twirler some. But frequently a batter cannot hit one pitcher's curve, while he will slam the next one to the fence.

Pitchers Study Mack's Batters.

MY preparation for the series has been to send certain of my smarter pitchers to watch the Athletics play once or twice so as to get a good look at the style of the Philadelphia batters at the plate. A shrewd pitcher can find out a good deal by observing a batter at the plate. The position of his feet, whether he acts nervous, how he swings at the ball, whether he gets away to first base fast, whether he steps back from speed, all these movements indicate something to a pitcher. In short, "every little movement of a batter at the plate has a meaning of its own."

As for myself, I have not seen the Athletics play since that last game of the series in 1911, but I found out a lot of things in that set of games which should help us this year. Of course, "Connie" Mack doubtless discovered as many things about the Giants. It will not be like two strange teams playing this year, as the changes in the makeup of the clubs have been comparatively few.

I suppose my readers want to know why I figure my team to be 20 per cent stronger now than in 1911. Two years ago I had a club composed of youngsters, with one or two exceptions. Mathewson, Ames and Devlin were the only three players on my team in 1911 who had ever been in a world's series before. Devlin was just passing along at that time and did not take an active part in the games. Matty was really the only world's series veteran. To the rest it was a new experience and the gaze of the baseball universe was focussed on the club.

On the other hand practically the same Philadelphia team which won from the Chicago Cubs in 1910 was facing the Giants. To them the world's series carried no terrors because they had gone into battle against the Cubs with the Chicago team heavy favorites and had beaten them, and beaten them to a crisp. Of course, this was a great show of gameness on the part of the Athletics, as they were a young team with only a few of the players experienced in the world's series at that time.

Giants Switched Batting Style.

MY club played poorer ball against the Athletics in 1911 than it had shown throughout the regular season. Our main strength during the season and the thing which won us the pennant was the ability of the players to slam all sorts of pitching. When the players got into the world's series they became nervous and determined to bang out a home run every time they came to bat. The natural style of most of my players is to take a short chop swing at the ball. There are few natural hitters in the game who are free swingers. This style takes a much truer eye and faster and truer muscular work.

But, overnight, my club became a bunch of free swingers, only they could not hit the ball. They were too eager to make home runs and their batting fell off woefully. Of course, I admit that we faced good pitching in that series and that the games would have been close anyway; but I maintain that we did not apply our best batting strength. After the first game I pleaded with the Giants to get back to their old way of hitting, but they were young and anxious. They had the fight and all that, but the nervousness stuck. They were not steady.

This year they have been steadier as fielders all the way through, and while they have not hit so hard on the season as in 1911, I expect them to do better in the series. They could not do much worse. Several of the players who went into the games in 1911 have also developed. The most pronounced improvement is apparent in Fletcher. There are two types of ball players in the big League: the rough and ready sort without a nerve in his body, and the high-strung, energetic, ambitious working player. More of the latter type are coming into the game every year because they make smarter players.

How to Handle a Player.

FLETCHER, of the high-strung type, was plainly nervous in the series of 1911, and he was also very anxious against the Red Sox last year. He made error after error in the second game which went to a tie when Matty pitched what should have been shutout ball. Friends of the Giants and some of the players on the club begged me to take out Fletcher and put Shafer into the lineup at shortstop.

"Not if we lose the series through him," I replied. "But I don't think we will. He will come back. There is not so much as a pin point of yellow in his makeup. If I take him out now, I am going to break the heart of a fine ball player."

The experience last fall steadied Fletcher, and as a result, instead of a broken-hearted ballplayer this year I have what I consider to be the smoothest shortstop in the National League. He fought off his nervousness and played fine ball in the last games against the Red Sox, too. I look for him to do big things in this world's series. He is a dangerous hitter and covers ground as well on both sides of his position as any man I ever saw working in the job. Once he gets hold of a ball it is fielded because he has the finest pair of hands for a ballplayer in the League.

In tomorrow's article I will endeavor to show still further how my team has been braced since 1911, and thus make it fully plain why I consider it to be 20 per cent stronger now than then. I will also take up my pitching staff and that of the Athletics.

McGraw Analyzes Chance of New York to Defeat Mack in Coming Series

READERS of the Post-Dispatch who have been following John McGraw's baseball articles in the Post-Dispatch will read with unusual interest the world's series analysis printed here.

McGraw in this and other articles to be printed in the Post-Dispatch, Monday, picks to pieces the warp and woof of the championship teams with a minuteness and fairness that lend conviction to his readers.

McGraw's opinion on the subject, despite the chance for bias, is infinitely more valuable than the most expert summary of an outsider, by reason of his experience with world's series in general, and those against the Athletics in particular.

Mack's Pitchers Wild and Yanks Win Weird Game

Brown and Houck Disappoint Fans in Last Workout Before World's Series.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—Manager Mack of the Philadelphia American League champions put two sets of infielders and outfielders, two catchers and three of his young pitchers in against New York in the final League game here today and the latter won the game; 10 to 8. It was a weirdly played game, both teams fielding poorly, the pitchers being wild and the batting light.

Philadelphia's regular fielders played for five innings and led by 6 to 3. They piled up seven hits and stole four bases, while they were charged with four errors. In the sixth Manager Mack sent in a brand-new team with the exception of Shawkey. In the eighth and ninth innings, largely through Houck's wildness in giving eight passes, New York scored seven runs and landed the victory.

Brown twirled for three innings. He yielded three hits, gave three bases on balls and made a wild pitch, which, with errors by Strunk and Baker, gave New York three runs.

Shawkey pitched the next three innings. He was in much better form than yesterday and was hit for only one single and gave two passes. Houck pitched the last three innings and allowed only three hits, but he was very wild. One of the hits made off Houck was a double by Pinch, with the bases full, which sent in three runners. Score:

Giants Collect 18 Hits in Last Game of Season

McGraw's Regulars Rout Brennan and Submerge Phillies 12 to 7.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The curtain rang down on the local National League season here today when New York took a double-header from Philadelphia. The New York regulars won the first game easily, 12 to 7, while the Giant Yannigans won the second game, 7 to 5.

The regulars rapped Brennan and Marshall for 18 hits in the first game, eight of them being made off Brennan in the first inning. It was the first time Brennan has faced New York since his altercation with Manager McGraw in Philadelphia last June. Crandall weakened at the finish of his game and the Phillies bunched five hits for four runs in the eighth inning.

Umpire Klem cleaned the bench of extra Phillies in the fifth inning of this game. In the first inning Thorpe ran for Snodgrass and McGraw procured the permission of Manager Dooin to let Snodgrass stay in the game, but Umpire Klem would not permit it. A one-handed catch by Fletcher was the fielding feature.

Both clubs used mostly substitute players in the second game and McGraw's assortment of rookies and vets also showed considerable batting power. They won the game by bunching five hits and a pass on Alexander in the third inning for five runs. The score:

OLDRING ON THIRD, LAVAN AT SHORT IF B. JOHNSON INSISTS

—CONNIE MACK

Leader of Athletics (Facetiously) Says He's Prepared for Any Emergency.

NEW SYSTEM THIS YEAR

Mackmen Were Not Obliged to Train Hard in Final Week of Series as in 1911.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—The Athletics, new American League champions, practically wound up their training for the world's series in the game with the New York Highlanders today. For the first time in the last three occasions that his team has won the championship, Manager Connie Mack did not put his players through a severe course of preparation.

In 1910 and 1911 the Athletics were driven hard in the week before the world's series by playing games with an all-star team of American League players. These contests sent the Philadelphia team against the National League's pennant winners trained to the minute.

New System This Year.

An entire different course was adopted by Mack this fall. After the pennant was clinched on Sept. 22, he started to ease up on his regulars. This week he gave all of the stars a layoff and sent a team of youngsters and veterans to Washington.

Owing to the light work given the champions it has been impossible to get anything like a good line on their condition. Barring Orr, who broke a bone in his hand Friday, there are no serious injuries in the Philadelphia camp, so far as is known. Unless something unforseen occurs, this will be the first world's series in which Mack will have his team intact. In 1905, Waddell was put out of it by an injured shoulder. An accident to his knee kept in Oldring during the greater part of the series in 1910. In 1911 McInnis had his right wrist broken shortly before the clash with the Giants. Coombs is the only member of the team who could have been depended upon if in condition who will not be available for duty. The once great twirler, who has never recovered from an attack of typhoid fever last spring, was not counted upon in this fall's big event.

Light Work Monday.

The Athletics will get in some exercise on Monday and will leave here that afternoon in time to reach their headquarters in New York for dinner. Manager Mack, in keeping with his usual policy, has declined to even intimate which pitcher he will use in the opening game on Tuesday.

Manager Mack received a letter from President Johnson of the American League today, stating that Collins and Baker would not be permitted to take part in the world's series if they wrote or permitted the use of their names to articles during the world's series.

"I think," said Mr. Mack, "that President Johnson's letter was written before he gave out his interview in Chicago on Friday that if they proved to the satisfaction of the National Commission that they are capable of doing so. However, if the commission decided the players must not write under any circumstances and the players decide not to abide by the ruling, I will be prepared to put a team on the field against New York next Tuesday."

Should such a contingency arise as the barring of Baker and Collins, the chances are that Lavan would go to second base and Oldring, who was originally a third baseman, would take Baker's place.

INTERCEPTED PASSES HELP MAROONS TO WIN

MARSHALL FIELD, CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Chicago dedicated her new $200,000 athletic field today with a victory over Indiana, score, 21 to 7.

Two of Chicago's scores came by result of intercepted forward passes. Capt. Norgren made a brilliant 40-yard run through half the visiting team. The third touchdown followed plunges by Norgren, Pierce and Kennedy.

The losers' only score followed a 43-yard run by Wynters after intercepting a forward pass.

Indiana showed unexpected strength and the game was closer than the score would indicate, on two of three occasions the visitors lost the ball after they had placed it in the shadow of the Maroon goal.

SOX AND TIGERS SPLIT; TY COBB CINCHES TITLE

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 4.—Chicago and Detroit split a double-header here today. The first contest, marked by two batting rallies in the eighth inning, went to the Tigers, 7 to 5. "Reb" Russell, the invincible in the pinches, shut out the locals in the second contest by a 1-to-0 score. The game was called on account of darkness at the end of the sixth.

Detroit hit three pitchers hard in the opening contest. Benz lasted four innings and Cicotte two. "Doc" White blanked the locals in the seventh, and his teammates, finding Danzs for three hits, and an equal number of runs in the eighth, put Chicago in the lead.

Cobb opened the Detroit half with a single and three hits, including Pipp's second triple. They produced four runs, enough to win the game.

Detroit had many chances to score in the second game, but Easterly's splendid throwing aided Russell to break up their attack.

Chicago scored their winning run in the fourth, when Chase singled, took third on sacrifices by Bodie and Chapelle and came home on Easterly's single.

SPORT SALAD by L. C. DAVIS

THE LION AND THE MOUSE.

A LION was awakened from his sleep by a MOUSE running over his face. Rising, the LION was about to kill him, when the MOUSE begged the LION to spare his life, saying he would do as much for him some day.

Thinking it was a pretty good joke the LION let him go. It happened that, shortly after this, the LION was caught by some hunters who bound him by strong ropes to the ground, as was the habit of hunters in those days. The MOUSE, recognizing his rear, started to knaw the rope, but broke four of his best teeth at the first bite.

IT WAS A WIRE ROPE.

Tigers Smother Drury, 69-0, in Opening Battle

Missouri Team Shows Great Scoring Ability in First Game of Season.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 4.—Missouri swept the Drury Panthers off their feet today and piled up a score of 69 to 0, after the Missouri scrub team had defeated Westminster 7 to 0.

In the first three quarters of the game Drury was on the defense and only made downs once. The Missouri backs were stars of the day with their long gains by plunges.

Groves, Tiger heavy fullback, made the first two touchdowns and by the time the first period was up, the score stood 21 to 0. Then the Brewer-Schulte machine let up on its steam roller tactics. The Tiger coaches continually sent in and took out men to try them in the game, but the Panthers were unable to hold.

AUTO RACES PLANNED FOR EXPOSITION TRACK

The management of the mile speedway at the Universal Exposition grounds has announced the closing dirt-track auto race meet of the season will be held in St. Louis Oct 18 and 19.

The meet will be held under the rules and with the sanction of the American Automobile Association.

Official entry blanks have been mailed to the prominent drivers in America, as well as the manufacturers, carrying a prize list of $2000, and $2000 in bonuses as a special inducement for fast time during the two-days meet.

A contract has been made to install an electrical timing device, to be manipulated during the races by Bernie Nadel, former chairman of the Technical Committee of the A. A. A.

30,000 APPLICATIONS FOR 8000 RESERVED SEATS

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—There are many sad hearts in this town tonight—many more and sadder by far than was the populace of Mudville when Casey struck out, for all the reserved seats for the world's series "were sold before they went on sale."

It was officially announced this afternoon that for the 8000 reserved seats 25,000 applications for the entire series, with certified checks attached, had been received up to noon today. This leaves only the 20,000 admission tickets to be sold at the gate, first come first served, each day. The gates will be opened at 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

McKINLEY HIGH BEATS WEBSTER HIGH ELEVEN

The McKinley High School football team won its third successive game of the season by beating the Webster High School eleven yesterday, 22—0. The team showed improvement since a week ago, when it won from the St. Charles outfit.

Searcy and French plunged through the Webster line for 15 yards, while Monig and Snyder repeatedly skirted the ends for long runs.

Loss of Bressler Costs Local City Champs 1st Game

Without Star Pitcher, Grimm-Gorleys Are Swamped, 14—8, by Cleveland Nine.

After losing Hook Bressler, their star pitcher, who pulled up with a lame wrist and was forced to quit after one inning, the Grimm-Gorleys, local Municipal League champions, offered only feeble resistance to the Moose club of Cleveland in the first game of the inter-city series at Fairground Park, yesterday afternoon. The Cleveland representatives won, 14—8.

The result of the game was a big disappointment to 5000 fans who surrounded the playing field in Fairground Park. Bressler, who suffered a slight injury to his pitching hand in the double-header last week at Robison Field, made a valiant attempt to work yesterday, but was obliged to quit after one round, which resulted disastrously to him.

Bressler May Work Today.

He went last night to a doctor, who promises to put the injured fin in shape for the second game of the series today, when Bressler will make another attempt to work. To recite how the runs were made yesterday would only weary the reader. The tabulated score suffices:

MUSCHAMP WINNER IN CONSOLATION GOLF MEET

All contestants in the city municipal golf tournament which was decided by the completion of the consolation event yesterday afternoon on the Forest Park links, were guests at a banquet at the City Club last night. It was an enthusiastic gathering and the tournament will be perpetuated on bigger proportions next spring.

J. Muschamp with a handicap of 12, won the consolation event and the handsome trophy awarded by F. H. Behring. The other prizes for the four classes were also distributed to the winners at the gathering.

ST. LOUIS BOY STARS IN MISSOURI U. GAME

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 4.—Missouri University's scrubs defeated Westminster today, 7—0. Wentworth Wilder of St. Louis drew first blood in the second period by 30-yard line plunge for touchdown. La Rue kicked goal.

The Blue Jay were evenly matched with the scrubs in the first quarter. Wilder, half, and Collins, quarter, were stars of the scrubs. Capt. Bandy did good work for Westminster.

Both teams used many substitutes in the last three periods. Groves, scrubs' fullback, was the star defensive player.

Bert Shotton and Stovall Get Small Mention While Cobb Is Virtually Ignored.

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Jake Daubert, the Brooklyn first baseman in the National, and Walter Johnson, Washington's famous pitcher, in the American, are winners of the automobiles offered to the players performing the most valiant services for their teams in 1913. The players were selected by a vote of a committee of newspaper men and the result was announced here today by Ren Mulford, chairman of the committee.

Winners in 1911 were Cobb of Detroit and Schultz of Chicago. Last year Speaker of the Boston Americans and Doyle of the New York Nationals won the cars.

Stovall Is Complimented.

Neither champion team had a winner this year, for the vote failed to concentrate on any one player either among the Giants or the Athletics, six Philadelphians divided 82 votes and 64 were split among the New Yorkers.

Evers and Stovall's votes were complimentary, neither being eligible. The votes:

TRUCK PRICES REDUCED

The Kardell Motor Car Co., distributer for the Reo line of trucks and pleasure cars, received Saturday morning an announcement that the price of the Reo Model J, which was $1800, had been changed. The price was not raised, but was lowered to $1650, the reduction being made possible on account of increased production and systematization of manufacture.

This company is also distributer for the Chevrolet line and will have a complete exhibit at the show this week. Two models are new designs. They are the touring model, which sells for $875, and the two passenger roadster, a trim light model for daily runabout use, which is priced at $750. Both are advertised today and through a typographical error the price of electric lights and starter as a part of equipment was made to read $1.25 extra instead of $125.00 extra.

PRECAUTION BEST GUARD AGAINST AUTO EXPENSES

"A Stitch in Time Saves Nine," Says Manager of Regal Agency.

"The old adage, 'a stitch in time saves nine,' might be revised for the benefit of automobile owners to read 'Timely attention saves large expenses.' It is exaggerating but little, if any, to say that full 75 per cent of mechanical troubles that develop in automobiles are a direct result of inattention on the part of the car owner," says Roy W. Anselm of the Regal agency.

"Knocks, pounds or other foreign noises emanating from the motor and plainly indicating distress within, are for the time tolerated, and the owner quiets his conscience by assuring himself that he will have the matter investigated at the first time it is convenient for him to be without the use of his car for a day or so.

"It usually happens that this convenient time is not forthcoming. Mr. Car-owner continues to drive his car; the indications of distress become more pronounced; then finally the inevitable happens—the motor is disabled and the car has to be towed to the repair shop. The motor is taken apart for inspection and the mechanic reports a scored cylinder; a broken connecting-rod-bearing-cap and damage to other parts that invariably accompany this or, other trouble that will make necessary the installing of new parts and considerable labor to correct.

"When asked what caused the trouble the mechanic will say a loose wrist pin screw; a worn connecting rod bearing or the belts in the bearing cap loose; or name some other conditions that could easily have been eliminated if given attention at the proper time.

"No matter in what part of the car trouble develops, whether in the motor or in one of the lesser units, the car owner is invariably given ample notice of the trouble by sounds of distress or other noticeable symptoms, and this should be his cue for prompt action in the matter of investigation and adjustments."

H. C. Hull, formerly of the T. J. Moss Motor Car Co., and J. D. DeCourcey have joined the sales department of the Southern Motor Car Co., distributers of the Haynes and Metz lines.

NEW ST. LOUIS ENGINE OPERATES BY KEROSENE

Semi-Turbine Motor Also Does Away With Muffler by Fly-Wheel Exhaust.

A new company has been organized for the purpose of building and selling a new international combustion engine for automobiles, marine and stationary use, under recent patents granted to W. G. Thummel. This company is known as the American Semi-Turbine Motor Co.

The main features of the engine are the use of coal oil, a turbine fly-wheel exhaust and forced air cooling.

The first of these advantages is readily appreciated from a commercial standpoint, as it is a well-known fact that out of 100 gallons of crude oil the refiner gets six gallons of gasoline, 45 gallons of coal oil, and in the residue light and heavy lubricating oils, tar and asphalt.

The use of kerosene in this engine is not governed by the ordinary carburetor, but is handled somewhat on the European plan of injecting it into the cylinder in the shape of a heated spray by means of an oil pump.

The turbine fly-wheel exhaust means the muffling of the discharge on the periphery of the fly-wheels, and does away with the muffler entirely, utilizing this power without undue back pressure.

Forced air cooling consists in forcing one charge of the air compressor per stroke around the cylinder walls of the combustion chamber and then exhausting on the turbine fly-wheel, assuring a pressure throughout the entire cycle of operation.

Another feature of the engine is a separate air compressor mounted in tandem with the power cylinder, the charge of air being forced into a separate jacket and then into the working cylinder, where it mixes with the oil spray after both inlet and exhaust ports are closed.

The builders of this engine claim it will use coal oil at one-half the cost of gasoline, and also will produce 30 to 35 miles per gallon.

MARION 1914 ADDITIONS

Visitors to the Automobile Show will find some distinctly new models in the booth of the Lewis Automobile Co., in the 1914 Marion "Six" touring car, "Four" coupes and "Six" Sedan. Both chassis being electrically started and lighted.

The new Marion "Six" touring car weighs 3600 pounds. With a wheel base of 124 inches, it is a light running, powerful and flexible car, with many unusual features. The Westinghouse starter, ignition and lighting system is used, while the motor is a Continental six-cylinder one, developing 50 horsepower. A pressure gasoline system with tank in the rear is employed. Left-hand drive with center control permits ease of handling. Hartford shock absorbers are used, speedometer, gas pressure gauge, voltmeter, gasoline primers, carburetor adjustments and starting switch are all arranged attractively under the base of the double-acting rain-vision windshield, every instrument being within easy reach of the driver.

The two enclosed cars, four passenger coupe and five passenger Sedan, are the first of the type ever turned out from the Marion factory. Heretofore the company has confined its energies to open cars exclusively.

The seating arrangement of the coupe is novel. Three passengers sit side by side on the main seat, but the driver's seat is set six inches in advance of those occupied by the passengers beside him. The fourth seat is the folding type attached to the front panel of the body.

In the Sedan three passengers sit side by side in the main seat, while for the other two, including the driver, individual chair seats are provided.

MUCH TERRITORY OPEN

The Mound City Buggy Co., distributers of the Jackson cars for all of the territory adjacent to St. Louis, will exhibit a full line of the 1914 models, which consist of the "Sultanic," five-passenger, six-cylinder touring at $2150, seven-passenger $2300, four-cylinder "Majestic" $1885, and the four-cylinder "Olympic" at $1385.

All of the Jackson cars are equipped with the Northway motor, Toledo Autolite electric starting and lighting system. Exhibit spaces 12-14 at the auto show just to right along the aisle at near the main entrance.

During the week Senator Frank Newton, sales manager of the Jackson Automobile Co., and Howard Mathews, vice-president, will be daily visitors at the show. The Mound City Buggy Co. have recently added the entire State of Arkansas, in addition to Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri, which they held, and say that there is much choice territory now open for agents.

AUTO MAKES INCREASE IN RAILWAY EARNINGS

"If the automobile has, in a manner, perplexed the railroads of the country, in lessening their receipts from passenger traffic, it has benefited them greatly by opening up hitherto undeveloped territories and thus increasing freight traffic," said George W. Bennett, vice-president of the Willys-Overland Co., in a recent discussion. "I have lately had called to my attention statements made by Newman Erb, president of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad, and one of the keenest financial men in the country, in which the automobile was given due credit for the good it has accomplished. Mr. Erb declared that two billion dollars was a conservative estimate of the increased value of farm lands, due directly to the automobile.

SENDS SHOW INVITATIONS

The Locomobile Co. has sent to all prospects and automobile owners an invitation to the coming show. The local branch feels that a personal welcome will stimulate attendance, and the invitations will bring interested buyers to their booths. The invitations are handsomely gotten up, but, after all, they are only in keeping with the car and the way the Locomobile always does things.

MANY SHOW VISITORS

The Locomobile Co. expects quite a large Locomobile delegation from the factory for the coming Forest Park Highlands show. Mr. A. J. Banta, Chicago manager, and George A. Crane, truck sales manager of the Chicago branch, together with Mr. E. J. Jarvis, will be in attendance the entire week, and, in all probability, Mr. J. T. Roche, general sales manager, together with several assistants, will attend the show a portion of the week.

HAS NEW MANAGER

The St. Louis Kissel Kar Co. has added to its strength by appointing William Schrieber manager. Mr. Schrieber is a pioneer in the auto game, his most recent connection having been with the Lindsay Motor Car Co. He will be in charge of the Kissel display at the auto show, which will include five of the most popular models of the latest Kissel productions.

WILL HOLD CONVENTION

The Firestone branch managers and road salesmen from all parts of the country will gather in Akron for the annual sales convention next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The convention will be held in the assembly rooms of the Firestone factory. In two years buildings capable of housing 3000 employes have been added and the output of the factory has been doubled.

Special Announcement

After the most careful consideration the THIEBES PIANO COMPANY desire to announce that on and after Oct 1, 1913, they will adopt an absolutely one-price system of selling pianos, player-pianos and musical instruments.

Other concerns have from time to time advertised that they were a one-price house, and we have watched with regret the glaring violations of the principles they claimed to have adopted, and the half-hearted efforts made to uphold their position.

The public is tired of being imposed upon with deceptive advertising schemes. The press in some cities have agreed not to take this form of copy, and the "was $500 now $65.00" method and other deceptive schemes must go.

This house has never resorted to this class of advertising. We have always endeavored to justly merit the approbation of the buying public.

We are now in a position to strictly uphold every principle of an absolute one-price system. We consider the time ripe for this House to declare themselves and prove to the piano-buying public that they can buy a piano here to better advantage than elsewhere in St. Louis. Most of St. Louis' Piano Houses are located on Olive Street. Rent values on this street have doubled and tripled the past year, owing to the enormous interests which have centered on this thoroughfare. WE ARE THE ONLY PIANO FIRM IN THE DOWNTOWN DISTRICT WHO OWN THE BUILDING IN WHICH THEY CONDUCT THEIR BUSINESS.

We maintain three separate departments to which to charge the fixed expense.

We have the largest selling force of any concern in the city, and by selling a greater number of pianos we reduce the amount of the fixed overhead expense, that is charged to any one particular piano.

In adopting an absolute one-price system we have rearranged our prices, and you will find that at the THIEBES PIANO COMPANY THE ONE PRICE IS THE RIGHT PRICE.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

MANY PRIVATE EXHIBITS WILL BE SHOWN THIS WEEK

Dealers Who Were Unable to Get Space at Auto Show Arrange for Individual Displays.

In addition to the attraction of the motor car exhibits at the Forest Park Highlands automobile show this coming week, added interest will be given the motor car industry by the numerous private shows which will be held at many of the automobile salesrooms.

There are a number of dealers who are not members of the association and who were unable to obtain space at the Forest Park show and there was no alternative but to hold their displays at their place of business. Many of these have arranged receptions, floral decorations and planned evening concerts. Those who are not represented at the show, but who have received their newest 1914 models, specially finished and stripped chasses are: T. J. Moss Motor Car Co., Staver, Borland and Standard electrics; Detroit Electric Car Co., Detroit electric; George C. Brinkman Motor Car Co., National, Lyons Knight, Smith and Lippard Stewart trucks; Meyer Busch Auto Co., Speedwell pleasure cars and trucks, Davis cars; De Luxe Automobile Co., Argo electric, Henderson four and six; Cochorane Motor Sales Co., Cartercar, Gramm trucks; Imperial Motor Car Co., Imperial; Paine Auto Co., Wescott, Mora; Collier Rietz Motor Car Co., McFarland Six; Muehling Motor Co., Lauth Juergen trucks;

NEW TRUCK AGENCY

The agency for St. Louis and tributary territory for the Willys utility truck has been taken by the Missouri Motor Car Co. This truck is of the light delivery type and is made in but the 1500-pound capacity. John T. Salisbury, manager, will show you this truck, which is a product of the Willys-Overland Co., at the auto show.

Reynold Buder, formerly sales manager for the O. K. Harry Steel Co., late of Los Angeles, and California territory for the Oldsmobile Co., will sell Regals for the Anselm-Ganahl Motor Car Co.

BUICK 1914 MODELS

The Buick Motor Co.'s factory branch is showing the complete 1914 line. The new line comprises three chassis with six different types of bodies. In addition to two four-cylinder chassis for 1914, the Buick line includes a six-cylinder touring car model which sells for $1935 complete. This car, as well as the larger of the fours, departs radically from the general outward appearance which has heretofore characterized Buicks, incorporating as they do the latest body fashion dictates; that is, the stream line effect is produced by a rounded top radiator and hood, the latter sloping to the cowl, which in turn rounds into the body proper.

The smaller of the fours is practically a continuation of the corresponding model of last season, refined and improved throughout.

The Delco system for electric cranking, lighting and ignition are incorporated in a combination unit on all models as standard equipment.

A new departure in the Buick line will be the left hand drive and center control throughout the entire line.

One of the two mechanical changes of any consequence is the new use of new style rocker arms and cam shaft rods, having ball joints working in oil-soaked, felt-lined sockets, making the operation of the joints noiseless. The other change is in the exhaust manifold, which instead of passing along the cylinders below the intake manifold runs above and in front of the carburetor, down under the frame, which eliminates the excessive heat from the body and makes the carburetor more accessible.

On all models the electric equipment is of the single wire, six-volt type, with grounded return circuits. A smaller Delco unit is applied to the four-cylinder models than that used on the six. This is known as the Delco Junior, but operated in the same way as its larger brother. All models carry an Exide three-cell storage battery in connection with this electric apparatus.

Another departure from former design appears on the larger fours and the six in the placing of the fuel tank at the rear of the chassis and hung from brackets attached to the frame. The B-24 and B-25 models, however, retain the tank under the seat, feeding to the carburetor by gravity.

The running boards are clear, having no battery boxes or other attachments on them.

The rooming house conducted with a view to please keeps its vacancies listed in Post-Dispatch wants.

KEROSENE LOOKED TO AS THE COMING AUTOMOBILE FUEL

Practical Carburetor Is All That Stands in Way of Use of Coal Oil.

The fuel proposition promises to be the uppermost problem of the owners and manufacturers for the next few months. The discovery of the new fuel, motor spirit, does not appear to have solved the problem.

Those who have followed the situation claim that a practical kerosene carburetor will soon take the place of the gasoline style carburetor. Several such carburetors already have made their appearance, and one manufacturer, C. P. Henderson, of the Henderson Motor Car Co., made a transcontinental trip in one of his cars and used the Harroun Kerosene carbureter the entire trip, with remarkable satisfaction, the amount of fuel consumed for the entire trip being equal to about $6 per head for six passengers.

England and Europe are turning their attention to benzol, but the American inventor seems confident that the solution lies in a product more closely related to the fuel first selected for automobile use.

Among the many motor car manufacturers who are making experiments with the various kinds of fuel, is the National Motor Vehicle Co. of Indianapolis. Chief Engineer Wall has been conducting exhaustive tests with kerosene for a number of months, and he is quoted as saying that in his opinion it will only be a short time before a majority of automobiles will use kerosene instead of gasoline.

Up to the present time there is some question as to the feasibility of starting the motor on kerosene, and Wall suggests that it may be necessary to use a little gasoline in priming the motor, but believes that the electric starter will aid greatly in solving this problem. Some manufacturers have claimed that the disadvantages of the heavier fuel in winter could not be overcome easily, but the National company claims to have accomplished results by experiments carried on in the winter months.

STILL CLAIMS RECORD ST. LOUIS TO KANSAS CITY

According to H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co., and he claims this is substantiated by a letter from W. M. P. Stevens, secretary of the Kansas City Automobile Club, the Reo still holds the official fast time cross-State record established by them—12h. 65m., St. Louis to Kansas City—Aug. 26.

His letter follows:

"Automobile Editor Post-Dispatch, City: On Sunday, Sept. 7, an article was printed stating that the Missouri cross-State record made by a Reo on Aug. 26 of 12h. 55m. had been broken by a Cadillac car Sept. 2. This is evidently a mistake, according to their own statement, the elapsed time was 13m. 8m. It was stated that the Cadillac car had been checked out from Kansas City by Mr. W. M. P. Stevens, secretary of the Kansas City Automobile Club.

"The following letter which we have received from Secretary Stevens of Kansas City states that he did not check out this car.

"'Kardell Motor Car Co., St. Louis, Mo.: At the request of Mr. Frank Witwer of the Southwest Motor Co. of this city, I wish to advise that I did not check out of this city two gentlemen driving a Cadillac car, at 5:30 a. m. Tuesday, Sept. 3.

"'Under date of Aug. 29 I received a letter from the Cadillac people advising that two young men would leave St. Louis at 3:30 Sunday morning, Aug. 31, and expected to arrive in Kansas City about 2 of the same day. Along in the afternoon I received a telegram saying that they were forced to abandon the trip at Boonville. Possibly someone else checked them out from here on the date given. Hoping this will straighten the matter, I beg to remain, yours very truly.

"'W. M. P. STEVENS, Secretary.'

"Yours truly,

"KARDELL MOTOR CAR CO.

"By H. F. Fahrenkrog."

A letter was delivered to the starting authority in St. Louis by the contestants who drove the Cadillac car which claims the Kansas City record, from the manager of the International Garage in Kansas City. It certifies that he started Roy Stelzer and Harry Wissler from his garage at 5 a. m. Sept. 2. Correspondence from him says that he sent a copy of the certificate to Secretary W. M. P. Stevens.

PAIGE CARS IN SPAIN

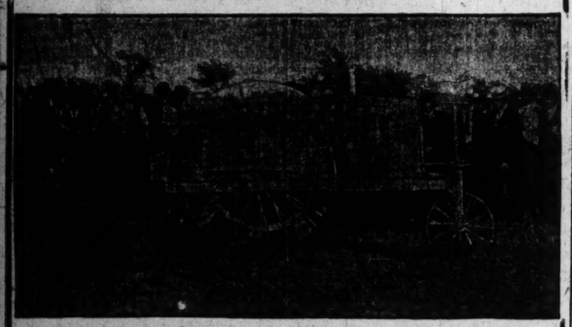
A large shipment of Paige cars has been made to Cadiz Province in Spain, where automobile service has been established between Jerez de la Frontera and Arcos.

Arcos is situated upon a rocky eminence in a part of the country almost isolated because of the lack of railroads.

The distance between these two cities, a journey of between 18 and 20 miles, has previously been covered by ungainly and uncomfortable horse-drawn carriages and wagons. To make the trip has previously consumed about five hours, which seemed more like 10 because of the slow-moving vehicles and uncomfortable jolts. Now, however, the distance is easily covered with comfort and dispatch, requiring only about one hour and a quarter to negotiate the roads.

While these roads are not worse than many in our own country, nevertheless, to the Spaniard they were impossible until the American showed him how to once more put Arcos, a city of 10,000 people, on the map, carry their mail and give them a twice-daily connection with the outside world.

Farmers Who See the $335 "Bull" Tractor Say, "Good-Bye Horses"



To Be Shown This Week at the Illinois Fair.

The big sensation of a mechanical character at the recent big Minnesota State Fair was the little $335.00 Bull Tractor. This is brand-new product, although the culmination of fifteen years of designing, shop and field experimenting of two of the country's best-known tractor experts, engineers who have to their earlier credit, also, one of the most successful large tractors sold today.

The mechanism of this machine is marvelous—so simple and direct you will wonder why no one thought of it before. There is no waste motion, no deeply hidden parts to necessitate tearing the machine to pieces to make repairs. Any farm handy-man can run it and take care of its little troubles.

But when it comes to work—there's where it shines. It pulls a 2-bottom plow through most any soil and works hour after hour with practically no attention, no rest, no delays, no matter what the weather may be. For other kinds of hauling it is equally valuable, being used to mighty good advantage on seeders, cultivators, manure spreaders, harvesters, road graders, wagons, etc. This is the work on which it is going to replace horses.

Now comes the work it does so well and which horses cannot touch to advantage—all the stationary work about the farm—wood sawing, corn shelling, feed grinding, ensilage cutting, baling hay, charging storage batteries, running a small separator, pumping water, etc. For these it is more convenient than a stationary engine, because it is so easily moved from place to place about the yard under its own power. Large tractors cannot be used profitably for the average stationary work on the farm. Their expensive up-keep and gasoline extravagance will not permit it. But the "Bull" works easily and cheaply and will go anywhere.

The "Bull" is a three-wheel tractor—but it differs from other three-wheel machines in that it has only one "bull" or drive wheel. The other two wheels are used for balance and guidance. The "bull" wheel is six feet in diameter, very strongly made. The rim is 12 inches wide and provided either with cones or cleats at the choice of the buyer. The large Bull Gear is attached to its spokes and rim. This wheel travels in the furrow, thus obtaining a smooth, solid footing and avoids packing the soil.

The front wheel is 28 inches in diameter with 5-inch rim. It also travels in the furrow and serves as an automatic guide in plowing. The left side wheel is 40 inches in diameter with 4-inch rim. It is hung on an adjustable crank axle which permits of various track widths as well as enabling adjustments which keep the frame level, no matter how deep in the furrow the bull wheel is traveling or how sloping the land may be.

The engine is of the two-cylinder opposed type. The shaft runs in large bearings and to its opposite ends are connected the clutch and the bull pinion. The clutch works on the inner rim of the pulley and is "care." Having the pulley thus directly connected to the shaft does away with all gears when stationary work is to be done.

By using only one drive wheel, differential gears are done away with altogether—eliminating trouble and expense as well as reducing weight. The forward and reverse gears and the bull gears are the only gears on the whole machine. Only four of them are active when the engine is doing traction work. Other tractors have from 14 to 30 gears.

It is to be hoped that every farmer will see the wisdom of attending the Illinois Fair, now in session, and see this wonderful little tractor work. The operators will put it through any work it is claimed to be able to do. There's nothing like seeing the machine work, but those who can't attend the Fair should write the Bull Tractor Co., 2533 University avenue S. E., Minneapolis, for full information.—ADVERTISEMENT.

When the tires are ridden soft there is too much action in the side wall, or hinge, which must eventually result in the same injury to the fabric that occurs to a wire when bent numerous times at a given point, says J. Patterson, local branch manager of the Firestone company.

This excessive heating softens the rubber cement, or "friction," on the fabric carcass. In a sense, devulcanization takes place. This, combined with an irregular tension of one layer of fabric in relation to another, develops a separation, chafing and ultimately a blow-out. Most of the advantage of a large tire is lost unless it is kept inflated properly, as otherwise it is only equivalent to the comparative air volume of a smaller size.

FOUR CARS A DAY

There are two logical methods of building motor cars.

One method is to turn out cars in enormous quantities at low prices.

The other method is to produce a limited number of cars of the highest individual refinement. Each system has its exponent. In a Middle Western City "Mass Production" enables a car to be manufactured and sold at a very low price. In a New England City "The Best Built Car in America" is produced practically car by car in one of the finest factories and by the finest mechanics in the world.

One car carries out one ideal, the other a totally different ideal. Both are right. Both are built, not assembled. The Western company can turn out 1000 cars a day. The New England company produces only four cars a day. The idea back of the Western company is to meet the world-wide demand for a low-priced car. The idea back of the New England company is to meet the demand for the highest quality car that can be produced.

The Western car is turned out like a "Dollar Watch." The Locomobile is built like a Chronometer. Both cars are eminently successful—one in quantity, the other in quality.

The success of the Locomobile is due to the fixed policy of building not more than four cars a day. Its great factory could not successfully build cheap cars if it wanted to.

The whole factory is designed, equipped and organized solely to build a limited number of cars in which the extremes of high quality are considered fundamentals. There are more high-priced, bred-in-the-bone, expert typical New England mechanics in this factory than there are ordinary mechanics in some automobile factories which turn out 10 to 12 times as many cars as are produced in the Locomobile Factory. The men, the machinery, the system are all organized into a compact working whole for the production of Locomobiles. As such they are responsible for the Locomobile Success. In any other kind of a factory they would be out of place.

This is not a new policy with the Locomobile. Years ago we concluded that just as surely as the low-priced car would be manufactured and sold successfully only in very large quantities, just so surely could the car of Highest Quality be produced only in limited numbers.

Therefore our fixed policy from the very start has been to limit our production to the number of cars to which we could give most intimate, personal attention to every detail of each car. While others were increasing their plants and building more cars, we were increasing our quality and making the Locomobile "The Best Built Car in America."

Every Locomobile is built in every detail to carry out the ideal of quality, of individual perfection, of true, artistic, mechanical refinement.

As a logical and inevitable result of the Four Cars a Day Policy the Locomobile now occupies a peculiar position. It is the only high-grade car whose sales have increased during the past two years. By voluntarily limiting the number of cars which it will produce, the supply each year falls further and further below the demand. Each year there are a greater number of people who appreciate the Locomobile Quality, who are unable to satisfy that appreciation because they have not made known their desires far enough in advance.

FEW MEN DO ALL CONGRESS' WORK, SISSON DECLARES

'PEOPLE REAL REFORMERS'

Politicians Bring Them About, He Asserts, So They May Get Back Into Office.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—Representative Thomas U. Sisson of Mississippi went on the warpath tonight against civic conditions and political bosses. He spoke before a citizens' association, none of the members of which enjoy the voting franchise. Sisson said there was more of what he called "stupid ignorance" in New York than in any other city, town, village or hamlet in the United States.

The stupid ignorance Sisson attributed to Tammany Hall, among others. He mentioned an Independence Day speech that he made at Tammany Hall, and said he never had seen a more magnificent body of men than those present as members of the Tammany Society.

Animal-Like Assembly.

"Later there was a dinner," Sisson continued. "It consisted of tons of barbecued meat and countless loaves of bread. The persons who consumed the bread made up the most animal-like assembly I have ever seen. They ate ravenously and seemed starved.

"While we have such persons as these eating at the boards of political parties we cannot hope for civic emancipation. These people were the same ones who had applauded when I had denounced bosses in making a speech at the Independence Day celebration. They were in the galleries, and they were responsible for quite a demonstration in favor of my remarks.

"I noticed that those of the wigwam were silent as tombstones during the parts of my address that were applauded by the galleries. The magnificent body of men were the bosses, and they were thanked by the galleries for the privilege of eating the bread and meat, for which the galleries had paid in selling their political rights.

"Thank God, I come from a State—Mississippi—that is not cursed with a big city. There is not a town of 100,000 population in my State, and I am proud of it."

Few in Congress Who Work.

Later Sisson paid his respects to Congress.

"In all walks of life," he said, "the work is done by a few men. There are few men in Congress who work. The others are driftwood; they content themselves with hustling around the Government departments and with sending to their constituents letters inclosing horse books, garden seed, farmers' bulletins and works on the diseases of cattle.

"Reforms do not come out of the White House, nor do they come out of Congress. They do all things, these politicians, to get back into office. Congress never will be responsible for a reform in and of itself and of its own initiative. It must have an educated popular face to push it."

Wild Natives Not Only Pests on Mindanao Island—Making War on Bats and Rats—Wear Pillow Slips on Legs and Arms for Protection Against Mosquitos — Town Half Covered With Water Fully Half the Time—in Old Shacks Where Everything Is Primitive—Pitiful Condition of Unclean, Diseased Children.

THE Post-Dispatch presents the second installment of the highly interesting letters from the Philippines from the pen of the wife of a United States army officer now stationed in Mindanao in the heart of the Moro country.

In Mindanao.

CATABATO, Mindanao, P. I.
June 17, 1913.

DEAR DADDY—The mail came on Sunday, but I didn't get any, so felt very sad and disheartened—better luck next time, maybe.

We have had a great deal of excitement this week because of the trouble in Jolo. Capt. Nichols and several men were killed and others wounded. They are trying to take a mountain that is held by the Moros, and I am afraid there will be more lives lost. They are trying to rush the mountain instead of using the artillery, because the Moros took the women and children with them, and our officers do not want to hurt them. It is rather a foolish idea, I think, because the women fight as hard as the men and have killed several of our men. They ought to blow them all up. It is perfectly dreadful that our officers and soldiers have to go up against such savages.

Sunday a boatload of Moros came back from Mecca and about a hundred more started out on a pilgrimage. They will be gone nine or ten months. The ones who came back were most gorgeously arrayed—brilliant turbans, embroidered silk kimonos, over which they wore gaudy jackets. I hope the ones who have gone will come back as well clad. They did not have much between them and the cold, cold world when they started out. Maybe Mohammed chides them for being so close to nature. We went to the dock to see them land, so it was quite exciting. They all insisted on shaking hands, until I felt like running home and boiling mine. They beam at one and show all their black teeth until they look like demons. They paraded around town all day, but as soon as tatoo blew, at 9 o'clock, they simply seemed to disappear into thin air. They are afraid of spirits after the lights are out. Each man has four or five wives, and they follow him, single file, the favorite spouse coming directly behind her lord and master, and the most lowly lady is the last exhibit in the show.

Bat-Extermination Party.

WE had a bat-extermination party a few days ago. They had become so numerous that it was a case of their leaving or our doing so, so Joe got two Moros to go up into the space between the ceiling and the roof and kill some. After they had been up there for a little while, during which three clouds of bats had flown out, one Moro brought down a whole sack of dead bats and made signs asking what I wanted done with them. I made signs back to throw them in the river, and do it quick. Then they put eight big bottles of chloride of lime all over the place and so far the pests have stayed away.

The next day we put poison out for rats and saw three enormous ones that died, and we didn't know how many more. Now if we could only get rid of the people below us we would be quite comfortable. A few nights ago a little new baby appeared on the scene below, and none of us had much sleep. All the men and several women in town congregated downstairs until it seemed like a fiesta. The family has just one bed, so the father and two children stayed up all night. The children sang nearly all the time. It is very easy to hear all that is going on, because we can see through the cracks in the floor. Dear, dear, it is a great country, and I cannot say I am crazy about it. Still, we both keep well, and when we forget the smells, rats, bats and Moros we rather enjoy the queer sights. Far be it from me to agree with Kipling about "them spicy garlic smells." Our food is rather monotonous. The only kind of meat we can get is beef. Then we have eggs, chicken, fish, a few fresh vegetables and bananas and naynaya (a native fruit, rather insipid and best in a salad), all other fruit, or rather apples and oranges, we get from the States; sometimes a dozen or two of each. The worst thing that has happened to me is that I have had to give up coffee, because I do not like the milk.

I wish you could see the latest styles in Cotahota millinery. I am trying to get some hats to take home. This is supposed to be the place to get good brass, but all I have seen so far is mere junk.

Fierce People, "Fierce" Odors.

June 13, 1913.

THE people are fierce and the smells worse. The other day a Moro woman, the wife of a Chinaman, died. They lived across from the hospital, so we went there to see what a native funeral would be like. She had joined the Catholic church just before she died, so they had just one of the Moro customs carried out. Two boys brought a table out into the middle of the street, then the pall-bearers, one of them dressed in green tights and a green pajama coat, the color of my evening coat, carried out the coffin and put it on the table; then two incense burners, the cross, and the principal mourner (an old Moro woman; the husband didn't go to the funeral) gathered around the coffin and the photographer took a picture of the elevating scene. The family will decorate their houses with the picture. When Joe told the Chinaman his wife couldn't live, he said: "No importe" (no matter), so you see we are in a queer country.

It is pretty hot, but we are both well and hope to keep so. We have a fine cook, who also does all the marketing.

Lay of the Land.

DEAR MAMMA: I have been intending to write you for some time, but seem already to have acquired the Philippine habit of putting off. I received your nice long letter of May 10 today and we enjoyed it very much. I think some of you should write once a week, as we get a mail at least that often, and I am disappointed when I do not receive a letter. We have a great time when the mail arrives, stop everything until every paper has been read.

This island is a vast tropical country, with many swamps, rivers and quite a few high mountains. There are forests of timber, mostly hard wood, and it is a country of great resources if developed by a race fit to stand a tropical climate. Cocoanuts, bananas, lemons and mangoes grow wild and most all vegetables can be cultivated. We can get some eggplant, sweet potatoes, beans, squash and other vegetables at the native market and there is no danger from anything that is cooked. We are on a pretty good sized river, about four miles from the ocean, so we get good fish and crabs. Chickens are cheap and plentiful, so, together with our Government supplies, we live very nicely.

This is headquarters for a battalion of Philippine scouts, two companies being here and the other two up the river at several subposts. The natives make fine soldiers and their discipline is almost perfect, but they have to have white officers to hold them together. They are quick to learn and make fine marksmen, and seldom have proved unreliable under fire. There are two companies of Moro scouts and they have always proved loyal to their officers and fight like fiends even against their own tribe. The Island of Jolo, below here, is inhabited by a very fierce tribe of Moros who are constantly on the warpath, due mostly to the influence of their priests. Gen. Pershing cleaned them out last week and I guess no one will ever know how many were killed, as they never quit, but fight until chopped to pieces.

Need Ruling Hand.

THE Filipinos of the northern islands are altogether different and are very bright, quick and anxious to learn. The great majority are still far from being educated and will for many years need a strong ruling hand. They are like the Mexicans; if turned loose, would fight continually among themselves. It is only a few educated, agitating politicians who are after their independence. If I were asked to give my opinion of these islands I would say that they are very rich and can be developed wonderfully, but it will take a tropical people to do so, and the nation to do this quickest and best would be the Japs, and if it is possible, the easiest way out for us is to sell them to Japan. It is really pitiful to see the white troops, officers and men, who have been here two years. They are pale, drawn-out, nervous wrecks, and I will wager that I can tell any white man at sight who has been here two years.

The worst move the army has made in years has been to increase the tour over here to three years. The officers all can tell you the number of months and days they have been here, and I have failed to find any who will finally and honestly admit they like it.

Of course, the high rankers like it because they are a long way from the War Department, so are their own bosses, have beautiful quarters, good boats at their command and can always make trips and have the best of everything.

Statement by Author's Mother

THESE are letters written to my husband with no thought of publication. They show to a degree what our officers and soldiers are enduring at some of those stations, and under what awful conditions they live.

My daughter, only a girl, went over in April, and, while she has not complained and is as brave as any soldier, her letters all show, without any intention on her part, at what a fearful cost we are holding the islands.

In the province where she is there are, according to Government reports, over 125,000 inhabitants, of which 123,000 are wild. It almost staggers belief that a girl reared in all the refinements of life, highly educated, accomplished in music, literature and languages, physically small and delicate, fond of social life, exquisite in all her tastes, could endure such hardships and without a murmur.

Are we doing right? Have we not considered the Filipinos more than we have our own? Have we not done enough for a people who do not want us and whom we do not want? Have we not spilled enough good American blood?

My daughter lived her life in Washington, where her father has represented his State continuously for 23 years in the House and Senate.

Here we are living in an old shack that rocks from stem to stern when one moves, leaks in a dozen places, and four families and a dirty chinese eating place below us. This town has no water system, open sewerage dependent on the tides, and most of the town under water at high tide.

The inhabitants are used to such places, so seem to thrive, but it is beyond me why they don't die. At it is they are pretty healthy, but if they survive childhood their lifetime is short, and you see few old people. We are very well so far. There is no social life to speak of, and we cannot walk far, as the town is surrounded by the rivers and swamps.

Quinine a Dinner Course.

July 2, 1913.

NOTHING exciting ever happens, so our letters are necessarily rather dull and unentertaining. They have started a new hospital across the street from our house, and that will give us some recreation to watch it go up.

We have great fun at dinner. Between the meat course and the salad we all take a quinine capsule to keep malaria away and we put our feet and legs into pillow cases to keep the mosquitoes from devouring us entirely. They are pretty fierce at times.

The nun who is trying to teach me Spanish sent me some great big, delicious mangoes and a native fruit called mangastien, which has a very delicate and lovely flavor. The mangoes were much better than the ones we had in Honolulu. They grow around Jolo and on some of the islands further north. Just a few small and very inferior ones grow here.

The Civil Government has sent 600 Filipino settlers down here to go up the river a little way to grow rice. The army men seem to think the Moros will give them a good deal of trouble for a while, but we hope not, because the troops here would have to settle the disputes if any occur. They have cleaned up Jolo again, and every one is hoping it is for good, but those Moros are particularly pestiferous, so it seems doubtful if the lesson will be very effective.

Philippines Destiny.

July 24, 1913.

DEAR MAMMA: The new battalion is very much disgusted; their trunks, etc., were left out in the pouring rain over at Parang for almost a week and their good clothes were all soaking wet—colors faded into each other and mildewed when they arrived. Their dishes were nearly all broken and their furniture also. It is a shame.

People over here think that it will not be but a couple of years before Japan takes the islands. It certainly would be the easiest thing in the world to do. That has just been proved. Corregidor, the Gibraltar of Manila Bay, has always been called impregnable. They moved most of the infantry over there for some reason or other and had them all in camp on the tail of the island. When they were all settled they happened to look behind them and saw three Japanese warships behind them in Manila Bay. As there are no guns on the Manila side of the island of Corregidor it would be the easiest kind of a thing for Japanese warships to go into the bay they did this time. In times of peace, and when they were safely in declare war, and all the wonderful and much-talked-of defense of Corregidor wouldn't amount to a row of pins.

The trouble with the Americans is that we have the big head so badly that we think no one can touch us. We would probably be quite safe in case of war unless the Filipinos were disloyal. You cannot depend on any of them. I am inclosing a sketch of Manila Bay and Corregidor. Japanese ships are cruising all around us over here and, of course, they are not here simply for their health nor for the fun of it. We must make them laugh with our army and navy—it is a disgrace not to have larger ones. As for the Filipinos being given their independence, they couldn't last five minutes. I don't see how anyone who has ever been over here can think of such a thing. I can see, in just the little time we have been here, how absurd such an idea is.

GIVE ME A CHANCE TO CURE YOUR RHEUMATISM

FREE This photograph truthfully shows the terrible effects of RHEUMATISM in Mr. Delano's case. You, who have suffered the tortures, can easily imagine the racking pains he endured. When only a youth rheumatism became chronic with him and his joints were so distorted and swollen that he was nearly helpless. He tried medicine of every description, even 125 bottles of one remedy—but nothing did more than to give him a little temporary relief. He tried doctors and specialists by the score with no better results.

At last, after spending $20,000 and suffering untold agony for thirty-six years, he discovered a remedy which cured him, and I want to send every rheumatism sufferer a

HOW THIN PEOPLE MAY PUT ON FLESH

"Just look, Mary, at those Robinsons. Three months ago they were as thin as you and I. And Robinson says all they have done is 'Eat Sargol and grow fat.'"

50c BOX FREE

I want to prove to every thin man and woman who reads this paper that I have a treatment which quickly increases weight and puts ten—twenty—yes—even thirty pounds of life-giving, nerve-quieting, warmth-producing fat on bony frames. A treatment that fills out hollows, makes weak, pale, run-down folks strong and healthy, and revitalizes the whole body until it fairly tingles with vibrant energy.

I want to prove to you, personally, that no matter how thin you are or how long you have been thin, that you can make your weight what you will, weigh what you should weigh and be as fat as you should be. I want to prove that you can clothe every part of your bony frame with good, firm, permanent, healthy "stay there" fat and muscular tissue. I can think of no better way to prove all this than to send you some of this treatment, which is called Sargol, absolutely free, and let you use it yourself. And that's what I propose to do.

Sargol is surely a marvel. It succeeds because it makes your food work and stick. I believe you are thin because you don't get enough nourishment from what you eat. The fat-making elements in your foods are going to waste. You probably eat from four to six pounds of good, solid food each day. Yet you don't gain an ounce in weight. Your food doesn't stick, hardly gives you enough real nourishment to pay for the cost of cooking. Probably if you ate a dozen meals a day, in your present condition, you wouldn't gain a pound. Sargol and the same meals you're eating now should put many pounds of good, firm flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is a scientific compound. Each ingredient contains highly valuable ingredients designed to furnish your whole body with the very fat essentials it so badly needs if you expect to get fat and gain in strength. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of turning the sugars and starches in your food into rich, ripe nourishment for your tissues and blood. It aims to save the immense amount of fat-making nourishment that now goes to waste with every meal, to force it to renew the red corpuscles throughout the body and to build layer upon layer of healthy fat on wasted, emaciated frames. Its sole purpose is to make FAT—fat that means better looks, better health, a warmer body and a more active brain.

Don't take my word for this. I don't ask you to believe me now. But stop the doubting and indifference that prevents decision and gets you nowhere. ACT! Sit down now and send the FREE COUPON below. It entitles you to one 50c box of Sargol, and I send it to you free to prove that all I say is true. Take Sargol with your meals—then watch it work. See how weight goes up and nervousness goes down; how stomach troubles vanish and worries fade away; how face and figure fill with healthy fat, and happiness and joyous, buoyant strength, energy and ambition take the place of lagging, drooping courage and wanted vitality.

Cut out the coupon now. Send it to me now with your name and address and 10c in silver, to help pay postage, packing, etc., and to prove good faith, and a 50c package of Sargol will go forward to you by return mail, absolutely free. GIRL LEAVES SHOW; MISSING, SO IS MAN

Rosa Lopka, Aged 14, Sought by Caseyville and Belleville Authorities.

Mrs. Frank Lopka, who conducts a boarding house on the Caseyville road near the Royal coal mine, has asked the Belleville police to aid her in finding her 14-year-old daughter, Rosa, who has not been home since she left Friday evening, saying she was going to a theater.

The girl was accompanied to the theater by J. Hurczky, a boarder at the Lopka home. He told the police that the girl left the theater suddenly about 9 o'clock Friday night, without saying a word to him. He followed her outside and saw her walking down the stret with another man.

When the girl had not returned home at midnight Friday the parents sought Grancs Benchiff, who had paid marked attentions to the girl. He was missing and his trunk was gone. None of the girl's clothing was in her room. The girl is large for her age. Benchiff is a coal miner, 26 years old.

WEBB SEIZES SLOT MACHINES IN EAST SIDE ROADHOUSES

At 4 o'clock yesterday morning State's Attorney Charles Webb of St. Clair County concluded a 12-hour raid of roadhouses in the vicinity of East St. Louis and had confiscated 24 slot machines. In some instances he used a sledge hammer to break open the devices when the owners refused to permit him to examine the contents.

The machines were taken to East St. Louis in an automobile truck and are to be used as evidence when the cases are presented to the grand jury. Justice Boyne fixed the grand jury bonds of the owners at $500. The defendants surrendered soon after the raids and furnished sureties.

Brothers Help in Raid.

In the assortment of machines was one called "baseball," which awarded the player a prize if he succeeded in knocking a "home run" when he dropped his nickel in the slot, but test plays revealed that nothing higher than a three-base hit could be scored. Others were chewing gum machines, which netted the player a handful of nickels or a piece of "taffy tulu," more often the "taffy-tulu."

Webb was accompanied on the raiding expedition by his two brothers, Thomas and Richard Webb, and a Constable and Deputy Sheriff. They met with no resistance. The first stop was made at Nichols & Cohn's place on the Collinsville road. Webb bought drinks for his party and then casually remarked that he would like to "drop a few nickels." He was directed to a back room, where he found four slot machines.

Next the party went to Brose Berkley's, a mile further up the road and found one machine.

At Forty-eighth street and Caseyville road the raiders found two machines at Louis Christensen's and two blocks away they took charge of another machine, which they found at John Peters' place.

The next stop was at Cahokia, where Mrs. Mary Palmer conducts a prosperous roadhouse. Her guests backed up her protests when the raiders took charge of her "baseball game," but the machine was loaded onto an auto truck, along with the others.

At Jake Smith's place in Cahokia two machines were seized. Jake said he would "have the law" on the raiders, but Webb revealed his identity and Jake said he was "stung." James Houston and Eugene Dowers each admitted ownership of two machines. Their property was taken and they were ordered to appear before Justice Boyne.

CEMENT BURIES WORKER

John Bright Rescued by Brother, Shoulder Injured.

John Bright, a laborer in a cement factory at Jerseyville, was buried yesterday afternoon under 1500 pounds of cement, a heap of sacks of which toppled over upon him.

CONFESSES LOVE FOR MAN SHOT BY HER HUSBAND

Mrs. Ford, Marshal's Wife, Leaves Family and Writes She Never Will Return.

In a letter mailed to an Alton newspaper yesterday, Mrs. Jerome Ford of Benbow City confesses her love for James Chadwick, Marshal of Wood River, who was shot in the arm in a street duel with Ford two weeks ago. Ford is Marshal of Benbow City. The two men met on the street that divides their towns. Each fired several shots.

At that time Mrs. Ford made the statement that the duel was caused by Chadwick's attentions to her. Ford was placed under a bond of $500 on the shooting charge. Mrs. Ford, since the duel, has left her home and four children. She is keeping her whereabouts secret.

In her letter Mrs. Ford says the reason her husband shot Chadwick was that the latter was too friendly with her. Ford, she wrote, often left Chadwick at home with her when he went out to do chores, and she began to love him. Chadwick, she says, asked her to go away with him and she finally yielded. Her husband, according to the letter, urged her to return, and Chadwick also asked her to go back for the sake of her children.

Mrs. Ford says she returned home, but after that there was continual quarreling. She expresses sorrow for what has happened, but says she has gone away because she does not want to appear at her husband's trial and she never expects to return home. Her husband, she writes, has been good to her, but she feels that she never can care for him again as she does for Chadwick.

ILLINOIS FARMER, 82, MYSTERIOUSLY MISSING

His Hat and Coat, Horse and Buggy Are Found Along Road Near Benton.

BENTON, Ill., Oct. 4.—Charles Palmer is making a statewide search for his father, William L. Palmer, 82 years old, who disappeared mysteriously two weeks ago, but has found no trace of him.

Palmer, a well-to-do farmer living near Benton, came into town Sept. 10 and bought a horse and buggy from Samuel McCollum, drew several hundred dollars from a bank and told his friends he was going to drive to the home of his daughter, 13 miles away. Within five miles of his destination he stopped at the home of Samuel Everett for a drink of water. That was the last seen of him.

Three days later the horse and buggy were found in a field near Everett's house. Palmer's hat and coat, a box of matches and a freshly-filled pipe were found by the side of the road a mile from the rig. A three-cornered hole was in the crown of the hat, which had the appearance of having been punctured from the inside. A similar hole was in the bottom of the buggy.

Several hundred men from Benton and neighboring towns have searched the country for a radius of 10 miles without result. Reports have come from Northern Illinois that an old man without hat or coat was squandering money. Charles Palmer has followed up these clews, but has heard nothing to indicate his father's whereabouts.

FINK IS ACCUSED OF RELEASING MORTGAGE

Suit Filed to Set Aside Action Taken Without Consent of Trustee.

Henry J. Fink is accused of releasing a mortgage for $2000 on the books of the Recorder of Deeds in a suit filed yesterday in Circuit Court at Belleville by August Barthel, trustee. The suit is directed against Fink, John Sikking and wife and Barney Burmeister.

It is charged that Sikking borrowed $2000 from Fink on July 19, 1911, and gave a mortgage on property in Granvue place, Belleville, as security. Later Barthel purchased the mortgage from Fink. Barthel charges that Fink on July 11, 1913, released the mortgage without Barthel's consent or knowledge.

It is further charged that on July 10, 1913, Sikking gave a new mortgage on a part of the same property to Barney Burmeister. Barthel says Sikking continued to pay interest on the mortgage to Fink even after Fink had released it. Barthel asks that the release of the mortgage be set aside.

Rosa Lopka, Aged 14, Sought by Caseyville and Belleville Authorities.

Mrs. Frank Lopka, who conducts a boarding house on the Caseyville road near the Royal coal mine, has asked the Belleville police to aid her in finding her 14-year-old daughter, Rosa, who has not been home since she left Friday evening, saying she was going to a theater.

The girl was accompanied to the theater by J. Hurcsky, a boarder at the Lopka home. He told the police that the girl left the theater suddenly about 9 o'clock Friday night, without saying a word to him. He followed her outside and saw her walking down the stret with another man.

When the girl had not returned home at midnight Friday the parents sought Grancz Benchiff, who had paid marked attentions to the girl. He was missing and his trunk was gone. None of the girl's clothing was in her room. The girl is large for her age. Benchiff is a coal miner, 26 years old.

At 4 o'clock yesterday morning State's Attorney Charles Webb of St. Clair County concluded a 12-hour raid of roadhouses in the vicinity of East St. Louis and had confiscated 24 slot machines. In some instances he used a sledge hammer to break open the devices when the owners refused to permit him to examine the contents.

The machines were taken to East St. Louis in an automobile truck and are to be used as evidence when the cases are presented to the grand jury. Justice Boyne fixed the grand jury bonds of the owners at $500. The defendants surrendered soon after the raids and furnished sureties.

Brothers Help in Raid.

In the assortment of machines was one called "baseball," which awarded the player a prize if he succeeded in knocking a "home run" when he dropped his nickel in the slot, but test plays revealed that nothing higher than a three-base hit could be scored. Others were chewing gum machines, which netted the player a handful of nickels or a piece of "taffy tulu," more often the "taffy-tulu."

Webb was accompanied on the raiding expedition by his two brothers, Thomas and Richard Webb, and a Constable and Deputy Sheriff. They met with no resistance. The first stop was made at Nichols & Cohn's place on the Collinsville road. Webb bought drinks for his party and then casually remarked that he would like to "drop a few nickels." He was directed to a back room, where he found four slot machines.

Next the party went to Brose Berkley's, a mile further up the road and found one machine.

At Forty-eighth street and Caseyville road the raiders found two machines at Louis Christensen's and two blocks away they took charge of another machine, which they found at John Peters' place.

The next stop was at Cahokia, where Mrs. Mary Palmer conducts a prosperous roadhouse. Her guests backed up her protests when the raiders took charge of her "baseball game," but the machine was loaded onto an auto truck, along with the others.

At Jake Smith's place in Cahokia two machines were seized. Jake said he would "have the law" on the raiders, but Webb revealed his identity and Jake said he was "stung." James Houston and Eugene Dowers each admitted ownership of two machines. Their property was taken and they were ordered to appear before Justice Boyne.

CONFESSES LOVE FOR MAN SHOT BY HER HUSBAND

Mrs. Ford, Marshal's Wife, Leaves Family and Writes She Never Will Return.

In a letter mailed to an Alton newspaper yesterday, Mrs. Jerome Ford of Benbow City confesses her love for James Chadwick, Marshal of Wood River, who was shot in the arm in a street duel with Ford two weeks ago. Ford is Marshal of Benbow City. The two men met on the street that divides their towns. Each fired several shots.

At that time Mrs. Ford made the statement that the duel was caused by Chadwick's attentions to her. Ford was placed under a bond of $500 on the shooting charge. Mrs. Ford, since the duel, has left her home and four children. She is keeping her whereabouts secret.

Her husband, she writes, has been good to her, but she feels that she never can care for him again as she does for Chadwick.

SULZER TO GIVE OUT STATEMENT ON TAKING STAND

Will Curtail Testimony at Lawyer's Request, But Will "Tell People All."

THUS ESCAPES ORDEAL

Prosecutors Planned Rigidly to Cross-Examine Him if He Opened Up New Lines.

By Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Gov. Sulzer tonight was said to have perfected a plan for his getting a whole story before the public and at the same escaping cross examination on tion on more than a part of it.

It was generally reported that if his attorneys continued to insist on his curtailing his sworn testimony—as they are said to be doing—he will abide by their demands, but will issue a statement to the newspapers containing that part of his narrative barred by his legal advisers. He will give out the statement on taking the witness stand, it is reported.

"People Entitled to Know."

Should he do this he would get his whole story to the people, which he always has insisted he would accomplish in some manner. One thing that he has told many callers and maintained in talking with his counsel is that the people are entitled to know everything that he does about the inner workings of political organizations in the State. But his attorneys have pointed out repeatedly that if he lets his anxiety for divulging information carry him too far he will open the way for the severest cross-examination by counsel for the Board of Managers.

So if the Governor's counsellors have their way his sworn testimony will be much less sensational than the statement he is now said to be planning.

The asserted eagerness of the attorneys for the Board of Managers to have the Governor take the stand has made the attorneys somewhat chary about him "telling everything."

Argument With His Lawyers.

Counsel for the board make no secret of their hopes that the testimony of Sulzer will open the way for introduction of much new evidence which they cannot introduce if he fails to testify or only denies briefly stories told by witnesses for the managers last week.

The Governor's eagerness to make public what his statement is expected to contain if it is issued, has caused endless argument between him and his counsel. More than two weeks ago it is said he planned an expose of 3500 words and was ready to give it to the newspapers when his counsel checked him.

JANNUS TO MAKE FLIGHT FOR ENDURANCE RECORD

St. Louis Aviator to Attempt to Stay in Air More Than Six Hours, 22 Minutes.

An attempt to break the American endurance record for aeroplanes, now held by Lieut. Towers of the United States Navy Aviation Corps, will be made this week by Tony Jannus.

The three men who held this record immediately preceding its capture by Lieut. Towers have been killed. Al Welsh of Washington, D. C., who broke the endurance record in 1910, at the St. Louis meet at which Col. Theodore Roosevelt was taken up, met death at the army aviation grounds, near Washington, last year.

Howard Gill, another St. Louis flyer, who wrested the honor from Welsh at Kinloch Field, St. Louis, in October, 1911, was killed at the Chicago meet in September, 1912.

Paul Peck of New York, who had broken Gill's record, was killed at Cicero Field, Chicago. Lieut. Towers' record (time continuously in the air), is 6h. 32m.

Jannus, who flies the Benoist tractor-biplane, plans to make a flight from the Railway Exchange Building, Tuesday or Wednesday, to the Catlin tract, at the northern edge of Forest Park, where most of the aeroplane flights of Veiled Prophet week are to be staged. The Mississippi River has been designated by the Aero Club for the week's flying beat exhibitions.

FALL ON STAIRS IS FATAL

Man Who Died After Accident in Saloon, Identified.

A man who fell downstairs in a saloon at 1900 Chouteau avenue at noon Friday and died without having regained consciousness at the city hospital yesterday afternoon, was identified as William H. Noakes, 34 years old, a laborer, of 1216 La Salle street.

The police were notified of the identification when the man's death was reported, but up to that time there had been no successful effort to find out who he was. His death was due to a fractured skull. The hospital authorities neglected to get the name or address of the man who identified Noakes.

"LOVE STAR" PLAY CHOSEN

Boys' Production Wins in Washington U. Contest.

A committee of instructors in the English department at Washington University yesterday chose "The Love Star," by C. Eugene Smith, '14, and Ralph Mooney, '15, as the dramatic production which the Quadrangle Club will give next February at the Odeon. Ten plays were submitted by students in the competition.

"The Love Star" is a musical comedy, its scenes being laid in the Granada of Irving's "Alhambra." The Moorish setting gives scope for many ballet episodes. Try-outs for parts in the play will begin this week.

ESCAPES FROM ASYLUM, APPEALS TO A LAWYER

Horace Harrison Wants to Restrain Father From Interfering With Him.

Horace Harrison, son of John P. Harrison of 3665 South King's highway, escaped from St. Vincent's Asylum by climbing through a transom yesterday and went to the law offices of Thomas E. Gillespie in the Cahokia building in East St. Louis.

He asked the attorney to file a petition for an injunction to restrain the elder Harrison from interfering with his business. For a few minutes the visitor spoke in a rational manner and the attorney was deeply interested in his case when he said his father had spoiled several big financial transactions for him. But it soon became apparent to Gillespie that Harrison was talking irrationally and he called the police.

When John P. Harrison was informed that his son was under restraint in East St. Louis he explained to the police there that the young man had been under treatment for a nervous and mental breakdown and said he would send for him.

Harrison, who is 38 ytar old, impressed the police of East St. Louis as being rational on all subjects except those pertaining to commerce.

INTERNATIONAL LIFE TO ABSORB NEW COMPANY

Negotiations Pending for Taking Over Business of Jefferson Life Insurance Co.

Directors and stockholders of the International Life Insurance Co. of St. Louis have approved a contract to take over the assets and reinsure the outstanding business of the Jefferson Life of Oklahoma City. Directors of the Jefferson Life have approved the contract and have called a meeting of the stockholders for Wednesday to pass on it. The deal then will require only the sanction of the Insurance Departments of the States of Missouri and Oklahoma to make it an accomplished fact.

The International Life has produced capital of $512,000 a surplus of about $400,000, insurance in force aggregating approximately $38,000,000, admitted assets of $3,500,000 and an annual income of about $1,500,000 when the consolidation is effected. The International Life has produced the larger part of its $38,000,000 insurance by its own organization, but it has acquired a considerable portion of it by purchase and absorption of the business of other companies. About 60 days ago it took over $312,000 of assets and reinsured the $2,000,000 of business of the California National Life Insurance Co. of San Diego. The International's stock has a par value of $25 a share, and the stockholders received a 3 per cent dividend last June and the same the previous December.

HANGING DAY AT THE P. O.

'Our President" Is Subject of Selph's Favorite Crayons.

Postmaster Selph yesterday installed in his office in the new postoffice building, and in his downtown office in the Federal building, large crayon portraits of President Wilson. He has been appointed custodian of the postoffice building, at Eighteenth street and Clark avenue, in addition to his duties as postmaster. This carries no additional salary.

A number of downtown business men have commended the new Postmaster's action in reopening the Postmaster's former office in its old location in the Federal building. He will be there daily between 8 and 4:30 p. m., this hour being considered especially convenient for bankers and business men who wish to confer with the Postmaster. At other hours a capable subordinate will be in charge.

TRAVELS 120 MILES WITH WIFE HE SHOT; ARRESTED

Kentuckian Mortally Wounds Woman and Is Captured at Bedside in Lexington.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 4.—Turning from the bedside of his wife, whom he had shot through the abdomen, Newton Gullett, a mountaineer of Breathit County, was arrested tonight at a hospital here. Gullett shot his wife this morning while intoxicated.

He carried her 20 miles to Jackson, boarded a train for Lexington and came 100 miles here, sitting in a baggage car by her cot. The woman was taken from the car crying in agony, but calling the name of her husband. Surgeons said tonight she could not recover.

MOTORCYCLE HITS WAGON RIDER SERIOUSLY HURT

Boy Suffers Concussion of Brain When Thrown From Tandem Machine in Collision.

Ben Jobsky, 13 years old, of 1077 South Taylor avenue, riding on the rear seat of a tandem motor cycle, was so severely injured when the machine collided with a delivery wagon yesterday afternoon that he had to be sent to the city hospital.

Jobsky was riding behind Frank Gichols of 2037 Easton avenue when the motor cycle ran into the back of a delivery wagon driven by Frank Thorahill of 2417 Dickson street, at Easton and Compton avenues. Jobsky was thrown from his seat and he suffered concussion of the brain.

News and Features of the POULTRY WORLD

EDITED BY T. W. ORCUTT

Former Secretary St. Louis Poultry Association.

PREPARING BIRDS FOR EXHIBITION IMPORTANT WORK

Lack of Proper Conditioning Often Means Loss of Deserved Award.

The opening of the poultry season this month makes it necessary for the poultrymen to select and condition the birds he contemplates exhibiting and very rarely can birds be picked from the yard and taken direct to the show room in winning condition. The selection of exhibition specimens that will win in competition requires more skill than any other detail connected with the poultry business.

A great many breeders employ experts to go over their flocks and pick out the best specimens, and very often a week is consumed in selecting 25 exhibition birds from a flock of several hundred. Scientific breeding, as practiced by breeders of all varieties, has made competition so keen that one who is not familiar with the quality and type demanded by the judges will find it necessary to refer to the American Standard of Perfection and study the illustrations, comparing text and illustrations point by point.

Selecting Exhibition Birds.

In selecting birds to be exhibited, keep in mind the disqualifications. Detection of disqualifications requires a minute examination. Many birds are disqualified because of side sprigs on the comb, feathers and down between the toes and on the legs of the cleaned, shanked varieties. A side sprig is a very serious defect, which appears near the base of the spikes and the blade on the comb.

The nearer to maturity the fowls are, the better. Other points being equal, the birds coming nearest to the standard weight always are given preference in making awards. The birds selected should have the maximum strength and vigor, and confinement will tend to reduce this.

All birds should be in prime flesh and condition, which will result from proper housing and feeding. They should be strictly healthy. Special attention should be paid to the legs, as a bird affected with scaly legs has no chance.

Method of Preparation.

Birds selected for exhibition should be placed in training coops similar to the coops they will be exhibited in. Continual handling for a week will accustom them to crowds. Very often a good specimen will not show to good advantage because of fright when taken by the judge for examination. A well-trained bird often means the winning of a prize against birds of really better points.

It is not necessary to wash dark-colored birds. Their plumage may be improved by going over them with a flannel cloth; their legs, however, should be washed and dirt under the scales removed with a toothpick. The combs and wattles should be washed with soap and warm water and then rubbed with sweet oil and alcohol, equal parts. This will brighten their heads and give them a vigorous appearance. This mixture also will improve the appearance of the legs It should be applied with a soft cloth.

White birds should be thoroughly clean. The washing, if properly done, will add greatly to the appearance of the bird and to the brilliancy of the plumage. The washing should be done in a warm room, three or four days before the birds are sent to the show. Three tubs should be used.

The first tub should be half filled with warm water, about 100 degrees; the second tub half filled with luke-warm water and the last tub, for rinsing, should be filled with water from which the chill has been removed. A small amount of bluing in the last tub helps bring out the color, but too much will stain the feathers.

The fowl is put into the first tub and held under the water until the plumage is soaked. The head is submerged for a moment or two. The fowl then is placed on a clean table and thoroughly covered with a white soap lather. This should be worked into the plumage with the hand and care should be taken that no feathers are broken or rubbed the wrong way. Remove the lather with a sponge, wiping the feathers in the natural direction. Place the bird in the second tub and wash. If any soap is left in the plumage the feathers will not web out properly. By running the fingers gently through the plumage, every particle of lather can be removed. The third tub is for the final rinsing. Dry the feathers as much as possible by running the hand from the head toward the tail, scraping the water out of the plumage, then rub with a towel, being careful to rub in the direction that the feathers grow.

The bird should then be placed near a stove, or where an electric fan can blow warm air through the plumage until thoroughly dry.

If a bird appears drowsy after being washed it is a good plan to give it a half teaspoonful of whisky to prevent catching cold. Never allow a bird that has just been washed to stand in a draft.

Shipping.

After the bird is properly conditioned the leg band numbers should be placed on the left leg of each bird. Be sure these numbers correspond with the entry sheet or confusion will result in the showroom. The shipping coop should be large enough to avoid breaking feathers or otherwise injuring the birds. Male birds should be cooped separately and single coops are better for females. A coop with a series of compartments with one bird in each is ideal. The shipping coops should be tightly constructed to facilitate handling and lessen express charges. Three or four inches of clean straw or chaff should be placed in the bottom of each coop or compartment. This will keep the legs and plumage of the birds clean while in transit.

A little grain may be scattered in the coop, but it is not advisable to add drinking water, as it is liable to upset and soil the plumage. Apples or vegetables, such as beets or raw potatoes, slightly crushed, answers for water and will suffice for an ordinary shipment.

The shipping tags furnished by the secretary should be attached in a conspicuous place on the coops. Failure to properly prepare meritorious birds often means loss of a deserved award.

POULTRY PROBLEMS SOLVED

Leg Weakness.

I have some chickens that seem to be weak in their legs. We feed mostly crushed wheat and corn. What is the trouble?—F. F., Mayfield, Ky.

Your chickens have leg weakness, which is caused by rapid growth and heavy feeding. The weight increases faster than the strength. Separate the weak birds from the others and place them in a pen by themselves and feed wheat and bran, no corn or cornmeal. Give them all the green feed they will eat and substitute skimmed milk for water if possible. Rub the legs with tincture of arnica every other day. This treatment, continued for 10 days, should cure the birds.

Caponizing.

Caponizing instruments are sold by all poultry supply houses. See their advertisements on this page.

Canker.

My young turkeys seem to be well and never refuse to eat but their heads and noses seem to be stopped up and when their mouth is opened a very offensive pus is discharged. How shall I treat them?—Mrs. L., Madford, Ok.

Your turkeys have the roup and canker. Standard roup remedies for chickens will relieve them. A very effective remedy is three drops of carbolic acid mixed in a small tin cup of water. Apply this to the affected parts morning and night with a small sponge. Use it freely on the head and inside the mouth, allowing any of the mixture that will to run down the throat. This treatment should cure the bird in 24 hours.

Breeding.

I have been reading a great deal about keeping the male from the females during the summer months. When is the proper time to put the male bird with the females for breding?—B. R. G., Bourbon, Mo.

Breeding pens are assembled in the latter part of November or the first of December. The male birds should be placed with the females at that time.

Foundation Stock.

I want to get a good breed of chickens. Would you suggest buying eggs or grown chickens, and is the poultry show a good place to get them?—P. M., St. Louis, Mo.

All varieties of poultry will be exhibited at the poultry shows. The purchase of a breeding pen of fowls from any good breeder is the most satisfactory way to get a good foundation stock.

Cockerel and Pullet.

What is the difference between a hen and a pullet and a cock and a cockerel?—F. A. K., Hickman, Ky.

A pullet is a female under 1 year old and a cockerel is a male under 1 year old.

MEAT SCRAPS FOR WINTER EGGS AND STRONG FERTILITY

Valuable for Feed, Containing the Necessary Animal Protein for Large Egg Production.

Before the scientific study of poultry feeding was taken up, the only selection made by poultry raisers was the kinds of feed for which fowl showed a desire and which was convenient to get. On the farm, corn was the staple feed, because it was plentiful and the fowl liked it. For younger chicks, the corn was cracked and fed in a mash together with milk, curds, potato peelings, etc. Laying hens and poultry in preparation for market were fed alike, with the result that the hens got too fat to lay or not fat enough for market.

Some years ago stock and poultry feeders began to study the matter of feeds and began feeding. The Agricultural Experiment Station conducted experiments and showed that stock and poultry should be fed according to the results desired. The dairymen learned to feed their cows to produce milk; the stockman to feed cattle for quick growth of meat, and poultry raisers for either eggs or flesh. Chemical research and practical experiments soon demonstrated that the essential part of all feedstuffs is protein. From this substance the organic parts of the bones, muscles, skin and internal organs of the animal are formed. This study of feedstuffs showed that in order to produce eggs, hens must be fed high protein feeds.

Results of Experiments.

A number of years ago the New York Experiment Station went even further, and by a series of experiments proved conclusively that to get the best results, the fowl must not only have a protein feed, but that the protein must be derived from animal matter. They conducted experiments with several lots of laying hens, feeding two rations of equal protein content. One ration was made up entirely of vetetable matter, while the other contained a large part of animal matter. In these experiments the hens fed the animal-matter ration laid from 30 to 40 per cent more eggs than those fed on grain feeds alone. The same sort of an experiment was carried on with young chicks. In this case it shows that the chicks fed on the animal-matter ration gained 56 per cent more than the other.

The fertility of eggs was another matter of experiment. In this case it was found that a much larger per cent of the eggs from the hens fed the animal-matter ration was fertile. It was also found that the eggs from the hens fed the animal ration produced much more vigorous and better chicks than those fed on the grain feeds alone.

With this knowledge of the value of animal matter as a feedstuff for poultry came the demand for a commercial feed, which resulted in the development of the manufacture of what is known as meat scraps. This industry has been carried on for a great many years and was started originally in the New England States. The trimmings from the butcher shops were picked up and the fat extracted, after which the material was ground up for feeding. The results of feeding this material were so marked and so profitable that the demand increased by leaps and bounds, until today it has become a great industry. In cities like Chicago and New York there are hundreds of men employed collecting the meat trimmings from the butcher shops.

The Massachusetts State Experiment Station, in their bulletin No. 98, has this to say in regard to meat scraps:

"There was no product on the market which varied more in feeding value, some samples having nearly twice the value of others. In purchasing, preference should be given to fine ground brands of high protein content, small in medium amounts of bone and relatively low percentage of fat, under 20 per cent, rather than over. The material should be free from taint."

During the summer, poultry on a farm has a wide range, and is able to pick up lots of bugs and worms, thus supplying the animal protein necessary for egg production. As a result, during the summer months, eggs are plentiful and cheap. During the winter months, however, the poultry does not have access to this supply of protein, and the egg production is very light. This is just the time when the poultryman should feed to get eggs, as high prices make them very valuable. The hen that lays only during the summer is not a profitable hen. The farmer must carry his hens during the winter months, and by careful feeding and housing, they will lay well at the time when eggs are high priced. By the use of meat scraps the farmer and poultryman can turn his winter loss into a source of profit.

POULTRY SUGGESTIONS

Poor the chick that knows not its breed.

The fattest fowl is not always what it seems.

The most food is seldom found in the largest shell.

Corn, a quick fattener, is too heating for sound flesh development.

In buying, prefer the clean egg—bearing in mind a soiled shell will surely inoculate the pure meat.

The coop with the odor will knock 25 per cent off the market value of its table prisoners.

There is nothing in taste-preference for virgin eggs—they just keep fresh longer than the fertile.

Even as we look after the healthy purse, care should be taken of the green, in the growing of the young chick.

Apologies made for eggs that are soiled point a profit in marketing the product which is externally clean.

See that your layers are abundantly supplied with nests. Keep the nests clean and renew nesting material often Clean nest, clean eggs. Clean, fresh eggs, clean profits.

Don't let your birds sleep on the floor beneath the roosts. Teach them to use the roosts. Crowding in corners on the floor may start colds and other troubles.

Cooked yellow pumpkin is credited with helping to make a bigger egg and a golden yellow yolk. Why not try it? Feed in daily mash or plain what they will clean up quickly.

For long and healthy keeping, eggs need air, and should, in summer, be kept in a well-ventilated dry well, cellar, or refrigerator; in winter, nonfreezing air is helpful.

In buying for the table, avoid that fowl which is oily fat. Always select the plump, round, firm bird, and you will get something that will cause the tooth of appreciation to long for another morsel.

If necessary to confine the chicks don't throw away any vegetable waste if clean and wholesome. Green onion tops are relished by the little fellows and are said to be a preventive of gapes if fed regularly.

In shipping broilers and friers, it would be well to coop chicks together of uniform size and color, so far as possible. The grower would find greater profit in this observance—not forgetting to have the shipping coops clean.

Egg production is encouraged by having well assorted scratch feed thrown into clean pens, strewn with fresh straw. This care brings about that scratch action so necessary to healthy development—thus applying the Bible injunction: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," to all successful life.

RAGGED SCHOOL CHIEF'S GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

"Dickens' London Gone" Says Man Who Won Knighthood as Children's Friend.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The celebration of the jubilee of the coming to London of Sir John Kirk, for many years the secretary of the Ragged School Union and organizer of the Fresh Air Fund, at his request, took the form of a simple at-home gathering at the Aldersgate Street Y. M. C. A.

Fifty years ago the reformer came to London as a penniless and well-nigh friendless youth, who was glad to find lodging in the then notorious Whitechapel district. His first employment was as a clerk in Paternoster Row. He then was John Kirk. He is today Sir John Kirk, known and honored throughout the country as the "children's friend."

"There is less degradation and outward raggedness in London than in former years," the reformer told his friends in an address at the gathering. "The slums have been whitewashed and scrubbed. The better lighting of London has done much to check vice. A constant water supply and the plentiful use of the whitewash brush has had a wonderful cleansing effect on the dark spots of the city We have swept up the waifs and strays until now it is impossible to pick up boys and girls under railway arches and in the dismal corners of the municipality. The Dickens' London is gone and we have a new and better generation."

The Ragged School Union has grown to be a recognized institution acting in co-operation with municipal authorities for the prevention and elimination of vice in youth, under the guidance of Sir John Kirk.

PLANS FOR SEVERAL MORE MAMMOTH BUILDINGS ON WAY

Three or Four Structures in Wholesale District Being Considered, One for Expansion of Dry Goods House—October Expected to Be One of Notable Months in St. Louis Realty Calendar.

PEPER PARTITION SALE ON OCT. 30

Henry McNichols Advocates Sale of Old City Hall Block as Method for Raising Funds to Finish Bridge—Gustav Thal Buys Northwest Corner of Euclid and Parkview.

By Berry Moore.

October likely will be chronicled as one of the most notable months of the year in St. Louis realty circles.

The program includes a partition sale of the extensive holdings of the Peper estates. Charles Cummings Collins of the law firm of Collins, Barker & Britton has been appointed special commissioner in this connection. The sale, which has been ordered as an expedient to divide or convert the estates of Margaret Peper Bell and others and of Adolphus M. Peper and others, will be held Thursday, Oct. 30, at the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, under Collins' direction.

The Mercantile Trust Co. represents the Bell and other interests, and the St. Louis Union Trust Co. represents Adolphus S. Peper and others. Capitalists, should be well represented at the sale, which will include an array of high-class business holdings.

The southeast corner of Twelfth and Market streets, the northeast corner of Twelfth and Walnut streets, and the southwest corner of Eleventh and Market streets, or the entire block bounded by Eleventh, Twelfth, Walnut and Market streets, will be included in the offerings. The old Peper tobacco warehouse occupies the west half of this block.

Keen rivalry, it is believed, will mark the bidding for the block, which is desirable for a hotel or a large commercial building.

Would Sell City Hall Block.

Realty in the aforementioned locality is beginning to claim capitalistic attention. Offers which are regarded as the forerunners of important developments south of Chestnut street, have been infrequent this fall.

Incidentally, as a measure to raise funds to complete the free bridge, Henry McNichols, who has large holdings on Market street, is advocating the sale of the old city hall block, facing Eleventh street, and extending from Market to Chestnut streets, and the site of the Four Courts at Twelfth street and Clark avenue. The required sum could be raised, it is believed, by the sale of this property.

There have been many offers for the old city hall block, which is exciting the attention of both speculators and investors. The rebuilding of these blocks, it is predicted, would give a new aspect to this locality.

Among other holdings of the Peper estate in the business district are the southwest and the southeast corners of Sixth and Wash streets, and the southwest corner of Twelfth street and Park avenue, all of which offer substantial forms of investment.

The Welfare Realty Co., which recently purchased the northeast corner of Locust and Fifteenth streets, it is understood, has made another substantial investment on this thoroughfare. The new purchase, it is said, is farther west, but the location and details will not be disclosed at this time.

Wholesale Buildings Planned.

The original purchase of the Welfare company, composed of George T. Burdeau and George W. Davis, and effected through Cornet & Zeibig, it is believed, will form a link in a chain of speculative operations to be conducted by this company on this thoroughfare.

Comparatively few transactions in central business holdings were reported in September, but interest shows an undertone of strength.

Plans for three or four mammoth buildings for the wholesale district are in process of incubation, according to the vice-president of a leading dry goods house, but these hardly will be hatched this year, owing to their importance. The largest provides, it is said, for the increasing business of the concern, with which the Post-Dispatch's informant is identified. This is also true as regards projects for Olive, Pine and Chestnut streets, east of Eighteenth street.

A leading West End purchase of the week was that of the northwest corner of Euclid avenue and Parkview place, by Gustav Thal, president of the National Molasses Co., for $27,000, through the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. This is a two-story building occupying 92 feet 11 inches on Euclid avenue by a depth of 60 feet 8 inches on Parkview place. The rental is $2600 a year.

Thal also has purchased a two-story building at 5653-55 Delmar boulevard, for $27,500, through the Weisels-Gerhart company.

The growth of Hillcrest, according to surface indications, will rival that of Parkview, or of Washington Heights, both as to rapidity and character of improvements. Scores of houses, ranging in price from $3000 to $25,000, will started in the subdivision before snow falls, if plans do not go amiss, according to reports in realty circles.

The most pretentious houses will be erected on Arundel and Aberdeen avenues, between Skinker road and De Mun avenue, the choicest part of the addition.

Gerald B. O'Reilly, a former president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, purchased at the auction a lot on Aberdeen between Skinker and De Mun. This will become the site of a residence for his occupancy, it is understood. O'Reilly also purchased a lot on Arundel, east of DeMun, for a client who also has building plans.

Just before the auction, discounting the competition for lots in this block, Nolte & Williams purchased 1000 front feet, or twenty 50-foot lots, on the south side of Arundel, between Skinker and De Mun. The consideration was $54.50 a foot. Plans are being drawn, according to Nolte, for 20 high-grade houses, construction of which will begin forthwith. This concern is noted for the high character of its buildings. The Butts Realty Co. also bought lots at the auction for clients who are getting ready to build.

John J. Dowling, secretary of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, bought numerous lots at this sale for clients, who he declares will build. According to the street, J. L. Nelson, a client of Dowling, is asking $100 a foot for the northwest corner of Skinker road and Aberdeen avenue, for which he paid $65 at the auction.

Hillcrest Buyers Reap Profit.

The street car tracks on De Mun avenue, which connect with the Clayton line, which makes the property accessible for a 5-cent fare, forms a line of demarcation, which virtually makes the section east of De Mun, or next to Skinker road or Forest Park, the more exclusive.

Goldwasser & Dubinsky, speculators at the Hillcrest auction, are re-selling their purchases at snug profits. They have no building plans. Sam Hamberg was another buyer who is reaping profits.

Charles H. Bailey, a former chieftain of St. Louis realty circles, is profuse in his predictions for Hillcrest. "I won't venture to predict how much more it will be worth, but I know it will never be worth any less," he declared. "The location is superb for a high-class residential park, overlooking as it does St. Louis' great breathing spot, Forest Park.

Bailey was the original seller of the Catlin tract, the purchasers being a syndicate, of which Moses Greenwood was the prime mover, and which leased the ground to the World's Fair company. Incidentally, Hillcrest also was a part of the area occupied by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, this giving an idea of its high character.

Work has been started on several new houses on Kingsbury boulevard in University City. Vice-President Langenburg of the Front Rank Furnace Co. is building a $25,000 house on the north side of the boulevard, between Pennsylvania and Williams street. Twelve houses, ranging in cost from $10,000 to $25,000, have been erected on Kingsbury during the last two years. Dr. J. Pfaff is erecting a $25,000 house on the north side of Washington avenue, between Trinity and Pennsylvania.

These thoroughfares, especially Kingsbury, is run through to Parkview, and which will acquire new importance with the completion of the Ames subdivision, are the most exclusive in University City. Delmar boulevard is now being made between Clayton and University City, both of which, it is believed, will reflect the benefits of the improvements.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

Asbestos Roofs Put on Mitchell Place Homes

Asbestos roofs have been introduced in the construction of 15 bungalows in Mitchell place, just south of Forest Park. Their advantage lies in the fact that they are nonconductors of heat.

These are five and six room bungalows, finished throughout in hardwood. Ornamental brick fireplaces in living rooms are a feature. The conveniences include steam heat and tile bath. Although of California construction, these bungalows are adapted to the Missouri climate. The builders are F. J. Cornwell & Son.

GIRL, 13, GOES TO JAPAN TO VISIT HER AUNT

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 4.—Ruth Higginbottom, aged 13, departed Wednesday evening to visit her aunt, Miss Edith Parker. By constant traveling she will reach her aunt's residence Oct. 24, for the aunt is a missionary in Japan.

Ruth is a sophomore in the Columbia High School and it was decided that she needed a year's vacation and the trip to Japan was proposed. It was not possible for any of the family to go with her, but some friends were going to Japan from Omaha and they offered to take Ruth if she would join them in that city. Ruth made the trip to Omaha alone.

"I don't intend to get seasick or lonesome or anything like that," said Ruth. "I shall not enter school in Japan, even though my aunt is a teacher in the Christian Church School over there. What will I do with my time? O, I'll write letters and play with the Japanese girls. There will be a lot of games to learn so different from ours and so many things to see that I shall not get lonesome."

HELD FOR DROPPING EGGS

PARIS, Oct. 4.—The recent order of the Prefect of Police that paper and other rubbish should not be thrown in streets was strictly enforced by a policeman on the Grand Boulevard.

A farmer bringing eggs into Paris was getting off an omnibus with his heavy basket, when knocked down by a motor car.

"Are these yours?" asked the policeman of the prostrate farmer, pointing to a score of broken eggs in the roadway. "If you don't pick them up at once I shall arrest you for littering the roadway." The farmer was arrested.

KAISER FAILS TO WIN SON-IN-LAW, SIDES WITH HIM

German Emperor Seeks to Win Federal Council to Hanover-Brunswick Position.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—"I can put off my coat as easily as I put it on," Emperor William's son-in-law, Prince Ernest Augustus of Cumberland, is reported to have said when pressed to make a public renunciation of his claims to the old kingdom of Hanover before being established on the ducal throne of Brunswick.

By this the Prince meant that if he was badgered by the agents of the Prussian pan-Germans any more he would resign from the Prussian army and carry his wife, Princess Victoria Louise, off to Gmunden, Upper Austria, where he would be left in peace.

Princess Victoria, his bride, is said to have told her father, the Emperor, that they had had about enough worrying over Brunswick and Hanover, declaring that she and her Prince could live quite as happily in Upper Austria as in the huge Brusnwick palace.

As both the Prince and Princess have plenty of money in their own right and, as, moreover, contrary to report, they are very much in love with each other, they can afford to be indifferent to the honors and the revenues from the Duchy of Brunswick.

Kaiser Sides With Daughter.

It is said that the Emperor has taken the daughter's side and has told Imperial Chancellor von Bethmean-Hallweg that he thought enough has been said about Hanover and that the Federal Council should be urged to discard Bismarck's old policy of preventing the Cumberlands from succeeding to the Hanoverian throne.

The fact that Prince Ernest was expected, by his strenuous father-in-law, to continue his military duties even during his honeymoon, combined with the illness of his bride, led the German press to insinuate that the separation of the young couple was due to an estrangement.

Nothing could be further from the truth and now that the Princess has recovered, it is expected that their triumphal entry into Brunswick will take place early this winter.

The people of Rathenow, where the young pair are enjoying a little peace, declare that the Prince and Princess are the happiest married couple around.

The Princess, who visted her mother in Potsdam while her husband went to his father at Gmunden to discuss matters concerning the succession, is said to fret a good deal during Prince Ernest's frequent absences on military duty and this is one reason why she insists that they be allowed to settle in a permanent home in one place or another.

Prince Stands Firm.

It now looks as if Prince Ernest, who has shown a good deal of firmness in his stand in the matter of renouncing the Hanoverian throne, will have his way.

When Prince August William, the Emperor's lawyer son, was sent to confer with Prince Ernest before the betrothal the latter exclaimed:

"For me and my family, honor comes first, then love."

The old Duke of Cumberland is said to have declared that the throne of Brunswick is not essential to him or to his son and that neither of them will renounce Hanover under any circumstances.

The Cumberlands have, therefore, got the whip hand. If the young Prince maintains his position and the Federal Council remains obdurate, Princess Victoria Louise will not be the wife of a reigning sovereign and her match may be regarded as a mesalliance, for she will be merely the wife of a pretender; and in the position of Princess Victoria of Hohenzollern, the wife of former King Manuel of Portugal. It is thought improbable that the Emperor will submit to such a condition of things and, therefore, will give way and so finally settle a feud of 50 years' standing.

HEAVIEST BATTLESHIP TO BE LAUNCHED BY BRITAIN

New Warship "Queen Elizabeth" Will Burn Oil Instead of Coal.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Remarkable developments in the construction of Dreadnoughts will be embodied in the new battleship Queen Elizabeth, which is to be launched from Portsmouth Dockyard in October.

The Queen Elizabeth will mean a step forward in the building of these leviathans almost as important as that from the King Edward class to the original Dreadnought, and in speed, armament and design she will be superior to any battleship afloat.

There are other features that will make the new vessel an epoch-making ship. The freeing of the enormous space hitherto allocated to coal bunkers will enable the vessel to have an extension of the double bottom system as high as the protected deck.

This will mean that the whole of the vessel below the water line will be built with two skins, on the principle of a ship within a ship and with the series of transverse and longitudinal bulkheads this will make the vessel as unsinkable as the science of modern naval construction can.

Between these two skins the great warship will carry her supplies of oil fuel—supplies which will give the vessel a radius of action far exceeding anything possible with coal fuel.

The double bottoms are being specially sealed, and in the event of the vessel striking a rock and having a portion of her bottom torn away, the parts damaged would be isolated, so that the whole of her liquid furnace supplies would not be lost.

The Queen Elizabeth will be the heaviest ship ever launched from the Royal Naval Yard, and will be in a more advanced state of completion than any previous Dreadnought.

Hero Medal for a Dog.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—A policeman's Airedale terrier has been decorated with the bronze medal of the National Canine Defence League. When the family was at supper a fire occurred in a bedroom where the policeman's boy was asleep. The dog whined and howled and scratched the door leading to the stairs and drew the attention of the policeman to the fire. The boy was rescued.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

NEW TARIFF AND CURRENCY REFORM ARE RESTRAINING SPECULATIVE INFLUENCES Week's Price Range Is Slightly Lower on Rather Uncertain Trading.

BANK RATE IS ADVANCED

England's Leading Institution Adopts Early Measures to Protect Gold Holdings.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The Evening Post, in its weekly financial review today, says:

"The entire financial position of the moment seems to the detached and unprejudiced point of view, to be curiously negative in character.

"When anyone asks, in Wall street or elsewhere, for a summary of the good points of the situation he will have recited to him a list, not of things which have happened, but of things which have not.

"On ordinary occasions argument for the strength of a market will be based on the existence of a 'boom' in trade, on large surplus bank reserves, on command over foreign credits and foreign gold, or on 'bumper' harvests.

"None of these is alleged as in evidence today, except for a probably unprecedented American harvest yield, which is offset by a decided shortage in corn and by what seems to be a disappointing cotton crop.

"The reasons commonly assigned for looking on the gloomy side of the situation are that the great Powers have not been dragged into the Balkan war, that autumn money rates, here and in Europe, have not been alarmingly high; that Congress has not been passing laws at the extra session against property; that American industry has not been penetrated by the tariff reduction bill; that the West has not been plunged into poverty by the damage to the corn crop, and that, to sum up everything, there neither has occurred, nor is in the least likely to occur, a 'panic.'

The Market Is Healthy.

"All this is unquestionably gratifying to anybody who believed, last April or May, that each of these calamities would be upon us in October. It accounts for the recovery, on the Stock Exchange, of most of the ground lost between January and July. But it does not help much toward defining the real state of affairs. There is a somewhat limited satisfaction in being informed, after a physical examination, that one has neither sciatica nor paresis nor chills and fever.

"Perhaps the most reasonable conclusion, from the varied incidents of the past nine months, would be that the economic world must have been in a much more sound and robust condition, when the series of severe financial shocks were applied to it early in the year, than anyone then imagined, but that it can hardly be as strong now as it was before it passed through those trying ordeals.

"On the other hand, the pretty heavy strain which was being imposed upon it then, through the routine operations of credit and of the speculative market, have been greatly relaxed. The real test of the condition would, therefore, probably come when the financial exertions, which were prudently abandoned or postponed at that time, should be renewed.

"Sometimes it will be found, on such occasions, that the period of relaxation has made possible the accumulation of a new store of financial health and vigor, but it is at least unfortunate that the present occasion should have been marked by such waste of capital in the Southeastern war and such proposed waste of it in the armament projects of the great Continental nations.

The Banking Reforms.

"Discussion of the banking and currency proposals, at next week's National Bankers' Convention, will doubtless be interesting and instructive to the Legislative program. The framework of the administration plan is before the public even in its details, and it is fortunate that this is so, even if that framework in many respects admittedly imperfect.

"The general discussion of a reform of the system has been publicly and officially under way for half a dozen years, without any legislative action whatever, until the recent vote of the House of Representatives.

"This fact made it difficult, if not impossible, for the discussion of the specific provisions requisite to such a form, to receive the proper sort of discussion, favorable or adverse.

"It is quite true that the Aldrich proposals were complete in all their details. But the Aldrich plan was never regarded as destined for congressional consideration and adoption as it stood. It was accepted consciously or unconsciously, as a tentative draft of certain indispensable pre-requisites, as a basis for further discussion.

"This is a fact which nothing proved more conclusively than the action of previous bankers' conventions on the plan, which was endorsed unqualifiedly, in all or its details and without general discussion, in the convention of 1911, and which was dropped with similar absence of detailed discussion or analysis in the convention of 1912.

An Early Currency Bill.

"Everyone who reflected intelligently on the matter was aware that when Congress should take up the matter seriously, it would be on the basis of a different bill than the Aldrich plan, but at the same time a bill which should reproduce many, and probably most of the provisions of that plan. This is what has actually happened.

"The concrete measure has been adopted by the House; it is not only in shape where each separate section or provision may be criticised on its merits, but it is admittedly on the way to reasonable early enactment in some form, so that discussion can no longer (as in 1911 and 1912) rest merely on general principles.

"What the congressional committees are ready to recognize intelligent provisions, has been abundantly proved by the thorough amendment and reconstruction of the bill in the House committee. The time is now ripe for conveying the fire of expert criticism on the provisions as amended, and the more searching that criticism is—so long as it is fair and reasonable—the better, not only for the banking community, but for the Government.

"The measure as it stands is unworkable in any particular, judged from the standpoint of practical banking experience. By all means let such conclusion, and the reasons for it, be emphatically set forth in next week's Boston convention.

"Of all results which the party in power has greatest reason to deprecate and avoid, the worst would be the enactment of a bill, which in subsequent operation would turn out to be crippled in advance by its own technical defects.

"But it equally remains true that the question, how much of practical and beneficent results will follow the discussion at the Bankers' Conventions depends in large measure on the spirit in which the discussion is conducted.

"The stock market closed lower on the week. The final session showed a backward drift."

ENGLAND'S BANK RATE RAISED TO 5 PER CENT

Advance Is Based on Continued World-Wide Demand for Money.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—To understand Thursday's advance in its official discount rate by the Bank of England, several facts in the existing situation must be considered. The underlying responsible causes for the prolonged dearness of money are the unprecedented world-wide demands for capital, the rise in the cost of living and the general political and social unrest.

Beyond these general causes, however, the rise in cotton hastened the movement of the Egyptian crop, thus accelerating the drain of gold from our bank. But chief among many motives for the rise in the rate was the mysterious buying of gold for France, where a curious and not clearly explained famine demand for gold seems to exist.

Moreover, at the moment when the Continent is heavily engaged in the prospective financing of Turkey and the Balkan States, comes a sudden uprising of requests for capital from every other quarter, due to Lombard street having stimulated financial and industrial activity in many parts of the world, especially Canada.

It is impossible now arbitrarily to refuse accommodation, but common sense and prudence require that the situation must be recognized by higher rates for money before it can become normal.

There must, in short, be a curbing of borrowing activities, and this can be only gradually achieved through dear money.

Gold Holdings Small.

Our own gold holdings are under last year, when they ought to be higher. It is true, Germany has accumulated much gold, but that is partly for the chest. French conditions are chaotic and highly unsatisfactory.

Your money market is ostensibly comfortable, and it is thought that no stringency will come, though it is feared that the first wreath of real financial activity would show that even you require replenished gold supplies.

All this suggests caution. Markets are intrinsically sound, in the sense that no unwieldy speculation exists; but the complete absence of the investing public and the constant capital creations spell congestion, with probable difficulty in realizing on stocks freely if any trouble were to come.

Moreover, some financial spots are suspected, and unless the political position changes, the Balkan outlook suggests constant "pin-pricking" irritations, at a time when everything helpful is needed for recuperation.

Our open market money rates may weaken temporarily, because of the release of $6,000,000 in Government dividends on Monday, but will probably tighten later. The future depends on whether the bank gets the new arrivals of bar gold.

At present the chances of a 6 per cent bank rate later on are evenly divided. The improvement in Germany is recognized, but even in Berlin cautious opinion is expressed by the retention by the Reichsbank of its 6 per cent rate. Meantime the troubles in India are getting tiresome. They are not yet serious, because the native banks and other institutions are of unquestioned standing.

Your new tariff is generally hailed as a considerable triumph, which ultimately should have a good effect on American trade; but some temporary disturbance is expected.

Thursday's cotton estimate just fulfills estimates from the best quarters, which now look for a decline in the price, on a better yield than has been predicted, and a probable decline in consumption.

LIBERAL RECEIPTS LOWER PRICES ON ALL BEEF CATTLE

Medium Grades and Heifers Suffer Most From Hammering by the Packers.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	35,000	32,728	41,997
Hogs	52,000	45,537	37,133
Sheep	15,000	13,253	18,327
Horses and mules	4,000	1,094	3,913

Receipts the past week were generous, although no more than could be expected for this season of the year, and they showed a slight increase over the runs of the preceding period. Beef steers were in liberal proportions all week, and prime quality was inclined to be predominant in the run. Trade opened very slow and draggy, and the market was weak under the stress of liberal receipts. Medium grade beeves again got a hammering from the packers, and prices were 10@15c lower.

Strictly prime steers sold steady all week, but some of the good to choice kinds were a shade lower. Yearlings were favorites throughout the trade, and a load of these brought $9.40, bulk of the prime lots sold at $8.90@9.40, good to choice at $8.25@8.85 and medium to good at $7.40@8.15.

The supply of heifers was liberal at all stages of the week, and for that reason prices suffered a big slump. The market closed rather mean the preceding week and a slump of 10@15c opened this period. Tuesday the runs continued liberal, and the market was slow and draggy. Prices on heifers the past week were anywhere from 35c to 50c lower than the preceding period.

Cows Less Sharply.

Medium to good grades of cows also lost considerable value the past week as compared with the previous period. There was a liberal supply on hand at all times, and packers were bearish each day. Losses of 25@40c moved the big end of the good cows.

Canners and cutters were about 10@15c lower for the week.

Bulls were on a weak to 10c lower basis.

Prices on vealers were inclined to fluctuate a trifle, but at the close of the period were about steady. Prime vealers sold as high as $11.

The trade in stockers and feeders was demoralized by a very liberal supply and a slow demand. There was very little call from the country and order buyers were slow to operate because of this fact. Prices on stockers and feeders dropped about 25@40c. A few loads of feeders sold in a range of $6@6.75, stockers mostly at $5.75@6.50.

Receipts in the quarantine division were fairly generous and prices were steadily on the downgrade from the start of the week. Oklahoma contributed a fair proportion of steers. Order buyers were rather indifferent purchasers and the packers took the bulk of the showing. Values on the bulk of the steers were 15@25c lower than the preceding week. Oklahoma grassers sold as high as $7 @7.10.

Receipts of cattle from canner territory were generous. The inquiry for fleshy she-stock was fair, but in sympathy with the trade in natives, prices were 15@20c lower. Canners opened slow and weak but closed on a strong basis. Yearlings and heretics were a shade to a dime lower.

Hogs, Too, Are Cheaper.

A better supply of hogs was received than any week for some time, and yet it was not an extra large run although it was a good bit larger than the number received during the same week of last year. The hogs averaged pretty good in quality. Prices were gradually on the decline and while all hogs suffered the pigs and lights suffered a great deal more than the heavier hogs.

The top for the week was $9.05, but later just as good hogs were selling at $8.75, which shows the loss on the best grades. The bulk for the week went at $8.50@8.80. Butchers and shippers were by far the better buyers than the packers and they took the greater proportion of the good hogs, but they would not make any effort whatever to purchase the plain grades or pigs and lights under 170 pounds.

Packers paid $8.50@8.80 for good hogs, $8.25@8.50 for fair grades and $8@8.25 for the throwout roughs. Best lights under 165 lbs. sold at $8.35@8.65, best pigs under 125 lbs. $7.50@8.00, medium grades $6.75 @7.35, and poor kinds $6@6.50, according to quality. Southeast hogs that were not corn fed, no matter what weight, found a very dull trade and irregular and generally unsatisfactory.

Sheep and Lambs Stronger.

A moderate supply of sheep was on sale each day, and as there was a good demand for good grade, fat sheep and lambs also showed improvement. There was no great big advance to the trade, but prices gradually strengthened and at the close of the week were around 25c higher than the

MRS. ROCKEFELLER IS NOT LEARNING SIGN LANGUAGE

Husband Inquires About Instruction but Teacher Heard No More From Him.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 4.—The report that Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, who is very deaf, is learning the sign language was denied here today. Mrs. Elmer E. Bates, who probably would be the most likely teacher for Mrs. Rockefeller, said that she was not instructing Mrs. Rockefeller and no teacher could be found who was.

"Several months ago I sang several hymns in the sign language for Mrs. Rockefeller," said Mrs. Bates. "Mr. Rockefeller later remarked to me that he wished Mrs. Rockefeller knew the language, as it would be much easier to talk to her. He requested my telephone number, but since I have heard nothing from him."

Harry Sims, secretary to Rockefeller, denied the report also.

STRANGE WORLD GREETS CONVICT AFTER 43 YEARS

SCARCE BELIEVE OWN EYES

On First Day of Freedom He Had to Be Rescued by Guide From Revolving Door.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 4.—One of the recent pardons granted by Gov. Cox released John Haborn, Delaware County murderer, and he became a free man for the first time in 43 years. During his entire term in prison he was outside the walls but once, and then only for a little while.

John Taborn entered the prison Aug. 16, 1870, at the age of 23. He comes out at 66 "to start all over again," as he said. His shoulders were bowed with the weight of years and hard labor, but his mind and eyes were clear. He looked about him with wonder at a world which long had been growing toward a new development.

Living in the heart of a city, he had never ridden in a street car, never talked over a telephone, never seen a skyscraper, never ridden in an elevator, never seen a moving picture or an arc light or a bicycle or an automobile. He had never heard a phonograph. As for aeroplanes and wireless telegraphy, he could not even imagine them, he said, though he had seen a picture of an aeroplane in a book once.

During his term he watched 33,658 convicts come and go. After the first few years few friends came to see him, though attempts had been made to obtain a pardon for him.

Begged for a Guide.

When Warden P. E. Thomas carried his pardon to him the old prisoner received the news stolidly, but he lost no time in donning the blue serge suit given to each prisoner leaving the institution, accepted a purse of $30 which prisoners made up for him, and thanked them and the Warden for the $20 given him by the State. But as he started from the prison his nerve failed him, and he asked that someone from the prison might go with him and remain with him "until he got used to things."

Warden Thomas delegated his secretary, Frank O'Bleness, to accompany him, and together they rode up the street in the prison automobile. It was Taborn's first automobile ride and the first machine he had ever seen. As he rode along the paved streets, new to him, the old man leaned out of the side of the machine. He asked to be taken to the Governor that he might thank him for his pardon before he did anything else.

Gov. Cox received him with interest and questioned him closely:

"You went to the penitentiary the same year that I was born," the Governor remarked.

In reply to the Governor's questions Taborn said he had no relatives living; no personal property and no friends whose whereabouts he knew, or in fact whether they were living or dead. He thanked the Governor with tears in his eyes, turned away and then returned to thank him again.

Noises Startled Him.

Next he was taken for a walk about the streets. He was like a child. His eyes wandered everywhere and he was constantly in people's way. Unaccustomed noises made him start with almost catlike quickness. He gazed in awe at skyscrapers and finally asked to be taken through one. Going in he became tangled up in a revolving door and had to be extricated. He got on an elevator and rode up several stories before being aware that it had moved.

Taborn breathed a sigh of relief when he got on solid ground again. He had been no higher in the air than the second story of a building since his imprisonment.

"It's hard to explain," he said. "Everything looks so strange. People seem to move about faster than when I went to prison. They move differently and more businesslike. My! How much faster business must be conducted! There are so many automobiles, and they travel so fast. That's what surprises me most—so many automobiles. When people got around in my day it was with horses and buggies, and only a few people had them. Now everybody seems to have automobiles. I heard in prison that the world was moving faster; now I know it.

"People seem to be more particular in their dress and actions. The general run of people look like they have more sense than in my time. That is, they look more intelligent, especially the women. Women look a whole lot more businesslike than when I went to prison. I can't explain it very well, but somehow it seems to be a different sort of a world, doing things in a different way."

Stores Like Fairyland.

Taborn was taken through several stores, and there everything in turn excited his wonder. It was a fairyland for him. He said he was sure the world had improved more than twice as much in the 43 years since he had seen it than in the 23 years he had lived before he was sentenced. He could scarcely believe his own senses when he was taken to see the moving pictures that "talked." His eyes opened in wonder as he talked to the Warden of the Penitentiary over the telephone. He stood for an hour watching the crowds on the sidewalks.

After eating the "first square meal he had had for 43 years," it was with reluctance that he climbed on the first electric car he was ever on to take him back to Delaware, once his home, and where he was convicted of killing a man in a quarrel over a mouth harp.

Taborn will go to Cass County, Mich., where he had lived as a boy, and he hopes to find some of his friends there. Eventually he intends to go to Hillsboro, N. C., where he has been promised work at his trade of machinist.

Taborn leaves the penitentiary with a record for good behavior that is unequaled in prison history. During his entire confinement he was not once reported for breach of rules or misbehavior. He asked but one favor during his term, and that was during the only time in which he was outside the walls. Because of his age former Warden Jones once took him to the prison farm, 15 miles from Columbus, and he was there for three days. At the end of that time, though he was placed on his honor and allowed the freedom of the entire place, he asked to be taken back to the penitentiary, because "it seemed more like home and it was too lonesome in the country."

REPUBLICANS HAVE THREE APPORTIONMENT PLANS

First Method Suggested Would Cut Down Delegations From Southern States.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Details of the tentative plans suggested by the National Republican Congressional Committee for changes in the apportionment of delegates to the National Convention here were made public today.

The first plan provides that each State shall have four delegates-at-large and for congressional districts one delegate for each district where the vote for Republican presidential electors in 1908 was not more than 40 per cent of the total vote for presidential electors; two delegates if the vote was from 40 to 60 per cent, and three delegates where it was more than 60 per cent.

The second plan would give each State four delegates-at-large and one delegate for each 15,000 votes or major fraction thereof cast for the Republican candidate for presidential electors in 1908.

The third plan is the same as the preceding except that each congressional district shall have at least one delegate and there shall be two for each Congressman-at-Large.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of Virgin M. Pauley, our loving daughter, who passed away Oct. 6, 1912.

To the one we loved so dear, to part from your loving smile, your welcome face, we miss your coming footsteps, we miss your loving voice, sweetest thought shall ever linger since you left us that sad day.

Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, BROTHER. (c)

In Memoriam.

In sacred memory of our dearly beloved mother, Cecelia Ursula Tesson (nee Euge), who departed this life three years ago today, Oct. 5, 1910. Gone, dear mother, but not forgotten; you will live ever in the memory of the ones who loved you.

CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear husband and father, William Beckmann, who suddenly departed one year ago, Oct. 4, 1912.

Rest on, dear one, thy labor o'er,
Thy willing hands will toil no more;
We feel your presence always with us,
And know we will meet on that bright shore.

Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our mother, Regina Shine, who departed this life three years ago, Oct. 4, 1910.

Though you are gone you are not forgotten,
Never shall your memory fade;
Loving hearts will often linger
Around the grave where you are laid.

Sadly missed by your CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear brother, Charles Cook, who passed away two years ago, Oct. 5, 1911.

Just two years ago you left us,
Broken-hearted and all alone,
All is dark within our home,
Lonely are our hearts today
For the brother we loved so dearly
Has forever passed away.

Sadly missed by his BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear parents, Thand Mary Bruegge, who departed this life three years ago, Oct. 4, 1910.

We had precious treasures once,
They were our pride and joy;
We loved, oh, perhaps too much,
But the call was sudden and sad.

All is dark within our dwelling,
Lonely are our hearts today,
For the ones we loved so dearly
Have forever passed away.

We laid them in the family plot,
Where none were laid before,
In solitude, but not forgotten,
They sleep forever more.

By day their spirits hover near,
By night they calm our rest,
And to us they say, "Be of good cheer,"
The ways of God are best.

Sadly missed by their CHILDREN. (c)

STOCK FARM—For sale, of 163 acres

FARMS FOR SALE

Governor Norman J. Colman

Spent the last 30 years of his life in building up and improving what he claimed to be the "best stock farm" in the entire State of Missouri—

313 acres of splendid, rich, fertile ground, rolling, but not broken, 12 miles from St. Louis, on the Olive Street and Mill Creek roads, near Creve Coeur Lake, and overlooking the Missouri River and its famous bottom lands for miles; good house and all necessary outbuildings, family orchard of miscellaneous fruit, and plenty of fine water. This is a splendid farm, situated in the richest and most picturesque part of the county, on fine roads, and with good transportation. The Creve Coeur branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad runs through the place, and Colemans Station is only a short distance from the residence.

This must be sold; parties looking for a bargain should waste no time in seeing this. For price, terms and other information, see BENJAMIN F. THOMAS,

AUTO INDUSTRY AND AUTO SHOW

Latest Figures Showing the Giant Strides of the Motor Vehicle Business and a Fore-Glimpse of What Will Be on View at the Annual Exhibit in Forest Park Highlands This Week.

THE development of the automobile industry in the past five years has been so marvelous that leading authorities hold that within the next few decades 30,000,000 motor cars will be in use in the United States.

These figures stagger the imagination. But the statisticians tell us that 1,100,000 automobiles were licensed during the year 1913 and are now in actual use, and that during the coming year 400,000 new cars will be manufactured and sold. At this rate of increase the 30,000,000 mark does not seem improbable.

It is now definitely stated that the Standard Oil Co. has completed arrangements to enter the automobile industry by purchasing several large factories and increasing their capacity to 100,000 machines in a single season; that these machines will be equipped with a new type of engine that will run 50 miles on a single gallon of gasoline, and that the prices of the machines to be manufactured will range from $350 to $1000. Other manufacturers have completed plans for greatly increased production. These developments have caused the leading authorities in the industry to issue the forecast that within another 10 years there will be not less than 11,000,000 automobiles in actual service.

Exceeds Four Panama Canals in Amount of Investments.

With the industry in its present state of development, there is enough money invested in automobiles in the United States to build four Panama Canals, and if the expectation of the manufacturers is realized at the end of next season this investment will be increased enough to build two more canals.

The Keokuk dam, recently opened at a cost of $27,000,000, and generating 300,000 horsepower of electrical current, was regarded as one of the mid-continent marvels. With one-fifth of its power capacity mounted by cables to St. Louis, it now operates all the street cars, all the electric lights and thousands of industrial plants in this city.

And yet, the horsepower capacity of the automobile engines in use in the United States is equal to the combined capacity of 83 such plants as the Keokuk dam!

If the horsepower capacity of all the automobiles in use in the United States was concentrated in one huge engine, it could drive the machinery of every industrial plant in the country, with enough surplus power to operate all its electric light plants and propel all the battleships of the United States navy. And there would still be an unused surplus of approximately 5,000,000 horsepower of energy.

By the end of next season the combined horsepower capacity of the automobiles will be equivalent, in the opinion of engineers, to one-half of the combined horsepower of all the steam railroad locomotives in the entire country. And railroading is nearly a century old, while the automobile industry is but a 10-year-old infant!

The distance traveled in a single day by the automobiles of the United States is equivalent to 1000 trips around the world—25,000,000 miles a day, or about 9,600,000,000 miles a year.

Eleven Autos for Every Thousand of Population.

In the development of the industry, and in the utilization of the automobile, the United States has far outstripped every other nation of the world. For every 1000 of population in the United States there are 11 automobiles in use; in Germany 2, in France 3, and in Great Britain 4. In the group of Middle Western states, embracing Missouri, there are 14 automobiles in use to the thousand of population, and more machines in this comparatively small section of the country than in England, Germany and France combined.

These statistics, compiled by reliable automobile authorities, tell the story of the motor car in figures. But they fail to show how the automobile has revolutionized business methods and living conditions; how it has brought city and country into closer relationships, by making it possible to the business man of the city to live in the country, and the farmer or suburban dweller to transact his business in the city.

The automobile principle has been now successfully applied to farm machinery, with prospect that the next few years will bring about a striking and radical revolution of farm methods.

A WELCOME SURPRISE FOR THE FAMILY

An Unexpected Gift From the Head of the House.

The automobile has become a farm utility as well as a city convenience. The modern farmer transports his produce to town or city in trucks instead of by team; plows his fields and plants and harvests his crops with tractors, and owns his runabout or touring car for a pleasure vehicle.

With the opening of the automobile show in Forest Park Highlands Monday the progress of the industry toward perfection in motor car construction will be illustrated in the hundreds of new models that will be on display.

Few Radical Changes in Details of Motor Design.

The most radical changes that the season has brought forth is a general shifting from the right hand to the left hand drive, and a marked tendency to the use of the six-cylinder engine instead of the four.

Many manufacturers, in their 1914 models, will use the six-cylinder engine where they used the four-cylinder last year. Some other changes of a technical nature have been made, including electric or compressed air gear shifts, but they are not so radical. The same general type of bodies will be used, with some changes here and there, intended to add to the beauty and attractiveness of the car.

There will be on exhibition at the automobile show everything worth while in the motor car world from the light, trim, efficient runabout to the massive, powerful touring car and limousine. There will be a big display of electrics, illustrating the year's progress in that style of car.

The fuel scare has caused many manufacturers to put out machines for next year that can be operated by kerosene oil as well as gasoline. The oil or gasoline carbureter equipment is optional with the purchaser of many of the machines that will be marketed during the season.

The statistics show that nearly 800,000,000 gallons of gasoline was consumed by automobiles during the 1913 season, and with the output of machines to be practically doubled next year, the fuel question has become a serious problem. It is estimated that the average mileage from a gallon of gasoline is 12, including the great number of small machines that consume comparatively little gasoline.

The leaders of the industry have been waiting for an engine that would drive a car 50 miles or more on a gallon of fuel. The announcement that such an engine has been perfected, and will be manufactured in great numbers, is one of the most interesting pieces of news heard by the automobile makers in many months. If this engine meets expectations, the era of lower-price machines and greatly reduced cost of operation is near at hand.

AUTO SHOW OPENS TOMORROW WITH UNUSUAL DISPLAY

Everything New in the Motoring Line, From Big Limousines to the Smallest of Accessories, Will Be Exhibited at Forest Park Highlands.

SPACES MARKED BY LINES OF FLOWERS

Chrysanthemums and Smilax Used in Decorative Scheme With Southern Pine Boughs and Other Evergreens.

The big automobile show will open Monday evening at 7 o'clock at Forest Park Highlands with a dazzle of light on the polished brass and glossy bodies of hundreds of automobiles, reflecting the beauty of the floral decorations like so many mirrors.

The ensemble will give the impression that Flora, the Goddess of the garden, and the god of commerce united in making the seventh annual automobile show given by the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association an enchanted place. An army of artisans, decorators, carpenters and workmen worked all Saturday and Saturday night and will work all day and night Sunday to finish the decorations.

The English theme is carried out in the decorations. The main entrance has been transformed into a conventional English garden. The walls of the rotunda have been covered with white trellis work over which climbing yellow roses and Southern smilax twine. The granitoid floor is marked off in walks, bordered with green sward, while two huge flower beds decorate the center. One flower bed is of pompon chrysanthemum plants—bearing in all over 1,000,000 blossoms, which will include every tone in the diatomic and chromatic scales.

The posts supporting the roof of the pergolas are concealed by Georgia or Southern yellow pine trees reaching from the floor to the ceiling. The bright olive green needles—which are from 12 to 15 inches long—not only add their color to the exquisite beauty of the scene, but fill the air with a delightful resinous odor. There are 250 of these trees used in the decorations. The ceiling is covered with oak boughs in the rich autumn colors and Southern smilax, through which thousands of electric lights wink and blink like so many stars.

5000 Chrysanthemum Blooms Used.

The exhibit spaces are marked by white trellis work covered with smilax and large chrysanthemums. Over 5000 large chrysanthemums will be used in the decorations. The entire decorations are al fresco. Not an inch of bunting nor a single flag will mar the beauty of the garden effect. The decorations are perhaps the most original and artistic ever seen at a public function, and were designed by the Metropolitan Floral Co.

The beauty of the automobiles in the exhibits is only enhanced by the perfect surroundings. Every car is a marvel of artistic workmanship as well as of utility. The manufacturers of automobiles are taking the lead in combining art and utility. The result is that automobile manufacturing has become one of the leading industries of the country. The American people are rapidly developing the artistic-commercial sense—that is, they want their every day environments beautiful and comfortable. This happy combination has reached the acme in the 1914 models of all motor cars.

The exhibit of gasoline pleasure cars includes nearly every car represented in St. Louis. Several firms have two or three different lines.

The firms who will not be in the show have either been unable to secure 1914 models of the cars they represent, or they will make private displays in their show rooms.

The exhibit of gasoline pleasure cars will include only 1914 models. It must be said, that never in the history of automobile construction, has there been as many unique, beautiful and artistic body designs nor as many conveniences made a part of the equipment as will be shown this year.

First Display of 1914 Models.

St. Louis is showing for the first time in the United States the 1914 models. Among the novel designs of cars shown is a gasoline 20-foot limousine, a half dozen Sedans and as many Berlinea, and one novel creation called a "Cabriolet" and a gentleman's "race-about" combined. The standard body types will be shown in profusion. Each exhibitor has something different to talk about from any other exhibitor. Every make of car will have an individual feature. The finish of the bodies and the upholstering is marked for its elegance and comfort in the 1914 models. The automobile has practically become the dwelling place of the American people and the manufacturers are equipping them with every known convenience invented for the use and comfort of man.

The 1914 models are not only built along artistic lines and equipped for comfort, but they are built for utility and durability. The mechanism is simplified and built for long and hard travel. The gasoline pleasure car exhibit will include over 250 automobiles.

In the electric car display will be 10 exhibitors. This exhibit is installed in the new pergola, just east of the main entrance. This line is of particular interest to the women folk and will doubtlessly be thronged by the thousands of visitors. The manufacturers realizing that the electric is essentially the "woman's car," have reconstructed their designs and made them peculiarly suited to their use. The new 1914 electrics are built with bodies hung nearer the ground, making it easier for milady to get into her car. This feature also eliminates the sideswaying of the car, which was objectionable to women drivers. Many of the new 1914 models have solid tires, thus eliminating all tire trouble, which is the bane of every woman motorist. The double drive is another attractive feature. With this drive the car can be operated from the front or rear seat. Many of the new electric cars are equipped with batteries which will run 90 miles or more, which enhances the utility of the electric car.

The equipment of the 1914 models of electric cars is most complete in detail. Each dealer is keeping the equipment of his special line of cars a secret, as it has been hinted that the most perfectly appointed dressing table could not surpass the appointments of some of the new electrics.

The Trucks and Delivery Cars.

The commercial display will be of unusual interest to the heads of business houses. Motor delivery wagons and trucks have so well demonstrated the convenience, efficiency, economy and time saving over the horse-drawn vehicle that nearly every business house is considering their use or is using them.

In this display there will be one truck drawn by a big tractor, which recently carried 25 tons of stone. There will be two great 10-ton trucks, half dozen 5-ton trucks, 12 two and three ton trucks and from 10 to 15 styles of panel body delivery wagons of varying capacity. Ambulances and hearses will also be included in the commercial display.

This display will be parked in the open on either side of the display of gasoline pleasure cars.

Many Novel Accessories.

In the Accessories display, in the Concession Buildings in the northwest part of Forest Park Highlands, 30 firms will show every new attachment for automobiles that has been placed on the market this season. This exhibit will include every accessory from top lifters, cigar lighters, gasoline savers or speed increasers to new styles in tops and curtain construction.

Cavallo's Band of 40 pieces will give two daily concerts from 2:30 to 5 p. m. and from 8 to 10:30 p. m. There will be 12 soloists with the band, who will give special numbers at each concert.

The machines of the visiting public will be parked in front of Forest Park Highlands in Forest Park, there not being room enough in the regular parking places to accommodate any, except those of the exhibitors. Park Commissioner Dwight F. Davis had a force of men at work all day Friday filling in holes and taking out stumps there. Chief of Police William Young has assured ample police detail will be there to superintend the parking.

The Laclede, Market and Taylor car lines will run direct to Forest Park Highlands during the week of the show. In deference to the Veiled Prophet the show will remain open until midnight Tuesday evening, so that the public may see the parade and visit the show afterward.

MEN WHO ARE IN CHARGE OF THE SEVENTH ANNUAL AUTOMOBILE SHOW IN ST. LOUIS

That the poultry shows are having a beneficial effect upon the thoroughbred poultry business is clear to be seen This is but natural, for if the public visits poultry shows it always becomes interested and that means to become engaged in the business sooner or late.

CAREFUL DRIVING WOULD REDUCE SOLID TIRE WEAR

For more than a year the subject of solid-tire wear and destruction has been analyzed and studied by the Commercial Vehicle Committee of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers and its successor, the Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

This study has included the effects of paving conditions and topography in different cities of the United States from Boston to San Francisco, the greater tire mileage obtained from solid tires in European countries, the effects of overloading and excessive speed, bad distribution of loads, sudden starting and stopping, inadequate tire equipment for load capacity, diameter and contour of tires, and other factors bearing on this subject, even to differences in temperament and mental attitude of truck owners, shipping clerks, garage superintendents and drivers, and helpful effect of the system of bonuses to drivers.

Next to driver's wages, the largest single item in the cost of operation of a gasoline motor truck in America is the cost of tire replacements, and in the larger sizes of electric trucks it equals or exceeds the cost of battery upkeep.

Truck users in England, however, are obtaining two or three times the mileage from solid tires that is usual in this country. The truck makers here believe that by the adoption of proper methods the users of commercial vehicles on this side can greatly increase their tire mileages and thereby cut the cost of operation and maintenance very materially.

It is felt that the trouble lies partly in the indifference of the heads of houses using power vehicles to the details of their operation and partly to the lack of knowledge of the causes of tire destruction and wear on the part of shipping clerks, superintendents and drivers.

It is desired particularly to impress upon users that abuse of tires not only makes their first cost higher than it would be if the tire companies did not make good the damage done by such abuse, but that the burden of needless replacements under the guarantee falls upon those who take proper care of their tires, as well as those who do not; also, that in saving tire wear the user at the same time reduces damage to the vehicle itself and so plays on his general repair bill.

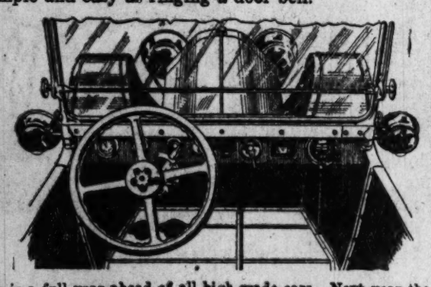
A recommendation approved by the directors was to readopt the motor truck standards adopted last year by the N. A. A. M., as embracing in the speed ratings, body weight allowances, caution plate against overloading and overspeeding; frame widths and lengths back of seat, and demonstration charges; and that the secretary of the Commercial Vehicle Committee be authorized to print these standards and that copies of each be mailed to all manufacturers of commercial vehicles in the United States.

These standards, together with a uniform guarantee covering material and workmanship for a period of three months after delivery of the truck to the purchaser, were established with a view to correcting numerous abuses existing among users and within the trade itself.

HAYNES — AMERICA'S FIRST CAR

It's More Than Worth Going to Auto Show Just to See the New Haynes With the Vulcan Electric Gear Shift

This Picture shows you the Vulcan Electric Gear Shift attachment on the Steering Wheel—shifting gears as simple and easy as ringing a door bell.



Notice how every bit of the control of the new Haynes is right under your eyes and at your fingers' ends. Pressing Button "8," and pushing forward on the clutch pedal starts your motor. Pressing Button "1" and pushing forward the clutch pedal gives you first speed; a similar operation with Button "2" gives you second speed; No. 3 gives you high speed. Button "R" is for reversing, and Button "N" throws the gears into neutral. "H" is for horn. For example, on a hill you would press Button "2," which selects the second speed—but you do not use it until you find you need it, when you push your clutch pedal and it is ready for you.

The new Haynes is a full year ahead of all high-grade cars. Next year the others will give you electrically shifted gears—they'd do it now if it didn't mean junking product and equipment, and if they could get the attachment—but this year every modern convenience and comfort is ready for you on and in the Haynes.

HAYNES

AMERICA'S FIRST CAR

Most Admired and Most Desired of All Today

No more bending, pulling, jerking and jamming to shift your gears. No more clashing, pounding and jolting as the change is made. Just a fingertip on a button—and a smooth, silent, sure gear shift, without a jump or jar, and without loss of momentum, going up or down hill or on the level. Come and see the New Haynes. See how you can have the entire control of your car under your eyes and at the tips of your fingers. See how we have eliminated worry for you and have increased the efficiency of your car.

Be Sure to See the History-Making Haynes at the Show, Booth No. 44

The body of the Haynes has much desired long, sweeping lines of beauty. The workmanship throughout is thorough—the best efforts of masters in their line. Here is a car that can't be surpassed at any price, and in value represents the limit of automobile possibilities. You will be interested beyond the power of words, to describe, when you see the new Haynes. Come and see it.

Reo the Fifth Now $220 Less

The 1913 Reo the Fifth, with electric starter and completely equipped sold at $1395, and the year was better than any year by 25%.

For 1914 many improvements have been added, and without sacrificing or skimping the price, and Reo the Fifth complete is $1175.

This is the reason. The best electric starters cost much less this year. The chassis is standardized and capacity of production increased. All special machinery for the chassis has been charged to previous output, wiping out these items from the building cost.

The 1914 REO the FIFTH is the best car ever built by R. E. Olds.

Reo the Fifth With Many Improvements

The new things—A new style low, rakish, low-hung cowl front body with a gondola back—the very latest move, with deep, soft upholstering.

Instrument board with all instruments set flush—within easy reach of the driver—the car is absolutely silent.

Windshield is ventilating, clear and rain vision. The search lights have a dimming attachment for city or country driving.

Reo the Fifth comes completely equipped with electric starter and electric lights and speedometer and top.

It has exclusively the one rod center control—no outside levers, no connecting links. No side levers, no brake levers.

Both brakes are operated by foot pedals. The drivers' entrance from either side is clear.

Each vital part is given a 50 per cent over capacity test. Fifteen roller bearings and 190 drop forgings are used; the carburetor is doubly heated.

The car is overtired.

With all these added improvements and new features you are saving $220. That's the result of three years' concentration on one model.

Look where you will, you'll not find, at this price or anywhere near it, a car you'd like better.

CONTINUOUS PULL IS POSSIBLE ONLY WITH 6 CYLINDERS

Any Number Under That Results in Interrupted Power and "Knocks" Are Experienced.

STROKES MUST OVERLAP

Unless They Do Fly Wheel Is Called Upon to Carry Engine Over "Dead Centers."

Though most motor car owners and drivers know now the reason for the superiority of the six-cylinder engine, there still are a few who fail to fully appreciate it. They admit the power is greater, but think it merely because of the two extra cylinders. Considered purely from the standpoint of numbers and volume of combustion space, six small cylinders have no more piston area and burn no more gasoline than four large cylinders.

It is easy to show that the amazing superiority of the six comes from the fact that the power strokes overlap, which is not the case in the four or any less number of cylinders. In a gasoline car of five-inch stroke the piston travels 20 inches for each cycle, as is well known to those familiar with automobile engines. Of this 20 inches, the power stroke occupies only about four inches. The remaining movement of the piston is occupied in filling the cylinder with gas, compressing it, and expelling the burned gases after the power stroke.

Hence, in four cylinders with a total power stroke of 16 inches, there must be a gap of one inch on each cylinder where no power is being applied. The weight and inertia of the fly-wheel must carry the motor over these dead centers. Here is where occurs the vibration in a four-cylinder motor.

But in a six the piston movement during the power strokes occupies approximately 24 inches, so that there is an overlap of four inches. In other words, there is no time during the operation of the engine when power is not being transmitted to the driving wheels. Thus the fly-wheel has less work to do, can be made lighter and is constantly under the influence of the power developed by the motor. It makes no difference whatever as to the size or length of stroke of the motor. In a four there is no possible way by which these no-power gaps can be avoided. And in any properly designed six of any size the power impulses will always "overlap."

J. H. Phillips, the local Hudson dealer, explains this very clearly. As long as there are four divisions in the cycle of operation of a gas engine just so long will it be impossible for four cylinders, or a less number, to overlap in power. Five cylinders would produce just sufficient power impulses to meet the complete circle of the fly-wheel. But five cylinders would not balance, being an uneven number. Hence there is no four-cycle gasoline motor of less than six cylinders that can possibly produce continuous power. Anything more than six will do so, of course, but there is no necessity of adding more cylinders than are needed, and the larger number of cylinders is not commercially practicable.

YOSEMITE PARK IS OPENED TO MOTORISTS

While a number of autoists are taking advantage of the reopening of the valley to automobiles, the order came so late in the season that traffic into the Yosemite will not be very great this season. The Yosemite Valley is at its best in the early summer, when the weather is cooler and the streams are high, thereby enhancing the beauties of the falls many fold. Next season a great rush of auto traffic into the valley is predicted.

The first car to enter the Yosemite under the new orders, which were placed in effect Sept. 1, was a Premier, driven by J. H. Leach of 1539 Boulevard avenue, Los Angeles. His daughter, Miss Juanita Leach, carried with her as a souvenir, the sign that had hung for seven years at the park line saying that autos were prohibited in the Yosemite National Park.

"ROAD HOGS" ARE CAUSE OF WORRY TO AUTO DRIVERS

St. Louis Dealer Tells Why Traffic Etiquette Should Be Better Observed.

A strong protest against three manifestations of the "road hog" spirit is voiced by C. G. Cabanne, manager of the Oldsmobile Company of St. Louis, who is recognized as a careful, though fast driver, and an authority on road law and practice.

The practices which Cabanne condemns as manifestations of the "road hog" spirit are passing another vehicle at a street intersection, holding the center of the road by a slow-going vehicle when its place is at the side and the failure of traffic coming in a stream at unpoliced corners to yield any crossing to traffic in the opposite direction.

"Since automobiles have become numerous," Cabanne says, "there are a number of raw novices at the steering wheels. Experienced drivers usually slow up at street intersections and respect the rights of others. The novice gets busiest at street intersections. He cannot tell whether or not the driver in front of him is planning to turn the corner, but he pelts right along just the same. What chance has a driver to give a visible signal. His hands belong on his steering gear wheel when he makes a turn. He can't keep one hand stretched outside the car and make the turn safely. You can always tell the novice by the fact that he tries to pass the car ahead at a street intersection.

"Another road hog is the person who drives his machine at a slow rate up the center of the street. The man behind who wants to move faster cannot pass at the right because that is against the law. He cannot pass at the left because the traffic bound in the opposite direction does not allow him sufficient space and an entire stream of automobiles will have to slow down to five or six miles an hour because the car in front hogs the road.

"The traffic law gives east and west traffic or north and south (depending on localities) the right of way. The intolerance of the raw novice has great opportunity to manifest itself in insisting on this rule. I have seen a vehicle wait 15 minutes while the stream of traffic flowed by and never one machine passed to let the waiting vehicle cross. The law means that when two vehicles, moving in directions at right angles to each other are at an equal distance from the center of the street intersection, the one moving east or west shall have the right of way over the one moving north or south. It does not mean that all the vehicles on the street shall have such right of way."

The rooming house conducted with a view to please keeps its vacancies listed in Post-Dispatch wants.

ST. LOUIS GROWING IN IMPORTANCE AS AN AUTO CENTER

Cole Company President Says City Ranks High as Distribution Center.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 4.—Continued growth of sales, the recognized importance of the city as a distributing point and the pronounced expansion of its automobile manufacturing interests have made St. Louis one of the strategic motor car points in the Middle West," said J. J. Cole, a former St. Louisan and now president of the Cole Motor Car Co. "This growth has not been of the mushroom variety. On the contrary, it has been steady and consistent with the development of the city itself and its tributary territory.

"Laboring under geographical disadvantages, the growth of St. Louis manufacturing interests has been remarkable. Were it situated within easy access to the factories of the specialists of this gigantic industry, it is quite probable that its strides would be much greater. St. Louis is one of the leading American cities in the manufacture of automobiles. It ranks fourth in volume.

"I have watched with a great deal of personal pride and interest the progress St. Louis has made in this direction. When I was associated with the Moon Bros. Carriage Co. I little dreamed that some day I would be in another city lending my efforts to thwart its ambitions to become the center of the automobile industry, for my loyalty has been transferred to Indianapolis.

"St. Louis possesses one of the most complete retail automobile organizations in the country. The capable, progressive element that has become identified with this business in the Missouri metropolis has been the chief factor in the remarkable growth of the business there. For instance, the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri is one of the finest distributing houses in our entire organization. The great volume of business done through this house during the past year is evidence of the merit of its executives and the fertile fields they have to work in.

"When men like Henry B. Graham and Nelson S. Gotshall take up the work of putting the automobile business on a solid foundation, it is only natural that results should come quickly. To people familiar with the trade locally, the success these men have enjoyed in the past year is well known. These men and their success are typical of the status of the business in Missouri.

"This is the transitory period in the automobile industry. It is the time when a silent battle is being fought. It is the old tale of the 'survival of the fittest.' The weak are being slowly, but surely, eliminated. The strong—those manufacturers who are building on a sound principle—will survive and reap a rich harvest. It is easy, if one analyzes the question critically, to decide upon which the inevitable ax must fall.

"I sincerely hope that this automobile show will be the biggest success that St. Louis has had. However, there should be no doubt on this score. The men who are identified with it give an assurance of this fact. It is the first important automobile show of the season. On its success will depend, to a large extent, preparations for coming motor car exhibits. Realizing this, St. Louis automobile men must arise to the occasion and stage a show that will reflect credit upon themselves and their city."

NEW PACKARD "2-38" HAS UNBROKEN LINES

Many Innovations Added to Car to Be Shown at Forest Park Highlands.

The new Packard "2-38" to be shown for the first time at Forest Park Highlands next week should be particularly interesting to the motoring public. While there are no such decided changes as last year, when the left-drive, left-hand control and self-starter were introduced, there will be many innovations.

The hood has been slightly raised in the rear to carry out the straight lines of the body. The running board has been cleared, all tires being carried in the rear, which allows entrance at all doors, gives unbroken lines to the car and distributes the weight for better balance.

A one-man top is a practical feature, the bows of which are attached only to the rear seat. The side curtains are arranged to open with the doors when in use.

The two-block motor with enclosed wiring, valves and oil passages presents a neat appearance.

Bert McCrea of the Halsey Automobile Co., distributers of Packard cars locally, says it is the liveliest thing in a motor car he has ever seen. He drove one in Detroit last week.

Bert has been selling Packards for seven years, so knows what lively cars are.

OVERLAND TRUCK LINE FOR FREIGHT HAULING PREDICTED

Garford President Thinks Motors Will Supplant Trains for Short Distances.

The most important single factor in the automobile industry today is universally recognized in the good roads movement, according to motor experts of the country. And this influence is to be felt, not only in the pleasure car field, but in the truck field as well, according to John N. Willys, president of the Garford company of Elyria, O. In his opinion, the spread of good roads throughout the United States promises an important forward step in motor truck manufacturing.

"We have watched carefully all during the life of the commercial vehicle industry, and in every instance where better highways were provided more trucks were sold. This is perfectly natural, too, for the business man and farmer of today are keenly alive to the economy of rapid and efficient transportation service wherever the roads are in condition to warrant better methods than the horse and wagon.

"I confidently expect to see, before very many months, motor truck routes reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, along the same lines as the old stage coach systems which our forefathers used in travelling before the railroads came. With the completion of the Lincoln highway, interstate truck service lines are bound to be promoted and developed, for the truck has been demonstrated time after time as vastly superior to express or freight service in handling shipments between towns a comparatively short distance apart."

ASK FOR INTERSTATE LAW ON MOTOR CARS

"No person who shall have qualified by complying with the laws and regulations of the State, territory or district of his residence to use and operate such vehicle or vehicles (self-propelled) shall be required in any other state or territory or district into which he may go for business or pleasure to make any additional registration or take out any additional license in order to use or operate any such machine."

This is the kind of a Federal regulation which thousands of motorists believe should be enacted, and that is why the Executive Board of the American Automobile Association, at its monthly meeting held in Buffalo, at the invitation of President Laurens Enos, endorsed the brief and concisely worded measure containing this proviso introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman William P. Adamson of Georgia, chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The title of the bill designates it as an act "To regulate the interstate use of automobiles and all self-propelled vehicles which use the public highways in interstate commerce."

Setting a New Value Mark in Sixes

The KisselKar Line
Comprises three striking pleasure car models — the 48 "Six," the 60 "Six" and the 40 "Four"—each model a superior value in its class. This supplies a range of pleasure cars that meets every requirement of discriminating motorists who insist upon quality and perfection, based upon actual manufacturing cost.

When the big KisselKar "60" Six was announced it was the sensational value in sixes. Up to that time sixes were manufactured for a class of buyers accustomed to asking for the best and paying the price. With the increased tendency toward sixes came a new and more discriminating buying public and a demand for a readjustment of prices and values in six-cylinder cars. At this time the KisselKar "60" six made its sensational entrance and it was the beginning of the readjustment of prices in six-cylinder values. Again the KisselKar steps out and sets another altogether new standard of value in six-cylinder automobiles. This time it is

The design is strikingly handsome and original, representing the very best of American and European ideas. Study its clean cut and graceful lines, the low hanging body, the poise and balance, the big roomy tonneau, the long wheelbase, big tires and all the niceities and refinements. Remember, too, that the smooth running silent long stroke motor more than responds to every demand, and develops loads of power in excess of its rated capacity.

Note the clean and simple construction which reduces the number of parts. The running boards are without boxes or brackets to mar the simplicity. Rakish fenders, with rounding tops, large 21-inch doors, deep low properly proportioned seats with backs pitched for extreme comfort and cushioned with the finest upholstery. Extra long wheelbase, which provides space for roomy tonneau, and adds to riding comfort. Left hand drive, center control, electric started and lighted, four speeds, oversize tires.

"60" Six KisselKar

TRACTION ENGINES DISPLACING PLOW HORSES IN KANSAS

Without Steam Power Wheat Acreage in 1913 Would Be Under 5,000,000 Bushels.

TRUCKS DO THE HAULING

Work Formerly Done by 80,000 Beasts of Burden Is Now Done by Engines.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 4.—The Kansas wheat acreage this year would have been less than 5,000,000 acres had not the practicability of the traction engine as a plow puller been established. Kansas could not possibly have plowed and sowed her usual 7,000,000 acres if it had not been for the power plowing outfits. There were not sufficient horses to do the plowing when the rains came.

The development of the motor truck and its utility on the farm is driving the Kansas work horses to delivery work in the cities, and even this may not last long. The traction engine is doing the plowing in the big Kansas wheat fields and the motor truck is doing the hauling.

Horses must remain to do the cultivating, but the work horses are disappearing at the rate of 120,000 a year, the same as the driving horse, carriage and buggy are disappearing from the Kansas tax rolls. The motor car for pleasure and business, the traction engine to do the plowing and the motor truck to do the hauling are superseding the horse and mule teams so rapidly that within the next two years there will be only an average of three horses for each farm in the State, whereas five years ago the average was five draft animals for each farm.

Motor Truck Replacing Horses.

Traction engines and motor trucks are doing the work that formerly 80,000 horses and mules on the Kansas wheat farms did. In Eastern Kansas, where farms and fields are small, the traction engine is not a success, but the motor truck as a farm utility wagon is, and it is rapidly replacing horses in hauling farm produce to market.

Early in September rains broke the longest drouth Kansas had had and following the rains traction engines were at work in the wheat fields. The ground had been so dry that plows could not turn it. Farmers found themselves with a serious problem. There were not enough horses in Kansas to pull the plows and get the ground ready for the wheat seeding, which must be done between Sept. 15 and Oct. 30.

One manufacturer of traction engines for plowing sold 67 engines and plows in Kansas within ten days and had to charter a special train to deliver some of the outfits on time. Other makers sold almost as many outfits and dozens of threshing engines were taken from the wheat stacks and put to work plowing for next year's crop.

Last year it was estimated that one-third the wheat acreage of Kansas was plowed by engine power and this year it is estimated that more than half the 7,000,000 acres expected to be sown in wheat has been plowed by the big tractors and two-thirds of all this vast acreage has been plowed within thirty days.

Cost From $1000 to $2000.

The tractor plows vary in cost from $1000 to $2000, according to the size of the engines and the number of plows. The engines vary from 30 to 70 horse power and the plows vary from six to 12 discs, each turning a furrow 14 inches wide and from four to seven inches deep. A 40-horse power engine and eight plows will turn 30 acres of ground in 10 hours, but most of them surpass this by 10 to 15 acres a day this fall because they were kept going from daylight until dark, often two shifts of men handling the big machines.

Steam, gasoline and kerosene furnish the motive power. It costs not less than 80 cents an acre to plow wheat ground with horse power, three horses and one plow and one man plowing an average of three acres a day. It costs 10 cents an acre for kerosene and oil to run a 30-horsepower tractor, plowing 20 acres a day, 12 cents an acre for gasoline and oil for the same power gasoline tractor and 15 cents an acre for coal, water and oil for the steam tractors, all engines being of the same power and pulling the same number of plows.

Two Men Required.

Two men are required to run either the kerosene or gasoline engines, one to do the actual guiding and driving and the other to look after the fuel and the plows. It takes the same number of men to run the steam tractor and an additional man to haul the water.

The actual cost of plowing by kerosene is 30 cents, by gasoline 38 cents and by steam 45 cents an acre, including the wages of the men and fuel and oil. The investment for horse power for a wheat farm represents 70 cents an acre, while the investment for a tractor outfit represents $1.00 to $1.65 an acre. But the power outfits do the work so much faster and better because of the weight that the extra investment pays. Many farmers are able to plow their own ground and at 50 to 60 cents an acre plow many hundreds of acres of their neighbors and make sufficient profit to pay their own plowing cost in a single season.

The farm motor truck is doing one-third the hauling on the Kansas farms at the present time. Every morning may be seen 15 of the light farm trucks lined up in front of a big creamery in Topeka unloading milk from farms as much as 15 miles from the city. The same scene may be found at almost any town in Kansas where there is a creamery. Formerly there would be 30 to 40 teams doing this work in Topeka, and now 15 trucks, and possibly half a dozen teams do the work, and also get farther into the country than the horses could go in the same time.

A visit to any of the wheat shipping stations in Central Kansas will show the motor trucks hauling wheat from 100 to 200 bushels at a time. The trucks may not be able to haul much wheat in their own bodies, possibly 30 to 50 bushels, but they pull from two to four wagons, each holding 50 to 60 bushels, and move faster than any team could walk and pull one of the wagons.

The speed of the tractor plows and the motor trucks, even with the heavier investment and the fact that so much larger loads can be hauled at less cost per ton a mile are the items that make the power outfits pay in Kansas, and they are fast supplanting the work teams of the central part of the State as the pleasure cars have supplanted the driving nags and buggies.

MANY OAKLAND BRANCH MANAGERS IN CONVENTION

Nearly every state in the Union was represented at the annual convention of Oakland branch managers and distributers, who were the guests of the Oakland Motor Car Co. at Pontiac, Mich., Sept. 26 and 27.

The two days were spent in an inspection of the factory and the new models, in going over plans for the coming year and in the social activities which go with such occasions.

The 1914 models were on exhibition in a special showroom at the factory and here many of the dealers had their first glimpse of the new cars.

The conference came to a close with a dinner Saturday evening at the Pontchartrain Hotel, Detroit. Talks were made by George E. Daniels, vice-president and general manager, on "Automobile Ideals;" General Sales Manager J. B. Eccleston, on "Sales Promotion," and Advertising Manager J. H. Newmark, on "Psychology in Business."

A. F. Knobloch, vice-president and general manager of the Northway Motor and Manufacturing Co., and W. P. Anderson, superintendent of the Dayton Engineering Laboratories Co., Dayton, O., were special guests at the dinner.

NEW McFARLAN AUTOS SOON TO BE ON MARKET

Liquidation at Connersville Plant Will Not Affect Their Manufacture.

The manufacture and sale of the McFarlan Six, and service to owners of McFarlan Sixes will not be affected by the liquidation of the McFarlan Carriage Co. at Connersville, Ind., according to A. H. McFarlan, president of the McFarlan Motor Co.

There has been a slight delay in production of the new models of the car, but within two weeks they will be on exhibition simultaneously in all parts of the country. The discontinuance of the carriage company forces the motor company to manufacture as well as sell the cars hereafter, however, and to this end the new motor company was incorporated with sufficient capital to take over the manufacturing end of the business.

OUTLOOK FOR 1914 BUSINESS PLEASING TO MANUFACTURER

Hupp Company President Thinks Conditions of Trade Are Excellent.

"The outlook for 1914 automobile business is excellent," says President J. Walter Drake of the Hupp Motor Car Co., "not only on account of the natural conditions of trade, but also on account of the permanency and stability of our organization, both at home and afield.

"It is not a far cry from 1908 to 1913, yet those six years have witnessed a remarkable growth of the automobile industry. In 1908 the Hupmobile was born in a shed; today it is housed in a plant of 250,000 square feet of floor space.

"Our organization, starting naturally with a small unit, has gradually been enlarged, so that the factory and dealers' organizations take care of any expansion of our business.

"Perhaps the best illustration of the efficiency of an organization is in its results. One year ago we faced the problem of doubling out entire product—an undertaking which meant the selling of some fourteen thousand cars. The fact that we have accomplished this is the best answer that I know of as to the dependability of our organization.

"The policy of the organization has always been to so arrange its plans that the services of no one man would be indispensable—a policy that we have been able to work out effectively through the harmonious team work among the heads of the different departments.

"Since the incorporation of this company there has been less than a 10 per cent change among its distributers. Today, practically every Hupmobile dealer has established a solid organization in his own territory, built along the same lines of permanency and stability as has marked the progress of our company."

DELAY IN LOADING CURTAILS EARNING OF MOTOR TRUCKS

Handling of Merchandise Must Be Speeded to Get Best Results.

After replacing a horse delivery or haulage system by a motor vehicle installation, some business houses have learned that they did not make the saving or accomplish the results which they anticipated. Many cases of this kind have been investigated by practical transportation men, at the request of the motor truck owners, and in almost all it was developed that the reason for the unsatisfactory service of the motor vehicles, from the standpoint of earning capacity, was not inherent in the trucks but in the methods which surrounded their use.

It was learned that the handling of merchandise before it was ever loaded on the truck often had not been speeded up or changed to conform with these characteristics of endurance and rapid motion, which should be taken advantage of in the use of either one motor truck or a fleet.

The motor truck needs no periods of rest, says W. K. Chilcott of the General Motor Truck Co. It can be worked at all times to full capacity and the work of a truck must be carefully planned with this in mind. Big earnings are obtained from motor trucks only when they are kept constantly at work, carrying as near as possible full capacity loads.

Delays must be eliminated at loading platforms. If the old methods of handling merchandise have made customary the loading of a machine slowly, piece by piece, some method should be devised for loading small packages before the machines back to the shipping platform. When this is done the motor truck investment is not idle and the truck may be worked in a way which will produce greatest satisfaction and maximum earnings.

DAY COMING SOON WHEN AUTOS WON'T HAVE TO BE TESTED

Cars Are So Near Perfection They Can Be Delivered Without Trying.

Is the automobile industry soon to celebrate the passing of the tester?

The suggestion would have been laughed at a few seasons ago. What! Send automobiles direct from factory to consumer without first seeing that they will run? Rob the industry of its most romantic figure—one that has so long stood for the very highest type of motor mechanic?

Nevertheless, the possibility is a live topic of discussion in Detroit now. Perhaps the tester may survive for several seasons, even in the most scientific and largest plants. But steadily and surely its work is being simplified and scope narrowed.

As one of the big Studebaker corps of expert drivers says: "They call us testers and we're still testers on the pay roll. But we're fast coming to be a bunch of pleasure riders. There's nothing to do now but take a car around the course, O K it and climb into another one."

The man who has so narrowed the duties of a tester is the individual who with micrometer or gauge, accurate to less than a hair's breadth, passes steadily on the work of each man and machine in the shop, insuring accuracy in every operation of manufacture. In the Studebaker plants he exists to the number of more than 500.

He follows the material through every step of its manufacture—sometimes inspecting the same part after each of more than a score of operations. He tests its performance in the assembled unit, removing now and then a part for test on intricate machines. He inspects the completed car, scrutinizing chiefs as well as mechanical perfection. Last of all, he inspects each automobile on the shipping platform and sees that it is complete with every detail of equipment.

MOTOR CAR MAKES NATION OPTIMISTIC, THINKS DEALER

RESTS BUSINESS MEN

Others Who Do Not Own Cars Are Cheerful in Anticipation of Doing So.

The motor car is a creator of happiness and optimism. It has done more to make the American people a happy, cheerful crowd of contented workers than any other invention in the history of the world. Such is the statement made recently by Harry R. Radford, vice-president and general manager of the Cartercar Co., Pontiac, Mich.

"The motor car affords a kind of pleasure and recreation combined, that is entirely new to the world. The man who drives a motor car has a means of travel that is equal to both the railway and the horse-drawn vehicle. He can cover the great distances, yet is able to choose his own roadways and can go at his own free will.

Makes Business Man Happy.

"It is a new sensation, different from anything ever known to the world before, and that's why it has become so very popular in such a comparatively short time. Find a man who drives a motor car and you will invariably see a cheerful, happy fellow, who enjoys living to the utmost. And the people who do not own automobiles are happy in the anticipation of being able to purchase them in the future.

"There is no doubt but that the motor car has made this an optimistic nation, a cheerful nation. The business man thus introduces a big element of pleasure in his business and of course is able to accomplish more. The motor car has brightened up the lives of thousands of people. It has taught them to love the beauties of the great out of doors and made them appreciate their surroundings as they never have before.

Keeps Boys on the Farm.

"But perhaps the greatest thing that the motor car has accomplished is to make the life of the country people pleasant and worth while. With an automobile the farmer has pleasures at his command which are second to none that the city man enjoys. Time and again we get letters from owners of cars in the country who say that they never before knew what real pleasure was. They are able to get around over their state and can keep in touch with agricultural development around them. And the motor car will do more than any other one thing to keep the boys and girls on the farms."

AUTO-BUYING FARMERS DRIVE SHARP BARGAINS

They Are Considered Responsible for Luxurious Cars at Moderate Prices.

The Yankee farmer, known almost since time out of mind as the shrewdest buyer in the world, has been forced to share his laurels, according to automobile manufacturers. The David Harums of New England are now no more famous as drivirs of profitable bargains than are the corn-raising ranchers of Kansas, the apple grower of Idaho or the prune cultivating citizens of California.

The automobile has taught the great American public the value of the currency of his country as nothing else has ever done. The proof? Look at the big, powerful, beautifully finished, extravagantly equipped automobiles which are selling at what, a few years ago, would have been considered a ruinous low price.

"The man whose financial resources allow him a $1000 automobile is the one who is responsible for the bargains in the motor car market today," says T. L. Hansman, president of the Overland Auto Co. of St. Louis.

"To the thrift and shrewdness of the man of average means is due the marvelous development of the automobile from a crude and expensive toy to a big, powerful and moderately-priced business and pleasure vehicle.

"The shrewd buyer is responsible for every one of the refinements and improvement of the modern motor car. Year by year he has demanded more and more in the way of mechanical and equipment features.

"The self-starter, the electric lighting system, the deeper and more comfortable upholstery and every other improvement to be found on the automobile have all come because the consumer required them and refused to buy the car in which they were lacking.

NEW TRUCK CUSHION TIRE

Motz Company Announces Satisfactory Production.

"The adverse conditions under which motor trucks are used demand durable and highly resilient tires," says T. H. McGehan, general manager of the Motz Tire and Rubber Co.

"After considerable experimenting we have produced a cushion truck tire that is designed to meet these conditions. Our efforts originally were directed toward the perfection of a tire for electric vehicles. Truck manufacturers, too, insisted on a tire with the same design for motor trucks. They fully realized that the sharp vibrations resulting from solid tire equipment were detrimental to automobile construction, but more especially to the mechanical parts of the machine.

"In design we have followed closely the construction of our pleasure car tire, incorporating such changes as were found advantageous from a practical standpoint, and which are the result of several years' experience in its use on commercial cars.

"It is a happy medium between the pneumatic tire with its usual attendant troubles, and the ordinary solid tire. It is constructed with undercut sides which form slantwise bridges, and in addition has a dual tread. This construction, together with the high quality of rubber used in its manufacture, affords a highly resilient tire with the durability of a solid tire.

"Extending on the inner side of each tread at regular intervals are perpendicular indentations that effectively prevent skidding. This nonskid feature is effective until the tire yields its guaranteed mileage, which is 10,000 miles one year. This guarantee covers defective material or manufacture, providing the tire is used under certain conditions based on the capacity of the truck.

"The tire has double the tractive area of the ordinary solid tire of the same rated size. This is an important factor involving an economical question that results in a great saving in fuel consumption. No power is consumed in turning wheels that are not constantly in contact with the road surface. In this way the machine is always propelled in an onward and not an upward direction.

"Many manufacturers have proved to their own satisfaction the desirabilities of the Motz S. A. E. tire."

Cadillac Improvements Are Real

The most significant fact in the automobile situation today is that the Cadillac is what it is—a "four." With an engineering staff whose resourcefulness no one questions—with capital equal to any emergency—with an enviable reputation for durability, dependability and true economy—with an assured market among the hardest headed, shrewdest car buyers in the world—with all this back of it the Cadillac is today a four cylinder car. Weigh that carefully, Mr. Car Buyer.

It Is Time to Think

For eight successful years the Cadillac has shown a consistent development of the only standardized type of motor car. Every principle of construction has been proved the most efficient and economical by years of use. Its only lack of utter perfection has been in the limited flexibility of the four cylinder motor. And now even that is overcome.

The Two-Speed Rear Axle

Cadillac engineers have proved their resourcefulness equal to the difficulty. Not complicating the most wonderful motor ever made—not by adding to operating and repair expense. They did it by devising a new double type of rear axle gears which give double the usual flexibility, offering the driver the choice of six different speeds forward and two reverse. The change from one rear axle gear to another is done by electricity. You just press the button.

Note the Flexibility

Today the perfect, flexible, four cylinder car is a reality—and it is a Cadillac. Up to now all automobiles have been geared "high" (fast) or "low" (slow) or somewhere in between. When geared high they run smoothly at high speeds, but will not run slow enough on "direct drive." When geared "low" they run slowly on "direct drive," but vibrate uncomfortably at speeds of 18 to 20 miles an hour. The Cadillac gives both. On "low speed" rear axle and "direct drive" it will run as slowly as you need to and on "high speed" rear axle "direct drive" will run 40 miles an hour with unbelievable smoothness—and faster, of course.

For starting quickly, hill climbing and hard going in deep mud or sand the Cadillac in "first" speed combined with "low gear" rear axle has unusual power available, vastly increasing the ability of the car under such conditions. So not only is the desired flexibility furnished but the Cadillac method gives added power in emergencies.

Other Advantages

Nor is this all. The slower running motor at high car speed reduces friction and vibration, thus increasing the life of the entire car, and gives more miles per gallon of gasoline because a slow running motor gets more power from a gallon.

It is truly a notable work to accomplish in a "four" the long sought flexibility and to increase efficiency and durability at the same time. Others have achieved flexibility only at the cost of 50 per cent more complication, reduced efficiency and increased expense. It is enough to make any man think—long and carefully. That is all we want to do—make you think BEFORE you buy.

HOW TO SAVE TIRES TOLD BY EXPERT OF GOODYEAR FIRM

Persistent Watching for "Kinks" Will Save Much in Wear and Tear.

LITTLE CUTS DANGEROUS

Brakes and Rims Should Be Examined to Prevent Unnecessary Friction.

"An automobile is pretty nearly human in one respect. It requires care to make it perform its functions up to the standard of its creation," said F. A. Henderson of the Goodyear company.

"That is often overlooked by the owner of the car and negligence is certain to hasten the tire breakdown. Any tire is subject to more or less abuse, owing to the fact that it must encounter all kinds of roads and receive little or no consideration from the driver. Cuts, stone bruises, mud blisters result, and if these are neglected they eventually spell the destruction of the tire.

"There are more things for the drivers to consider than the mere driving of the car. Road conditions play an important part in the life of tires. Inflation, distribution of the weight of the machine and alignment of the wheels are also influential. No two tires in a set may give the same service, although their quality, workmanship and construction may be identical.

"The service and mileage of a tire depend as much on the conditions under which it is used as upon the quality of the tire itself.

"When a tire is imperfectly inflated the walls are continually bending back and forth as the car moves, with the same result as when a wire or piece of metal is bent back and forth in the hands. Heat is engendered in the threads and because of this heat and the continued bending, the walls soon weaken and give way. In a short time they are not strong enough to support the air pressure plus the weight of the car and blowouts result.

Kinking Is Destructive.

"Not only that, but when a tire becomes loose, a lump or fold of rubber and fabric is formed just in front of the part in contact with the ground. This is what tire makers call 'kinking.' This tends to separate the plies of the fabric, or in aggravated cases to chew up the walls of the tire, as well as that portion of the tube that happens to get caught.

"A close watch should be kept on little cuts. They should be cleansed from sand and dirt with gasoline and then filled with cement and quick repair gum. This gum will set in a few hours and become an integral part of the tire and prevent future trouble. A very large cut is to invite sand blisters and mud boils, which are caused by sand and dust entering the cut and working in between the tread and the fabric of the casing.

"These are diseases to which tires of any type or make are subject and if they are not checked when the symptoms appear result in small cuts in the tread.

"Sand and dust enter and gradually work their way between the rubber and fabric, and the result is a sand blister or mud-boil. Tires that have already developed all these diseases should be sent to the repair man at once. When blisters are cleansed out and vulcanized your tire is practically as good as new.

Axles Should Be True.

"If an axle is even slightly out of true, the tire will be subjected to a grinding action, which will wear out the thread in an incredibly short length of time. If you go over a heavy bump or have an accident of any kind, have your wheels examined at once. Don't wait until the tread of your tire is worn off and then blame the tire maker.

"If one tire stops the load, as is the case when brakes are not properly adjusted, the tread is liable to be worn through to the fabric by one application of the brake, as the strain of stopping the car is thrown almost entirely on one wheel.

"See that the brakes are adjusted to equally distribute the strain. Sudden stops have the same effect and should be avoided. Skidding around corners at high speed is likewise very disastrous.

"The fabric having been thus weakened, it is a matter of a short time until the air pressure in the tube, increased by the weight and strain of a heavy car, becomes too great for the container or casing, and a loud report announces a blowout. To experts, the causes are well known. So long as the fabric is preserved as it was when the tire was new, the blowout is not likely to occur. Let the tire be ridden partly or wholly deflated for a distance, or suffer a cut or stonebruise, trouble starts, and it gradually becomes worse until the blowout point is reached.

"In the case of a cut or bruise, the blowout may not occur for days after the accident, enough of the fabric being left intact to sustain the pressure for some time.

Over-Weight Expensive.

Tire fabric is like other textiles. It tears easily once it is cut, while it resists the most severe strains when uninjured. A very small cut or rend in the fabric may result in a bad blowout if not properly repaired.

It is estimated that five per cent added to the weight of the car adds 15 per cent to the wear and tear on the tires. It is always economy to adopt tires one or two sizes larger than the regular equipment on your car, for additional mileage and satisfaction to cover the additional cost, will be given by larger tires. The tremendous horse power of some high-priced machines produces an effect similar to overloading.

"If chains are used, they should have proper adjustment. Chains applied too tightly will cut the tread out and render the tire useless in a short time. If one-piece clincher rims are used, it is advisable to examine them at frequent intervals for dents. The clincher rim is easily bent and being subject to rust, the edges may become worn down to a cutting edge, then rim-cutting begins and the case is soon cut through.

"When a clincher tire rim-cuts, examine the rim. Casings should be removed from the rims occasionally for an examination of both rims and casings, the casings for breaks and indications of breaks in the fabric, for strains show up some times inside first, and can be reinforced with a patch, and an ultimate blow-out be avoided. Examine the rim for dents, irregularities and rust. If the rim does not fit the clinch of the tire with perfect contact, the bead is soon destroyed and water is allowed to enter the tire with destroying influence. A rusty rim soon eats away the canvas. The tire should be thoroughly cleansed before it is again applied.

"Tires should not be stored or left off any length of time unused in the direct rays of the sun or kept in very warm quarters. Under such conditions the rubber quickly loses its elasticity, becomes hard and develops innumerable cracks. A continued exposure will render the best tire practically valueless.

Oil Very Injurious.

"When buying a new case or a tube it will be wise to see that the dealer has not displayed it in the windows. To secure the longest life and greatest amount of service from a tire it should be stored in dry, cool and dark quarters.

"Never allow tires to stand in oil at the garage or elsewhere, and be particular to wipe off any oil which may drop on the tires at any time. Lubricating oil softens the rubber, makes it pasty and glue-like in consistency and takes all the resistance and elasticity out of it. This oil may be cleaned from the tires with gasoline, and does not result in injury.

"If, when the car is idle, it is jacked up, it will add to the life of the tires, as they are then bearing only the pressure of the air with which they are inflated. When supporting the weight of the car several thousand pounds is exerting a continual, unnecessary strain on the casing walls. By adopting this course the life of the tires will be increased by at least half the time that the car stands idle.

"The motoring public is fast coming into realization of the truth of these suggestions and tire troubles are growing less.

"The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. has inaugurated an educational campaign, realizing the public is not as familiar with the care of tires as it should be, and their representatives have instructions to give tire users all the time necessary in order to educate them as to their proper care of their tires."

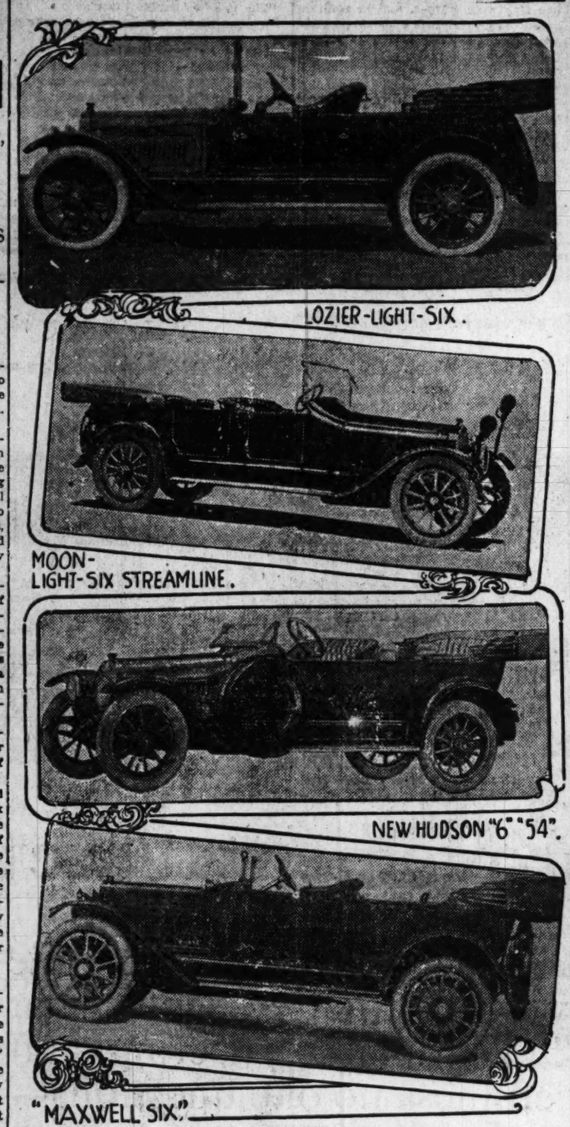
A BATTERY OF STAR "SIXES" TO BE SEEN AT THE SHOW



TOUR SOLD MANY CARS

That the recent tour of the Indiana Automobile Manufacturers to the Pacific Coast did more than promote Carl Fisher's idea of an ocean to ocean highway, is evidenced in a report to hand from The Haynes Automobile Co. of Kokomo, Ind., whose entries, cars Nos. 12 and 13, caused much favorable comment by their excellent performance throughout the entire 3750 miles.

"In St. Louis," the report reads, "we made our first killing—a contract for 50 cars was secured there. Kansas City favored us with 125, Salt Lake City, 50; Ely, Nev., 10, and Corning, Cal., 10—245 cars in all."

Prominent among the individual buyers of Haynes Cars en route on the trip were Gov. Hodges and U. S. District Attorney Robertson, of Kansas.

TWO-SPEED AXLES OFFER EXTENSIVE SPEED VARIATIONS

Innovation Introduced by Cadillac Company Also Is a Fuel Saver.

MOTOR WORK EQUALIZED

Changes From Town to Country Speeds Attained at Highest Efficiency.

"In these days of innovations and quick transitions, says a recent editorial in The Automobile, one of the authorities of the industry, "it is questionable if the two-speed axle, now that it has been announced by the Cadillac company, will not be taken up with avidity. The two-speed axle is more needed today than ever before, first because cars are being made heavier and motors smaller, and second because fuel consumption is being given more consideration than ever before.

"The reduction in motor dimensions tends to reduce the fuel consumed, but the added weights place a handicap on it. The two-speed axle used in conjunction with a three or four speed gearbox will give all the speed variations that present road conditions demand.

"With city driving at 15 miles per hour and country driving around 25 or 30 miles per hour, it is certain that in both cases the motor cannot be operated within its range of maximum efficiency. If its efficiency range suits the city field, then it does not suit the country situation so well, and vice versa. The two-speed axle is intended to meet these requirements and give each owner direct drive. Those using it claim the wear and strain on all of the other parts of the car are correspondingly reduced.

"For hilly countries there is ample necessity for two direct drives, as afforded by the two-speed axle. In many states there is entirely too much second-speed work on hills which is made necessary by the hall approached and the frequent rough bridge where the ascent begins. Some drivers will rush the rough approach and the rough bridge at the expense of the tires and the car in general, many prefer to practically slow down and make the hill on second or perhaps low.

"The value of the two-speed axle becomes more apparent also because of the more general use of high-speed, smaller-sized motors. With these motors it is essential to keep the speed well up on the hills as, if it drops, low gear will have to be brought into use, the two-speed axle will offer double opportunity in such work.

"In level country touring the two-speed axle will give relatively high touring speeds with a small motor without continuous high racing."

FEDERAL AID FOR ROADS, PATHFINDER PREDICTS

Driver of Long Distance Trip Thinks Extensive Improvements Will Come Soon.

Federal aid for the building of an interstate trunk highway system that will link all of the larger cities and states in a vast network of good roads is a part of the plan for which W. O. L. Westgard, field representative of the American Automobile Association and United States Government office of public roads, is now gathering data on the fifth official trip from coast to coast by the A. A. A. in the veteran Pathfinder "40," which is now on its way back to the bright lights of Broadway.

Westgard, who made the actual survey of the proposed Lincoln Highway route across the continent, asserts that Federal aid is sure to come soon and predicts that the assistance from the Government will be of such a nature as to insure a national system of highways that will place the United States far ahead of every other country in good roads.

"A plan is now in process that will give the United States a system of rock highways extending all the way across every state from north to south and from east to west, connecting with corresponding roads in every adjoining state," said Westgard.

"The bulk of the good roads data, including the survey of three transcontinental routes made last summer in this same car by my brother, will be the basis for the efforts of the American Automobile Association in securing the coveted intercommunicating state highway system.

"The Indiana makers' tour did more to concentrate national attention on the good roads movement than any other similar enterprise and good roads boosters everywhere are indebted to the Hoosier manufacturers for having the originality and push to put over so big a proposition. The tour has been conducted under ideal conditions and was the biggest of its kind ever held by an organization of manufacturers or private individuals."

DOUBLE SIMPLEX OUTPUT

Company to Launch Progressive Sale Campaign.

With increased facilities for manufacturing, and with practically twice as much capital invested as formerly, the Simplex Automobile Co. is about to launch a progressive sale campaign and double the output of the Simplex cars.

Several important additions have been made to the factory and new machinery has been installed to meet the great demand for Simplex cars. Heretofore the output has been small, but the increased factory facilities will permit a doubling of the number of cars.

ST. LOUIS AUTO CLUB ACCOMPLISHES BIG THINGS FOR OWNERS

Suppression of Many Bad Practices Is Attributed to Its Work.

WANTS MORE MEMBERS

Campaign Now On Is Expected to Raise Enrollment to 5,000.

Every member of the Automobile Club of St. Louis has been invited by the Show Committee of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association to attend the opening of the seventh annual automobile show. In April, 1907, the Automobile Club aided in promoting and holding the first automobile show in this city; there being no Trade Association at that time. Since then the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association has been holding an annual show.

The Automobile Club is not a social organization in any sense, but devotes its energy and spends its money for the betterment of conditions relating to automobiles and in protecting the interests of its members who are automobile owners. Ever since its organization about one-tenth of the automobile owners of the city have been members, the other nine-tenths receiving the benefits of a few. During the last two months an active membership campaign has been carried on by the club and the membership greatly increased. It is the hope of the Membership Committee to reach a 5000 membership before January, 1914.

The Automobile Club was organized in 1902—in the days when the "horseless carriage" was an oddity and attracted curious crowds in the streets.

As soon as the automobile developed the possibilities of speed, it was eagerly taken up by what may be termed the "sporting element;" and the nefarious practice of speeding soon brought the automobile into disrepute. Ten per cent of the automobile owners spoiled the use of the automobile for the other 90 per cent. The feeling against speeding found expression in harsh laws and ordinances. In 1903 the State Legislature passed a law requiring a license of $2—with 50 cents more added for the clerk's fees—to be paid in every county in which the car was operated. The speed limit was made nine miles per hour.

Children's Day Established.

In 1905 and 1906 the club held two racing meets in which professionals contested, and which resulted in serious accident. The Board of Governors, realizing that the speeding of cars, even on prepared tracks nearly always resulted in accidents which were given wide publicity, aggravating and increasing the prejudice against the users of automobiles, passed a resolution in June, 1906, condemning the practice and refusing to sanction such contests.

Under the 1903 law, the motorists had been harassed, persecuted and restricted in the proper use of their machines. In 1906 the club's officers framed a bill providing for a maximum speed limit of 25 miles per hour and a permanent State license fee or $5 in lieu of the annual county license. It passed in 1907 without serious amendment, except that the speed limit was reduced to 15 miles per hour. The law also made it an offense for a chauffeur or any other person to use a car without the consent of the owner.

Reliability Cup Established.

In June, 1907, James Hagerman Jr. donated a silver cup to the club, to be competed for in a reliability tour over the county roads. This established the Owners' Reliability Tour, which has been an annual event, and one of the most important factors in the good roads movement. The reliability tour has done much to educate not only the public, but the drivers as well on the proper use of the motor car, and to demonstrate the possibilities of the automobile as a vehicle of utility.

In 1911, the Automobile Club of St. Louis framed and worked for the passage of a bill, making it an offense for the driver of an automobile to leave the scene of an accident, without giving aid to the injured and his name and address to the police. This bill was passed and the club aided the authorities in enforcing it in every way possible, giving rewards for the arrest and conviction of such violators. This has done much to eliminate "joy riding," careless and reckless driving.

The club worked for and aided in securing the city ordinance regulating the traffic. This has relieved the conditions in the congested districts and has lessened the number of accidents.

In 1912 the club framed and worked for the passage of a bill making it a misdemeanor for a person to take or tamper with a motor vehicle without the consent of the owner and carrying with it a penalty by fine or imprisonment, or both, not to exceed $500 nor six months in prison. In case where the offender is a chauffeur, the State Secretary is to be notified, and he shall revoke the license, which will not be renewable for two years. This bill was passed and is now in force. Recently the club aided in the prosecution of four offenders and secured convictions.

The club inaugurated the system of oiling the roads and each year bears a percentage of the cost of oiling the public highways surrounding St. Louis. Through the combined efforts of the club and the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, and the two similar organizations of Kansas City, the State Highway was made possible. They financed the plan and furnished the automobiles for the inspection tour.

STUTZ CARS WIN SEVEN TROPHY EVENTS IN ROW

Earl Cooper Captures Two Contests in One Day at Carona Meet.

Earl Cooper carved motor car history when he drove his Stutz car first under the wire on Sept. 9 at Carona, Cal., winning two events, the 301-450 class and the free-for-all.

His average for the 250 miles of the 301-450 class, 75.3 miles per hour, established a new world's record for that class cars, and was the sixth consecutive victory for Stutz cars this year. Not being satisfied with that, Cooper finished first in the free-for-all, chalking up the seventh marker. This record of seven consecutive road race victories has never before been equaled in the history of motor car racing.

In these seven races, totaling 1847.26 miles of service at an average 70-miles-an-hour clip, the performance of the Stutz has been one of the most consistent ever seen on American tracks.

Cooper had the honor of starting the series when he pulled down the Potlach trophy at Tacoma, July 5, averaging 71.07 miles for the 139.5 miles of the course. Parsons, another Stutz driver, won the Inter-City trophy for 102.18 miles at Tacoma on the same day. Cooper drove again to victory in the 250 miles of the Montamarathon at Tacoma two days later. On Aug. 9 he drove a close race at Santa Monica, traveling 445.3 miles in 6 hours 1 minute and 52 seconds. Then on Aug. 30, Gil Anderson won the National trophy for 301 miles at Elgin, Ill., breaking the track record for that course, averaging 71.4 miles per hour. So, when Cooper this month took the two Carona trophies, all previous racing records were eclipsed.

TRAINLOAD OF CHALMERS 1914 MODELS SHIPPED

First Consignment Goes to Iowa Where Good Crops Stimulate Buying.

The Chalmers Motor Co. last week made its largest shipment of 1914 cars of the new season. Fifty model 19s were shipped in one train load, consisting of 27 50-foot automobile cars from the factory at Detroit to Lattner Bros., Chalmers dealers at Cedar Rapids, Io.

Crop conditions in that section of the country are unusually good and dealers predict a record-breaking Chalmers year. On the day following the Iowa shipment, 49 model 19s were shipped to Chicago and 19 to Sioux City, Ia.

Model 19, while retaining all of the features of the 1913 "Thirty-six," has many material improvements in design. The lines are unusually graceful with the full flush sides, bell-backed tonneau and molded oval fenders. The fenders are entirely new in design and in addition to their pleasing appearance, they afford greater protection from the mud and dust.

The gasoline tank and tire irons have been suspended in the rear and the battery and tool boxes placed under the front seat, leaving the running board absolutely clear.

Gasoline is fed to the carburetor by a positive pressure system operated by an automatic pressure pump. The gasoline tank is equipped with a gauge which indicates at all times the exact amount of gasoline in the 25-gallon tank.

SIX TONS PER TRIP WITH TWO-TON TRUCK

Construction Company Discovers Way to Treble Work of Small Vehicle.

Truck users all over the country will be interested in the ingenuity and effectiveness of a plan by which one concern has solved the problem of increasing the capacity of commercial cars without overloading.

In building a section of the St. Louis sewerage system, the Prendergast Construction Co. used a two-ton Dorris truck for its hauling, including all the material for the cement work. But not content with a two-ton load, after the truck is loaded to capacity they erected on a big dump wagon carrying 7000 pounds, and the truck towed this in addition to carrying its own load.

This gives nearly six tons per load, more than the carrying capacity of a five-ton truck which would cost twice as much to buy and four times as much to run.

A regular Dorris two-ton truck is used for this work. It has been on the job regularly since last June and runs every day, rain or shine, from 7 a. m. to noon, and from 12:30 to 5:30 p. m.

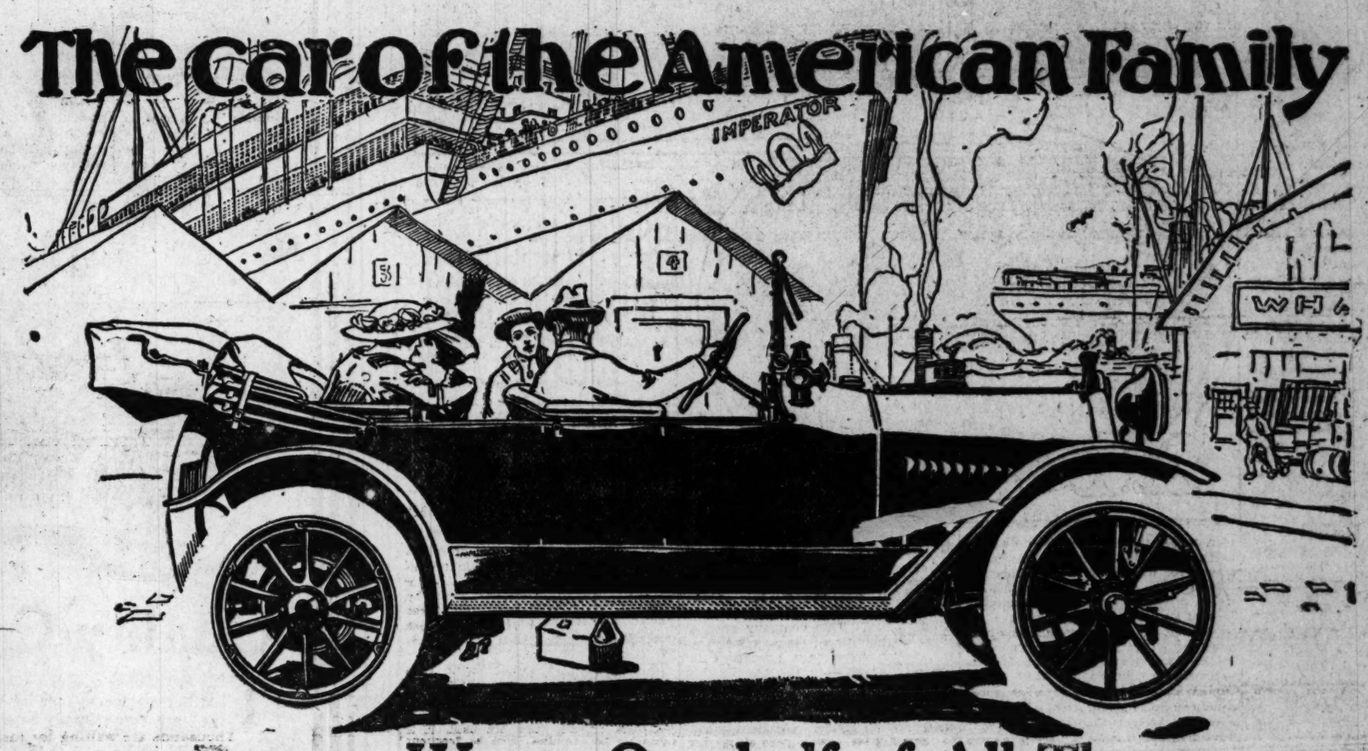
The Car of the American Family



Europe Wants One-half of All These 1914 Hupmobiles

Can you conceive a higher tribute to this new Hupmobile than the fact that Europe puts in its claim for one-half the total 1914 output?

Such a signal endorsement has come to no other American car, for the Hupmobile has not won its laurels on the score of price.

Its loyal following in our own land is not as you know a price following—but a preference based on the conviction that it is the best car of its class in the world.

The new Hupmobile is polished, and refined, and strengthened and beautified to a point that surpasses every previous standard.

It has earned its conquest of the old and the new world—it has justified its right to be compared to the costliest large cars as "a perfect small diamond compares to a large one."

Why Europe Places the Hupmobile in a Special, Trusted Class

Foreign buyers of American cars are the most critical purchasers in the world. They have been taught to distrust American shop practice, which too often seeks quantity at the cost of quality. But European buyers of Hupmobiles attest, by their loyalty to this car, their absolute confidence in the methods we employ.

Hupmobile Standards Are Continental Standards as Well

Undoubtedly the first appeal of the Hupmobile to the shrewd Continental buyer, was based upon his prompt recognition of constructive features of the highest class. He noted with approval the long-stroke, small-bore motor with cylinders cast en bloc, and having enclosed valves—a type we introduced to the American market two years ago.

Features Never Before Shown at Anything Near Our Price

The use of a full-floating rear axle in the Hupmobile was a pleasurable surprise to the British buyer. He found in keeping with its quality our unit power plant with multiple disc clutch; three-bearing crank shaft, hollowed for circulation of oil; and chain drive for magneto and cam shaft.

Increased Value in Hupmobile Equipment

Neither in Europe or America is there a car at anything near the Hupmobile's price which is so thoroughly modern in its appointments. The 1914 Hupmobile at $1200 has over-size tires—33 x 4-inch with demountable rims, one extra rim and rear tire carrier; and electric horn beneath hood, actuated from steering wheel.

The 1914 Hupmobile Has Been Given More Headroom

A feature of more than minor comfort is the high, roomy top which distinguishes the 1914 Hupmobile. This has been attained without any straining of the Hupmobile's originally fine proportions, so that its passengers are given greater ease, without any detraction from the Hupmobile's individuality of form.

The Three-Unit Electrical System is Both Safe and Logical

The English buyer, who always puts safety first, will be quick to see the value of the Hupmobile's three-unit electrical system which individualizes the operations of starting, igniting and lighting. Possible trouble in one unit cannot cripple the other two vitally important functions of this system, whose logic is beyond argument.

Hupmobile Wiring Preserves Only the Real Essentials

Users of Hupmobiles abroad will be favorably impressed by the fact that their entire electrical installation has only seven wiring connections. These are all in flexible metal conduits, which afford complete protection against any sort of adverse conditions, and furnish a safeguard that is not duplicated even in cars of special class.

What Europe Demands in the Motor Cars It Buys

Foreign buyers have an x-ray fashion of looking right through the externals and to the heart of a car. They demand the painstaking craftsmanship of the highly skilled artisan. They see in the Hupmobile a marked individuality which is the natural outgrowth of the internal excellence of its construction.

Foreign Buyers Actually Pay a Premium for Hupmobiles

It costs a foreign buyer $200 to $400 more to own a Hupmobile than it does the more fortunate American owner. The only reason in the world why the European buyer will do this is because he firmly believes—as we do—that the Hupmobile is the best car of its class in the world.

The Buyer Abroad Compares the Hupmobile with Much Costlier Cars

The English buyer finds in the Hupmobile one specific instance after another of the type of construction that distinguishes the highest class of European-built cars. He knows good work and is delighted to find in the Hupmobile a quality that in an English car would demand a price which could be met only by the longest purse.

The Beauty of Hupmobile Lines Was Instantly Recognized Abroad

Much has been said of the beauty shown by streamline construction. Europe—as well as America—quickly saw in the Hupmobile's lines the very essence of that grace. Its pressed steel body—built by the producers of Pullman palace cars—has no sharp corners, but easy, graceful, sweeping lines, embracing the hood and radiator.

"The Car of the American Family" is Also the European Family Car

It is really remarkable that the automobile that is especially the car of the American family has been adopted in its entirety as the car of the European family. No greater tribute can be offered to the Hupmobile than this instant acceptance of its design, which proves beyond question the universality of its appeal.

AMERICAN TRUCKS ARE EXPORTED IN GROWING NUMBERS

Foreign Business, Promising to Manufacturers, Especially in South America.

Special attention has been directed to the export of American-made commercial motor vehicles by the recent Government report, which showed that 84 valued at $134,777, had been exported during April of this year and 737, valued a $1,333,367, had been exported during t 10 months ending with April. It is on since July 1, 1912, that the Governme has kept a separate record of commercial motor vehicles. Previous to that time they had only been recorded with pleasure cars.

While these figures show that the export business of American motor truck manufacturers is very small in comparison with the total export of motor vehicles from this country, they indicate that the former has already secured a strong foothold in foreign countries and the next few years will unquestionably show as rapid an increase in their use in other countries as has been the case with the American-made pleasure car in the past few years.

Several large American manufacturers have invaded the foreign field. Robert M. Barker of the Chase Motor Truck Co. of Syracuse, in talking of the export business, says:

"The American motor truck is now being used in every corner of the world. One day last week we received orders by cable and mail from Hongkong, China; Melbourne, Australia; Auckland, New Zealand; Barranquilla, United States of Colombia, and from Havana, Cuba. The Hongkong order was for a 500-pound wagon. It was sent by an American missionary, the Rev. J. M. Monnier, whose title is Imprinierie de Nazareth. He said he wanted this motor wagon for use on his trips, which last two or three weeks, and on which he had occasion to carry medical supplies as well as a complete camping outfit.

"Our Mr. D. R. Linsley, who has been gone some time on a trip to the West Indies, Central and South America, reports that conditions are ideal in the tropics for an extensive introduction of American-made motor trucks. English, French and German manufacturers have been established for some time in these countries, but the American maker has an advantage over them in the matter of price and in the matter of simplicity in design and construction."

A MOTOR FIRE FIGHTER

One of the most important exhibits at the convention of Fire Chiefs in New York was the display of the American-LaFrance Engine Co. of Elmira, N. Y. This company showed three of their finest pieces of apparatus, which have been purchased by the city of Buffalo for the Buffalo Fire Department.

The American-LaFrance apparatus was equipped with Goodrich wireless tires for motor fire apparatus, and the display was given great attention by all the visitors.

AUTO EXPECTED TO HELP REDUCE COST OF LIVING IN CITY

Farmers Will Be Enabled to Market Produce Which Has Been a Dead Loss.

The most interesting feature of this fast approaching era of improved roads and the commercial motor, is their certain effect in the cheapening of the cost of farm produce to dwellers in the cities.

Delays and cost of transportation have prevented the farmer living some distance from a distributing point, from marketing his produce profitably. With soft roads and horse-drawn wagons, five miles is the average limit beyond which the green goods of a city's supply cannot be drawn.

With good roads and mechanical transportation all the country within 30 miles or more is available for truck gardens. Fruit and vegetables can be profitably produced over a territory many times larger than when hauled by horses.

"An illustration of how firmly mechanical transportation has become established in this country," says C. W Martin of the Goodyear Truck Tire Department, " is given in the action taken recently by a motor truck club in the West. The club intends to compete with the railroads by operating a fleet of motor trucks. With commercial vehicles it is estimated that better service can be given at a minimum cost.

"Better roads and commercial motors will within the next few years make a great improvement in conditions, for they will cut down the average cost of hauling farm produce to less than half of what it is today."

WORLD NON-STOP RECORD CAR TO BE ON EXHIBIT

One of the many interesting and novel exhibits to be displayed at the Automobile Show this week will be the Packard "38" that made the world's official non-stop record before the Automobile Club of America in New York last spring.

This car will be shown in the exhibit of the Halsey Automobile Co., the local Packard distributers. It has on it the original seals unbroken. The run was made for 300 hours, which more than doubles the previous record of 132 hours, made in England four years ago. In that particular test five stops were made extending over a period of 116 minutes.

The Packard motor maintained a constant speed of 1200 R. P. H., which measured in road performance, would be equal to pulling a "38" car with a full load 37½ miles per hour over roads heavy enough to demand a wide open throttle. In the 300 hours it would have rolled up 11,238 miles, which would be compressing within an unbroken period of 12 days and 12 nights the average season's mileage.

NEW LOCOMOBILE IS BUILT ALONG ARTISTIC LINES

Effort to Gain Beauty Attained by Preserving Contour Unbroken.

The "little six" right drive Locomobile has reached the salesrooms at 3933 Locust street. "Our policy for this year," said Branch Manager Ellwood, "is to produce both left drive and right drive cars, because of the fact that there is a demand for both types. It is all a matter of taste, some prefering left drive and others right drive."

A particular advancement for this year is made in placing the tire holder at the rear of the car with the object of securing better balance, and eliminating the possibility of undue stress upon the springs at either side. This arrangement, furthermore, aids in the straight line effect and general neatness in appearance of the car.

Improvements have been made to the end of creating greater beauty, luxury and comfort than in previous models without rendering them conspicuous.

The lamps, top and side curtains, for instance, have been given attention by the designers. Lamps of the octagonal type of design harmonize with the decorative scheme of the side. These are placed close to the body contours.

Fenders are rounded from side to side, made without visible rivets, and follow the general lines of the body, which is free from projecting hinges or door handles.

Economy in fuel consumption is secured in the new type of carburetor which is supplied with an adjustment directly under the steering wheel for regulating the richness of mixtures to meet all conditions of driving.

The models are equipped with the Locomobile electric motor starter which, after more than a year of service, is retained. Illumination is by electricity throughout.

Other features are the luxurious 28-inch upholstery, a specially designed air compressor for inflating the tires, the rain vision wind shield, quick detachable tires, the new swinging robe rail that gives ample room for coats, robes and blankets, pockets on all doors and in both front seat quarters, folding foot rests, cocoa fiber floor coverings, and An extension lamp of such size that it may be inserted in the parts of the cylinders.

Pig Substitutes for a Dog.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Ned Faulkner, an old-age pensioner, aged 82, who has to walk three miles every Friday into Aymestrey to draw his pension, is always accompanied by a pig, which follows him like a dog and lies down outside the postoffice while the man transacts his business.

HOW TO ESTIMATE COST OF HAULAGE TOLD BY EXPERT

Many Small Items Go to Make Up Difference Between Trucks and Horses.

"When the efficiency experts attack the haulage question," states R. E. Paris manager of sales of the Reo Motor Truck Co., "there will be just as big surprises as were produced when the 'bricklayer investigation' was published. Few manufacturers or sellers have attempted to standardize their delivery problem, or to compute the cost.

"We have always found this so; and have made many sales as a result of getting down to brass tacks, working out the individual problems and showing how money could be saved. Scores of firms have been simply amazed to learn how much their transportation was actually costing them.

"The reason why truck haulage in most instances is so much cheaper than horse keep is that there are a score of small savings that only a scientific investigation reveals. For instance, a five-ton truck—which actually does the work of five and one-half teams—is housed in a garage say 20 feet square. Ten horses occupy five times the amount of space for stalls, and ten times that space for feed. In other words, interest must be paid upon a housing equipment 15 times as great as where a single truck is used.

"Pay of drivers is another deceptive item. One truck with two men can do the labor of five teams—but not of ten men, since loading must be fixed item. In points like these the factory or sales department expert can give valuable information. Then again the amortization (setting aside each year of a sum sufficient to replace the truck or trucks at the end of their usefulness) is something that it requires experience to gauge accurately, since the life of a truck depends largely upon the character of the service it must perform.

"The deadly parallel that results when we line up horse charges against truck charges item for item—total investment, average per trip, depreciation, amortization, secondhand values, fuel against feed, and so on down the list, is the clinching argument.

FIRE CAUSES AUTO HORN TO BLOW, SAVING GARAGE

Sounding of Alarm Automatically Follows When Insulation Is Burned Off.

An electric automobile klaxon horn, serving as an automatic fire alarm, was responsible for the saving of the car to which it was attached, another machine, a $6000 Peerless car, and the garage at the Letchwarth summer home, Glenwood Beach, on Owasco Lake, from destruction by fire. Through the sounding of the alarm by the klaxon, the fire was discovered in its incipiency and extinguished before it reached proportions beyond control.

Dr. M. Clinton of Buffalo drove to Glenwood Beach from Bison City. Upon arrival there he placed the car in the garage at Glenwood and an hour later, while at dinner Dr. Clinton and others at the table were startled by hearing the horn blowing loudly. For a few minutes no particular attention was paid to the sounding of the horn, as the people in the house believed that some of the boys about the place were at the garage pressing the horn button.

The horn continued to sound its alarm clamorously, however, and Dr. Clinton went to the garage to find the car in flames. He alarmed other people about the place and with buckets of water the blaze was extinguished before any great damage resulted. It is believed that the fire burned the insulation from the wiring connected with the horn, causing it to blow.

EXCITING FOUR-DAY RUN The spectacular finish of the four-day reliability run, promoted each year by a newspaper of Seattle, tested to the limit the endurance of man, car and tire. The drivers seemed to log the first two days and their endeavor to finish within the time limit turned the run into a gruelling road race. They tore over the 423 miles of Washington's rutty roads and hills until some of the drivers were so shaken and battered that they could barely complete the run. One car crashed down a steep embankment and only luck saved the lives of the occupants. The strain on the tires was terrific and many drivers changed tires eight or 10 times. Ten different makes of tires were represented in the race, but Firestone was the only one out of the 10 to return with a perfect score. Six of the cars were equipped with Firestone tires, which made their endurance record noteworthy.

Tire Taxes

Which We Pay for You in No-Rim-Cut Tires

No Other Maker Does It

The cost of tire upkeep lies mainly in these three shortcomings:

Rim-Cutting—Blow-Outs—Loose Treads.

We spend fortunes each year—spent by no other maker—to minimize these costs.

We save tire users in these ways many millions of dollars. And Goodyear tires, on this account, outsell any other.

Note now how we do it.

The Rim-Cut Tax

Our No-Rim-Cut tire ends rim-cutting completely, and we control the way.

The method we use—the only feasible method—is protected by secrecy.

The rim-cutting tax is enormous.

Careful statistics, made by public accountants, prove that rim-cutting ruins almost one clincher tire in three.

We wipe out all that tax.

The Blow-Out Tax

Most blow-outs are caused by wrinkled fabric, shirking its part of the strain.

The wrinkles are caused by curing, under fierce compression, on an iron core. All tires save Goodyears are cured on iron cores alone.

No-Rim-Cut tires are final-cured on air bags, shaped like inner tubes. They are vulcanized on elastic air, as you use them.

Thus the fabric adapts itself to actual road conditions. Wrinkles are stretched out. Every inch of every layer does its share of duty.

We add to our tire cost $1,500 daily to thus save blow-outs for you.

Loose Tread Tax

Tread separation usually occurs close to the breaker strip—an essential fabric used at the base of the tread in all standard tires.

We use a patented fabric, woven with hundreds of quarter-inch holes. The tread rubber, in its plastic state, is forced down through these holes. Then the tire is vulcanized en masse.

We paid $50,000 for rights to this method, and no other maker employs it.

We Pay It All

All this extra expense is to save you expense—save you many times what it costs us.

At one time—on this account—No-Rim-Cut tires cost one-fifth more than others.

But multiplied output has cut cost of production until it balanced this extra cost.

Now no standard tire of any type costs less than No-Rim-Cut tires.

So you get these savings, without a penny of tax, by simply insisting on Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

Read the facts again and judge if you want them. If so, bear in mind that no other tire gives them. Our dealers are everywhere.

GOBI DESERT LAMA IS PROUD OWNER OF 'DEVIL WAGON'

Ford Automobile Finally Reaches Thibetan Priest After 700-Mile Journey.

Under the title, "The Lama's Motor Car," Ethan E. Le Munyon, in a recent number of the National Geographic Magazine, tells of the delivery of a Ford Model T car in the heart of the Gobi desert in Mongolia.

The purchaser of the car was the "Tasha Lama," ranking next in the Buddhist religion to the "Dalai Lama" of Thibet. The Lama lives in the city of Urga, only recently opened to white men.

The Lama heard of "the devil wagons" of the whites which traveled without help and determined to have one. His representatives visited Teintsin, China, to open negotiations for a car. The difficulty of delivering the car and of having it maintained afterward frightened off a number of dealers, but the Ford representatives decided to take a chance and agreed to deliver the car.

Gasoline was shipped ahead by bullock carts, the only means of travel in the Gobi district, and careful preparations were made for getting the car into the almost inaccessible country. The car was a regular stock Model T, with a covered body. The car was shipped by rail to the end of the Pekin railway at Kalgan and from there proceeded into the mountainous desert. A portion of the trip was made under the car's own power, but a scarcity of gasoline led to resorting to a bullock tow. The ground was so broken that the tires were removed at one point and the rims protected with repeated wrappings of matting.

When near Urga, the car, which was in a horrible looking condition from tipping over in mudholes, was washed up clean, the tires put back in place and under its own power it proceeded into the sacred city, having traveled more than 700 miles over the desert, a great portion of the time on roads where continuous use for centuries has worn ruts 18 inches deep.

The Lama was much interested in his car and one of his aides was able to run it with but little instruction, the car being so absolutely "fool proof."

Outside of the two racers which which crossed China in the Paris-Pekin race, this was the first car to be seen in the Gobi desert and it is the only closed car that ever negotiated the desert. Despite the roughness of the road, only minor adjustments were necessary before the car was turned over to the Lama after its hard trip through the desert country.

TO BUILD A TOWN CAR Announcing two types of Marion closed cars, a four-passenger coupe and a five-passenger sedan, the Marion Motor Car Co. last week made known to its local agents, the Lewis Automobile Co., its intention to enter the town car field this fall. These two types of bodies are mounted on either the four or six-cylinder chassis, thereby adding practically four new models to the Marion line.

NEW HAYNES CONTROLLED WHOLLY BY ELECTRICITY

Series of Push Buttons Relieves Driver of All Work of Shifting Gears.

The electric gear shift, operated in connection with the Haynes electric lighting and starting system, makes the Haynes completely controlled by electricity.

No hand gear lever is used in the new models. In the place of the hand shifter, is a neat, small dial of push buttons on the steering wheel. There are seven of these buttons, whose functions are as follows:

Buttons Nos. 1, 2 and 3 control the three speeds forward; low, intermediate and high. The reverse button is marked R, neutral N, while starter and horn are marked S and H, respectively.

The operation of the electric gear shift is extremely easy. The switch of push buttons is arranged with a mechanical interlock so that one button only may remain in position at a time. These buttons control the operation of a set of electroc-magnets, or solenoids as they are more commonly called in this connection. There is one solenoid for each speed forward and reverse. To the clutch pedal is connected a mechanical switch which completes the circhanical switch which completes the circuit to the battery for energizing the solenoids or electro-magnets.

When the driver has selected the desired speed through his push button switch on the steering wheel the clutch pedal is pushed all the way down, fully releasing the clutch, drawing the gears from their previous position to neutral, engaging the mechanical switch, closing the electric circuit to the storage battery, energizing the solenoid selected by the push button and drawing the gear to position instantly with a pull of 150, a far more powerful pull than is possible to driver, throwing the gears by hand. The clutch is then engaged in the ordinary manner by the pedal. When another speed is desired, the shift is made instantly and the clutch is re-engaged as in customary practice.

With the electric gear shaft, the driver can anticipate or select any gear change that he desires. For example, if the car is going up a steep grade on high gear that may necessitate the dropping into second gear before the top of the grade is reached, the driver can press button No. 2 at any time and when the car has slackened speed so that the motor is about to labor, the driver can throw the clutch lever to the limit, let it in again, and the car will immediately be running in second speed.

Pushing down the neutral button clears the switchboard but not until the driver throws out the clutch to the limit. By pushing the clutch lever forward to a limited degree, the clutch can be slipped in the usual manner without in any way affecting the gear shift. When the clutch has been pushed about halfway out this brings any gear that is being used into a neutral position and pushing the clutch pedal to the extreme limit makes the gear shift into any other gear ratio that has been chosen by the pressure of a button on the controlling switch.

For emergency use, a hand gear shift lever is provided, the same as a crank is provided for use in emergency in connection with any make of electric starter. This emergency gear shift lever can be quickly attached in case of need, but in all probability it will not be needed.

NEW PROCESS TIRE RUBBER REDUCES COST OF UPKEEP

Diamond Manufacturers Report Unusual Sales of Their Latest Invention.

For some inexplicable reason the average American citizen balks at paying physicians' bills and upkeep expense for his automobile. The physician must live and is worthy of his hire, although this is disputed by new thought devotees and notables like Fra Elbertus Hubbard.

The owner of an automobile must necessarily spend a certain amount for upkeep each season. One of the important items of expense is the tire, and tire makers have never been able to build a tire that would last as long as the automobile, so replacements must be expected.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent each year for tire upkeep alone and the motorist is constantly confronted with the problem: "What tire is the easiest riding and will give me the most mileage for my money?"

The selection of a tire is important. Upon it depends the peace of mind and comfort of the user, as well as the amount of money spent for tire upkeep. Local Manager Staley of Diamond tires stated:

"All leading tire builders have labored incessantly to produce an automobile tire that would give the user the best service for the least money. They knew the day would come when the motorist would demand 'more mileage.'

"The result was that at the opening of the automobile season we were able to announce the discovery of vitalized rubber.

"Motorists everywhere quickly adopted the vitalized rubber tire, and for the past three months we have not been able to fill all orders promptly.

"One of the most common tire abuses in city motoring is the sudden stopping of the car. As a rule, the motorist instead of stopping slowly will keep on full speed and then clap on his brakes. The brakes should be inspected as regularly and as carefully as any other part of the automobile. They often get out of line, and an uneven brake pressure is very expensive.

"When the brakes are uneven it often happens that one wheel gets all the pressure and leaves the other wheel free. The result is that the tread on the tire that is compelled to stand the entire pressure from the brake grinds off, peels and is naturally short lived. A little extra care on the part of the owner of the car to see that his brakes are properly set will often result in a big saving in tire expense."

MILLION OWNERS OF AUTOS BOOST FOR GOOD ROADS

Army of Enthusiasts Exercise Big Influence, Thinks Regal Sales Manager.

That the automobile is exercising a mighty political influence in the interests of good roads in all parts of the United States today is the opinion of F. L. Pierce of the Regal Motor Car Co.

"In January, 1912, there were 1,000,000 automobiles in actual service in the United States. Everyone of these 1,000,000 car owners is an enthusiast for good roads," said Pierce. "No matter how efficient, durable, easy-riding an automobile is, the fullness of motor car pleasure cannot be obtained unless the roads traveled are in good condition. The minute a man purchases a car, that same minute does he become a propagandist of the good roads idea.

"It can be estimated that there are an average of two voters in every family possessing an automobile. That means 2,000,000 voters in the United States pledged to fight in their respective territories for good roads. And the activity shown at present in all parts of the country for serviceable highways indicates that the automobile has driven these 2,000,000 men on to the firing line.

"To this army may be added the thousands of men whose livelihood is vitally linked with the manufacture and sale of motor cars.

"These men have been and are aggressive in the battle for good roads because of its importance to the growth and development of the industry.

"The records of the automobile business show today that the farmer is the big purchaser of cars. They have, in many states, forced the candidates for county and states offices to pledge themselves to road improvements before giving their support to their political contests.

"Looking farther into the good roads army, there are the small town merchants. These number into the hundreds of thousands. Their trade is a farm trade. The farmers are traveling via the automobile. Their purchases are more frequent, necessarily, when the roads are good. Therefore, in the interest of their business, these merchants are allied with the good roads forces."

NEW MODEL MARMON FOLLOWS FORMER LINES

A new note in the trend of the automobile business is sounded in the announcement of Nordyke & Marmon Co of Indianapolis for their 1914 Marmon cars. The manufacturers have considered the season model idea very carefully in the past few seasons and it is the impression of this company that the main idea of the season model is to assure the buyer of the fact that no sudden change of design is contemplated during the ensuing season.

The 1914 Marmon cars, which were announced a short time ago, do not differ in general appearance from the cars produced during the last season and in this connection H. H. Rice, sales manager of Nordyke & Marmon Co., says:

"While the motoring public seems to demand a yearly announcement from the manufacturer, we do not believe it is necessary to make radical changes in body lines and mechanical details merely to answer this demand. We believe the buyer would much prefer to see a car with every feature proved practically by years of service if he could be assured of one fact—that this car would be up to every requirement in a mechanical way as well as in appearance.

"It would be folly for us to try to substitute anything for them merely to please those who desire a change."

NEW and ODD THINGS in SCIENCE

Top Proves World Revolves in 24 Hours

FROM spinning tops we can learn many interesting and valuable things; for example, we can prove that the earth revolves on its axis and calculate at what speed.

The phenomena of spinning bodies are extremely interesting. If you throw your hat into the air, but without spinning it it will fall, perhaps, on one side, perhaps on the other, but if you give it a spinning motion before sending it into the air it will always come down the same side down as it went up. The same thing is true of coins, and in fact of all objects spun in this manner. A knife, if merely thrown into the air, may come down at any angle, but if held point down and sent spinning into the air it will, on falling, stick its point into the floor invariably.

Other bodies acquire rigidity when spun rapidly. Thus, a piece of chain if placed on a wheel and made to revolve rapidly, will form a perfect circle, and, if thrown off the wheel suddenly, will roll across the table or the floor just like a solid hoop, until its speed is diminished when it will fall into a huddled mass.

It is a strange fact that spinning bodies always tend to point to the North Star the Pole Star. Gently but firmly, they seem to tug at their moorings in an effort to assume the angle that will point them in that direction. Once they have attained it they do not vary.

If, now, you want to prove the rotation of the earth by means of a spinning top, you can do as follows: Provide yourself with a gyrostat capable of being driven by electricity so that it can run for 24 hours or more without stopping. Set this going and point it to the North or Pole Star (it will soon assume that direction). Now, as the axis of the top is pointed in a certain direction (say the north wall of the room) and stays there, without even moving, this will be a guide to you to check off your observations. And as you watch you will notice that in six hours' time the top will point to the west, and six hours later to the south, six hours later to the east, and at the conclusion of the 24 hours it will have completed the circle and will again be pointing due north. It will have completed the circuit of the four walls of the room.

What does this mean? It means that the room has revolved round the top; but as the room is fixed to the solid earth it implies that the whole earth has revolved round the top, which alone remained stationary. Consequently, we have proved by this means that the earth has turned once round on its axis, and that it does so turn, and that the heavens remain still and stationary.

Many interesting astronomical discoveries have been made by the aid of spinning tops, and the facts obtained by their study have been applied to the rotation of heavenly bodies, the earth included, and the "wabble" of its axis has been calculated by this means. In many ways therefore, the spinning top is a valuable scientific instrument.

Electrical Operations

PROF. F. NAGELSCHMIDT, the inventor of the "diathermy treatment," performed two operations with the diathermic apparatus installed at the London Hospital. The treatment is used both in medicine and in surgery. The medicinal treatment consists of passing electric rays of a very high temperature through the diseased part. In the surgical form the current reaches the tissues from the edge of a knife-like applicator and acts as a bloodless cautery. In two minutes the professor removed a large blood tumor on the inside of the cheek, inoperable by ordinary methods on account of the possible fatal loss of blood which might have followed. The second operation was the removal of an extensive lupus patch (a chronic form of tuberculosis of the skin), which under the ordinary methods of tratment would have taken many months to cure. Prof. Nagelschmidt has also discovered a new electric current which, when applied to a new patient, causes rhythmical muscular contractions, extremely intense but quite painless. Since the result of such muscular contractions is the immediate using up of all the spare fat in the tissues. Prof. Nagelschmidt has used the current as the basis of a scientific treatment for the reduction of obesity. Forty patients have been subjected to this new treatment. "Between them," Prof. Nagelschmidt concluded, "they have been deprived of a total of 500 pounds of unwanted fat."

DIET TO CORRECT FUNCTIONAL DISORDER

DR. JOHN M. BELL of St. Joseph, Mo., contributes to the Journal of the Missouri State Medical Association a paper read by him before the State association on diet to correct habitual constipation. The following valuable suggestions are taken from this eminently sane and informing article:

"The keynote of diet for habitual constipation is the selection of foodstuffs containing a large amount of cellulose—woody fiber, which does not digest, but reaches the colon as cellulose—and those foodstuffs which leave distinct bulk of residue, so as to gently stimulate weakened muscles and blunted nerve reflexes. And they must be eaten in abundance, for constipation exists frequently as the result of a too abstemious diet. Consequently, those foods which are capable of complete digestion and leave little or no residue, such as rice, mashed potatoes, white bread and tender meats, must be used very sparingly. Some discrimination must be exercised even with coarse vegetables; and those essentially flatulent—boiled cabbage and cauliflower—must be excluded. Cabbage, raw, in the shape of cold slaw, may be used; being largely indigestible, its food value is diminished, but the cellulose content furnishes peristaltic stimulation. Bran in some form is to be used every day, either dry with cream and sugar as a breakfast food, or made into muffins, or made into bread. If it is not well tolerated, pumpernickle may be substituted, preferably a day or two old; it must be well chewed. Fletcherism is not advocated, since the degree of mental concentration involved is apt to act perniciously, especially with the neurotic. To complete the breakfast, an egg may be added, with fried potatoes and fruit, preferably fibrous figs, dates, raisins.

"If there be a neurosis or hyperchlorhydria, coffee is cut off indefinitely, and no fluid but cold water is permitted. The midday meal is made up of vegetables, nutritious, yet containing as much cellulose as possible—peas, beans, corn, turnips, parsnips, with whole wheat bread and fresh greens; if in season, lettuce, spinach, celery and cold slaw. Fruit is preferable for dessert, to pastry or pudding. Juicy fruit, or fruit salads are allowed. The diet list must be liberal, otherwise appetite fails and the desired result is lost because of lack of bulk. For the evening meal, fruit alone is most effectual, unless the patient be a mechanical artisan, or a laborer, in which case the noonday list may be repeated. An evening meal of an orange or two, with apples, figs, dates, raisins and fruit salad is satisfying to the appetite and body, and aids peristalsis materially. A whole wheat or bran muffin may be added; also cold slaw or lettuce. The general objection of insufficient caloric value is without foundation in my experience, for this very outline is followed in my practice with excellent results. Calories may be increased by means of added butter and cream. The albuminous content may be well maintained by increasing the whole wheat, peas, beans and corn. The only possible objection to be made is the lack of stimulation suffered by abstinence from animal food. This is not complained of for a week or two, in most cases. When it is so, animal food may be added to the midday meal. The caloric value is not as much below par as might be imagined, when we realize that a large ripe orange or a large ripe banana contains as many calories of easily digested fruit-sugar as does an average slice of bread. Another objection offered is the frequency of dilated stomach from the bulk of the meal. I fail to find it in my cases.

"Liberal meat eaters sometimes complain of being starved, but the impression is largely mental, for they lose no weight or strength. After a period of from one to two weeks, when the coated tongue and malaise have disappeared, when headache and dizziness have gone, when clear mental and physical vigor return, the diet list is made more liberal. Eggs are permitted once or twice daily, meat every day or every other day at dinner, except in those cases in which the abstinence is not noted; for there are those who do as well indefinitely on a milk and vegetable diet, who indulge in animal food only on state occasions. This applies especially to indoor people—clerks, stenographers, teachers and those who do no physical labor. The remark is frequently heard: 'I shall eat no more meat,' or, 'I feel better without animal food.'

"For most people the ideal diet is a mixed one: 20 to 30 per cent protein, 4 to 6 per cent fat, 70 to 80 per cent carbohydrate. When peristalisis becomes normal, this standard is to be approached as nearly as the daily life of the patient will permit. Those foods which digest completely and leave no residue, are to be reduced to a minimum, while those containing a large percentage of cellulose, must be insisted on in proportion to the muscular shortcomings of the colon."

PRUSSIA TO SELL POWER

A LAW has been enacted in Prussia to provide a sum of about $20,000,000 for the development of hydro-electric power by the State from existing reservoirs built by the Government in connection with the Rhine-Hanover Canal at Helminghausen, on the River Diemel. It is proposed, further, to connect the plants to be erected at these points with a third station at Munden, on the Rivers Fulda and Werra. All the rivers form tributaries of the Weser. The reservoir at Hemfurt has a capacity of 1975 million gallons, with a head of 135 feet, while in the case of the one at Helminghausen the capacity is 194,000,000 gallons, with a head of 114 feet. The total capacity of these stations will amount to 41,000,000 kilowatts, or, with an allowance for variations in the water supply, to 29,000,000 kilowatts a year. The sale of the current at these points will be carried out by the State, but private consumers will obtain their supplies mainly from municipalities and companies who purchase in bulk. The area to be served by the State includes 13 counties in Prussia and three in Waldeck, having a total of 2500 square miles and a population of 600,000. The current will be distributed to 15 points in this area by a 40,000 volt system about 215 miles long, and at each point there will be a transforming plant to reduce the voltage to 6000.

Toeing in Will Prevent Flat Foot

DR. JACOB TESCHNER who has been treating flat foot for 20 years, told the New York County Medical Society that he had never allowed a patient of his to use an arch support. He called the hitherto accepted treatment, with the support, unphysiological and pernicious, for what the foot needed was not artificial support but exercise. Here is description of the proper shoe:

"The shoe that should be ordered is one that will permit absolute freedom of ankle and toe action and should fit close in the arch and heel. The width of sole must be sufficient to permit the entire weight bearing foot to rest upon the sole. The broad part of the inner side of the sole must be extended sufficiently backward to permit the entire ball of the foot to rest upon it and the arch of the shoe must be short. Any support which may give temporary relief is vicious because it causes the weight to be borne upon the inner arch, which is unphysiological.

"The anatomical and physiological studies of the foot have positively demonstrated that the inner arch was never intended to bear weight, hence the use of an arch support is unphysiological and fallacious."

Dr. Teschner blamed faulty gait for flat-foot. "Toeing out," as taught in dancing schools, he called pernicious. "The affected swagger of young swains to acquire a distinguished aristocratic gait in their promenades rarely fails to produce flat or weak feet. This is especially noticeable among Austrian army officers, who appear to consider it a distinction to have flat feet.

The legs should not be used as pegs upon which the weight of the body is swung alternately. The full weight should be placed upon the foot upon which the body rests; this, according to Dr. Teschner, actually lifts the arch. It is possible to cure flat foot by simple exercises in proper gait, exercises adapted to each individual case, and occupying not more than 10 minutes night and morning.

"Hand-led children," says Dr. Teschner, "of the wealthier classes are more prone to this condition than the neglected and often shoeless children of the tenement. When the school age arrives they receive the pernicious instruction to toe out in 'attention.'

The same thing is invariably taught in dancing schools. Later in life occupation plays an important part in the causation of flat foot. Those who are upon their feet the greater part of the day and whose activities are limited to a few steps at a time and then stand, as nurses, men on the floors of exchanges, barbers, waiters, shopkeepers, etc., are especially prone to acquire this condition, the main cause being that when they stand they do so with the feet averted, and the thighs and legs are used as pegs, permitting the arches to sink. After sprains of the ankle the timidity due to the pain caused by the proper use of the ankle joint causes aversion and consequent flat foot.

USE OF TUNGSTEN.

TUNGSTEN, the metal so much to the fore in the manufacture of incandescent lamps, has very interesting properties. It is as heavy as gold and will easily scratch glass. It melts only in the heat of the electric arc—a fact which explains how the filament support, without fusion, the intense heat necessary to incandescence. Alloyed with iron, it communicates its hardness, making the so-called "self-hardening" steels; tools of tungsten steel may be brought to redness and reforged without losing their temper. Magnets of the same alloy retain their magnetism without loss, and for this reason are extensively used in the manufacture of speedometers. Metallic tungsten is prepared by reduction in the electric furnace.

THINGS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

Measuring Power Expended in Exercise

ONE of the greatest problems in physical culture is that of exactly measuring the force expended and the result attained The latest device for accomplishing this double purpose is the ergometer, "force measurer," invented by Prof. Bergonie of Bordeaux, who at the same time that he is a physician is also a great advocate of physical development and sport. In his practice he has found it necessary to secure a machine by which he could treat convalescents and at the same time measure and regulate the efforts made, so as to avoid undue strain or over-exertion. As there was no such machine to be had he had to invent it, or rather adapt the bicycle to his purposes. This bicycle is so arranged as to act upon a dynamo which registers with precision exactly how much effort is put forth and the various features of this effort. It measures every minute:

1. The speed of rotation.
2. The amount of pressure exerted upon the pedals.
3. The power exerted by the operator; that is to say, each moment it shows the result of the pressure put upon the pedals, by the speed with which they rotate.

The ergometer in use.

4. And finally the total of work done during the exercise.

With this reliable indicator and regulator it is possible to gauge the amount of muscular effort put forth and prevent the convalescent from overtaxing his growing strength.

Making Ice in Bengal

WE think of ice only as the product of extreme cold in winter or as produced by the ice machines, which use ammonia or other chemicals. But ice has been manufactured these many ages on the plains of Bengal simply by the application of the natural law of evaporation. The Hindoos are especially fond of sorbets and iced drinks, and of course it is never cold enough on the plains for ice to form, nor have they known anything about manufacturing ice mechanically. But the Hindoos have managed to secure ice, notwithstanding their burning skies. In the spring nights the put water in very broad, shallow basins exposed to the passage of the air and elevated at a height of about a yard from the ground upon a pile of straw or of bamboos. At other times they fill small shells scattered on the ground, securing a small quantity of ice from each shell. When the air is calm and the weather serene the water freezes even when the temperature is as high as 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

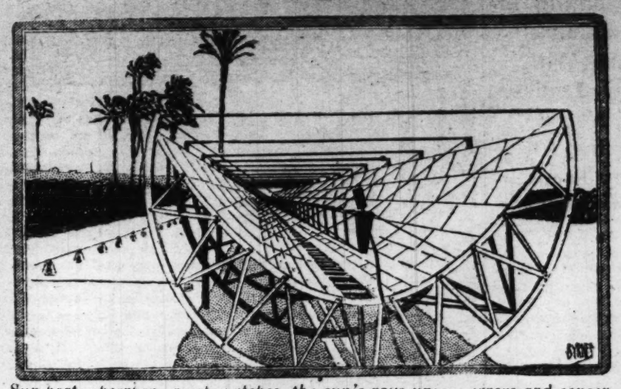
Boiling Water in Egypt With the Sun's Heat



Sun-heat absorber which catches the sun's rays upon mirrors and concentrates them upon the long "boiler" in the center. The heat of the sun thus produces great quantities of steam from the water contained in the series of generators or boilers which drive a low-pressure engine.

A SUN-POWER pumping plant, invented by Frank Shuman, has recently been installed in Egypt. The principle of this system of power is simple. The heat of the sun is used to raise steam in a series of generators, each consisting of a flat sheet-iron box three feet square with plates only 1-3 inch apart, and covered by two sheets of glass one inch apart. The boxes are massed together over a space of 5000 square feet and have a heat-collecting area of about 10,300 square feet. This area is made up of 26 rows of boxes, each row containing 22 single units. Each box, which is painted with a dull black composition which does not reflect more than 6 per cent of the sun's rays, rests upon a layer of non-conducting material. The resulting insulation is so good that, if desired, a temperature of over 400 degrees Fahr. can be obtained in the boxes. The boxes are placed on trestles and can be set at angles to suit the sun, whilst mirrors are used to direct additional sunlight on to the "boilers." On one side of each box is a pipe through which water can be admitted, and on the other side is a pipe for taking the steam thus generated to the engine.

DO YOU KNOW THAT?

THE sure sign by which to tell fresh fish is the eye. If the eye is clear the fish is fresh, but if it is sunken and shrunken you may be certain that the fish is not fresh, even though the gills look red.

IF you want the best piecrust it should be made the day before you wish to use it and put into the refrigerator. Then the crust should be flaky and crisp. THE original spelling of ribbon was ribband, for it was a band that went around the waist, inclosing or binding the ribs. The hair ribbon is thus a very old verbal paradox.

THE privilege of leap year by which a woman may ask a man to marry her, originated in 1228, when the Scottish Parliament passed an act that during the reign of Queen Margaret "ilka maiden ladee of baith high and lowe estate shall hae liberty to speak ye man she likes," and if he refuses he may be fined a hundred pounds, unless he can prove that he is already engaged.

No Cure Discovered for Cancer

IN his annual report, Dr. E. F. Bashford, general superintendent of research in the laboratories of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund, told the members of the society that in the year last past there had been 12 claims to the discovery of a cure for cancer. All of these had been investigated and no justification for any one of these claims had been obtained. Dr. Bashford also said women were more liable to cancer than men. In England and Wales in 1910 the death rate from cancer was 856 per million for men and 1070 for women.

As the London Times says editorially in commenting upon this report: "The only reasonable expectation of curing cancer still rests upon its complete removal by the surgeon at the earliest possible time after it is discovered."

What Smoke Does

IT has been said in defense of soft coal smoke in the air that Pittsburg has less tuberculosis than other cities similarly situated in which there is much less smoke; but the Journal of the American Medical Association points out that this, if true, is offset by the fact that catarrh, pneumonia and other "bad air" diseases are prevalent and that "the Pittsburg ophthalmologists are said to be busiest after a heavy fog accompanied by smoke."

Newest for Women Originating in Europe Is Described by a Man as "a Series of Loose Postures With Joints Dislocated"—St. Louis Debutante Says It Is Not So Much a Matter of Relaxing All One's Muscles as It May Seem.

ARE your new fall gowns and suits built to permit you to affect the "ingenue crouch," otherwise the "debutante slump"? Or should it not be called "the slouch"? If not, woe be unto you, mesdames, aspirants to a position in Fashion's pageant, for it is a new manner of locomotion rather than the new gowns that take precedence in the reports of our correspondents at European fashion centers this month.

Nobody seems to know where the new pose—if such it may be called—originated; whether it is an unavoidable physical result of too much wearing of yard-wide skirts, a crippling from disuse of certain major muscles, vindicating the dire predictions of health culturists months ago, or whether it is just another phase of the orientalism which pervades the modes of the day. It is likened to the mincing patter of the Japanese ladies, who must not lift their feet from the floor lest they slip their sandals, and whose tightly drawn draperies and wide obi tied behind, and even before, complete a silhouette which might easily have inspired the designers of the wide-waisted gowns of today.

It isn't a tidy enough walk for the dainty, immaculate Japanese lady, though; so some think it more likely the lazy, voluptuous habitant of a Turkish harem was its model.

However, when Madame Fashion declares a new fad it is not the habit of her votaries to question why, wherefore or whence comes her inspiration. It is enough that a new form of pedestrianism is now being affected by Parisian mannequins as they parade the latest edicts at Biarritz, Europe's fashion center at this season. As the models slouch along before the Casino and on the Grande Plage, their lovely draperies are forgotten and the fashion writers proceed first of all to describe the new pose. And varied and contradictory are the opinions thereof.

After studying the mystery of this pose you will want to know about the gown. It is of white satin with wired tunic of pleated maline edged with fur. Strings of pearls used for trimming.

One, declaring himself entirely unprejudiced, insists that the ingenue crouchers all look as if they were suffering from acute attacks of indigestion—with the doctor's office miles away.

Spineless, jelly-like, are some of the choice adjectives used to describe these young women who assume to seem mere ingenuous "buds."

One critic who refuses to be converted—a man, of course—describes the walk in detail as a series of loose postures with joints dislocated, hips thrown forward, stomach (with his due apologies for using a plain, old-fashioned word) protruding to its roundest extent in front, the back drawn in like that of a whipped dog behind. In order to attain the outward curve below the waist line in front, this writer declares he has detected the couturieres and corset makers using pads to produce the desired effect.

A good deal of this sounds like unwonted rebellion upon the part of fashion writers, usually so eager to seize upon a new sensation and exploit it.

But why these lamentations? This is a radical change from straight-front stays and the bustles that preceded them, but go a bit back and you will find a good deal of preference among artists and other authorities on beauty for the languorous, leaning movement we now uneuphoniously term the slump.

Are you familiar with Hogarth's line of beauty? The double continuous curve, like an elongated letter S, which this master of art analysis discovered was a dependable basis of grace wherever employed? Observe, then, the central figure photographed here. Can you not trace Hogarth's line of beauty in the sinuous pose of her?

If Parisians complain of a faltering, flat-footed, slouchy walk, how much more should we on this side, when such a mode of getting about is a direct reversal of the athletic stride so long a characteristic of the American girl? However, the American girl is nothing if not adaptable.

Already, right here in St. Louis, it has been observed that gradually—perforce maybe on account of the narrow skirts—the girls have slipped into a new manner of wiggling themselves from place to place. The "debutante slump" is a term which in fact is said to have originated here.

Yes, indeed, you pace setters over in Paris are not a saunter, nor a glide, nor a shuffle ahead of the St. Louis maidens!

"The way it is done," said one of the most adept exponents of the ingenue crouch, a debutante here in St. Louis, "is not so much a matter of relaxing all one's muscles as it may seem. One's waist line collapses, that is true, but decided effort is exerted in keeping the shoulders drawn down and the knees close together, to allow the feet to pass each other within the least possible latitude of skirt. By bending the knees a good deal, instead of swinging the limbs freely from the hips, don't you see, you can appear to be taking a longer step than by moving the feet with knees stiffened. You want to slide as far as you can at each step, rather than mince along, of course.

"A good plan of getting about in the very narrow skirt, I find," further observed this accomplished young woman, "is to place the feet as nearly as possible directly in front of each other when you step. You don't waste skirt room in that way, as you do when you give your feet a wide side swing. This is what gives a good deal of the forward curve from the waist out that is so noticeable in the new walk."

Assuredly, it isn't the girls themselves who are going to prove inadaptable to a new fashion. Never fear!

Are the lines of the gown going to adapt themselves so readily and gracefully? Already the skirt, which is short in front—very short above the instep—and long behind, trailing upon the ground, is helping to emphasize the forward curve. Tunics which are gathered fuller in the front accentuate this tendency.

Street suits this season are universally of the most pliant, supple, drapable materials, such as eponge, matelasse, chiffon broadcloth, satin and wool charmeuse. In the case of the one illustrated, brown velourine is used and lends itself gracefully to the drooping lines. A band across the back affords the desired forward curve and suggests nothing so much as the aforementioned whipped dog with tail between its legs.

Here's the pose again. The gown is of brown velourine with collar and cuffs of fur.

Model in St. Louis store who has quickly "caught on" to the new pose and uses it when displaying gowns.

Rough Rider Private Who Wanted to "Lick" an Officer of Another Regiment, Chaplain Who Was "Some Collector" of Horses and a Soldier Who Led His Spanish Captive Around With a String.

TWENTY-EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.

IN a regiment the prime need is to have fighting men; the prime virtue is to be able and eager to fight with the utmost effectiveness. I have never believed that this was incompatible with other virtues. On the contrary, while there are of course exceptions, I believe that on the average the best fighting men are also the best citizens.

I do not believe that a finer set of natural soldiers than the men of my regiment could have been found anywhere, and they were first-class citizens in civil life also. One fact may perhaps be worthy of note. Whenever we were in camp and so fixed that we could have regular meals, we used to have a general officers' mess, over which I of course presided.

During our entire service there was never a foul or indecent word uttered at the officers' mess—I mean this literally; and there was very little swearing—although now and then in the fighting, if there was a moment when swearing seemed to be the best method of reaching the heart of the matter, it was resorted to.

The men I cared for most in the regiment were the men who did the best work; and therefore my liking for them was obliged to take the shape of exposing them to most fatigue and hardship, of demanding from them the greatest service, and of making them incur the greatest risk. Once I kept Greenway and Goodrich at work for 48 hours, without sleeping, and with very little food, fighting and digging trenches.

I freely sent the men for whom I cared most to where death might smite them; and death often smote them—as it did the two best officers in my regiment—Allyn Capron and Bucky O'Neil.

My men would not have respected me had I acted otherwise. Their creed was my creed. The life even of the most useful man, of the best citizen, is not to be hoarded if there be need to spend it. I felt, and feel, this about others; and of course also about myself.

This is one reason why I have always felt impatient contempt for the effort to abolish the death penalty on account of sympathy with criminals. I am willing to listen to arguments in favor of abolishing the death penalty so far as they are based purely on grounds of public expediency, although these arguments have never convinced me.

But inasmuch as, without hesitation, in the performance of duty, I have again and again sent good and gallant and upright men to die, it seems to me the height of a folly both mischievous and mawkish to contend that criminals who have deserved death should nevertheless be allowed to shirk it.

No brave and good man can properly shirk death; and no criminal who has earned death should be allowed to shirk it.

Of course with a regiment of our type there was much to learn both among the officers and the men. There were all kinds of funny incidents. One of my men, an ex-cowpuncher and former round-up cook, a very good shot and rider, got into trouble on the way down to the transport.

He understood entirely that he had to obey the officers of his own regiment, but, like so many volunteers, or at least like so many volunteers of my regiment, he did not understand that this obligation extended to officers of other regiments.

One of the regular officers on the transport ordered him to do something which he declined to do. When the officer told him to consider himself under arrest, he responded by offering to fight him for a trifling consideration. He was brought before a courtmartial, which sentenced him to a year's imprisonment at hard labor with dishonorable discharge, and the Major-General commanding the division approved the sentence.

We were on the transport. There was no hard labor to do; and the prison consisted of another cow-puncher who kept guard over him with his carbine, evidently divided in his feelings as to whether he would like most to shoot him or let him go. When we landed, somebody told the prisoner that I intended to punish him by keeping him with the baggage.

He at once came to me in great agitation, saying: "Colonel, they say you are going to leave me with the baggage when the fight is on. Colonel, if you do that, I will never show my face in Arizona again. Colonel, if you will let me go to the front, I promise I will obey anyone you say; anyone you say, Colonel," with the evident feeling that, after this concession, I could not, as a gentleman, refuse his request.

Accordingly I answered: "Shields, there is no one in this regiment more entitled to be shot than you are, and you shall go to the front." His gratitude was great, and he kept repeating "I'll never forget this, Colonel, never."

Nor did he. When we got very hard up, he would now and then manage to get hold of some flour and sugar and would cook a doughnut and bring it round to me, and watch me with a delightful smile while I ate it. He behaved extremely well in both fights, and after the second one I had him formally before me and remitted his sentence—something, of course, which I had not the slightest power to do, although at the time it seemed natural and proper to me.

"All of our men were good at accumula ting horses."

When we came to be mustered out, the regular officer who was doing the mustering, after all the men had been discharged, finally asked me where the prisoner was. I said: "What prisoner?" He said: "The prisoner, the man who was sentenced to a year's imprisonment with hard labor and dishonorable discharge."

I said: "Oh, I pardoned him;" to which he responded: "I beg your pardon, you did what?"

This made me grasp the fact that I had exceeded authority, and I could only answer "Well, I did pardon him, anyhow, and he has gone with the rest," whereupon

"When the officer told him to consider himself under arrest, he responded by offering to fight him for a trifling consideration."

the mustering-out officer sat back in his chair and remarked: "He was sentenced by a courtmartial, and the sentence was approved by the Major-General commanding the division. You were a Lieutenant-Colonel and you pardoned him. Well, it was nervy, that's all I'll say."

In the final fighting at San Juan, when we captured one of the trenches, Jack Greenway had seized a Spaniard, and shortly afterwards I found Jack leading his captive round with a string. I told him to turn him over to a man who had two or three other captives, so that they should all be taken to the rear.

"Jack Greenway had seized a Spaniard, and shortly afterward I found Jack leading his captive around with a string."

It was the only time I ever saw Jack look aggrived. "Why, Colonel, can't I keep him for myself?" he asked, plaintively. I think he had an idea that as a trophy of his bow and spear the Spaniard would make a fine body servant.

One reason that we never had the slightest trouble in the regiment was because, when we got down to hard pan, officers and men shared exactly alike. It is all right to have differences in food and the like in times of peace and plenty, when everybody is comfortable.

But in really hard times officers and men must share alike if the best work is to be done. As long as I had nothing but two hardtacks, which was the allowance to each man on the morning after the San Juan fight, no one could complain; but if I had had any private little luxuries the men would very naturally have realized keenly their own shortages.

Soon after the Guisamas fight we were put on short commons; and as I knew that a good deal of food had been landed and was on the beach at Siboney, I marched thirty or forty of the men down to see if I could not get some and bring it up. I finally found a commissary officer, and he asked me what I wanted, and I answered anything he had.

So he told me to look about for myself. I found a number of sacks of beans, I think about eleven hundred pounds, on the beach, and told the officer I wanted eleven hundred pounds of beans. He produced a book of regulations, and showed me the appropriate section and subdivision which announced that beans were issued only for the officers' mess. This did me no good, and I told him so. He said he was sorry, and I answered that he was not as sorry as I was.

I then "studied on it," as Br'er Rabbit would say, and came back with a request for eleven hundred pounds of beans for the officers' mess. He said: "Why, Colonel, your officers can't eat eleven hundred pounds of beans," to which I responded "You don't know what appetites my officers have." He then said he would send the requisition to Washington.

I told him I was quite willing, so long as he gave me the beans. He was a good fellow, so we finally effected a working compromise—he got the requisition and I got the beans, although he warned me that the price would probably be deducted from my salary.

Under some regulation or other only the regular supply trains were allowed to act, and we were supposed not to have any horses or mules in the regiment itself. This was very pretty in theory; but, as a matter of fact, the supply teams were not numerous enough.

My men had a natural genius for acquiring horseflesh in odd ways, and I continually found that they had staked out in the brush various captured Spanish cavalry horses and Cuban ponies and abandoned commissary mules. Putting these together, I would organize a small pack train and work it industriously for a day or two, until they learned about it at headquarters and confiscated it.

Then I would have to wait for a week or so until my men had accumulated some more ponies, horses and mules, the regiment meanwhile living in plenty on what we had got before the train was confiscated.

All of our men were good at accumulating horses, but within our own ranks I think we were inclined to award the palm to our chaplain. There was not a better man in the regiment than the chaplain, and there could not have been a better chaplain for our men.

In addition, he had a natural aptitude for acquiring mules, which made some admirer, when the regiment was disbanded, propose that we should have a special medal struck for him, with, on the obverse "A Mule passant and Chaplain regardant."

After the surrender of Santiago a Philadelphia clergyman whom I knew came down to Gen. Wheeler's headquarters, and after visiting him announced that he intended to call on the Rough Riders, because he knew their Colonel.

One of Gen. Wheeler's aides, Lieut. Steele, who liked us both individually and as a regiment, and who appreciated some of our ways, asked the clergyman, after he had announced that he knew Col. Roosevelt, "But do you know Col. Roosevelt's regiment?" "No," said the clergyman. "Very well, then, let me give you a piece of advice. When you go down to see the Colonel don't let your horse out of your sight; and if the chaplain is there, don't get off the horse!"

We came back to Montauk Point and soon after were disbanded. We had been in the service only a little over four months. There are no four months of my life to which I look back with more pride and satisfaction. I believe most earnestly and sincerely in peace, but as things are yet in this world the nation that cannot fight, the people that have lost the fighting edge, that have lost the virile virtures, occupy a position as dangerous as it is ignoble.

IT'S BEEN A VERY GOOD YEAR IN SPORT FOR UNCLE SAM, THANK YOU!

Winning the Golf Championship From England Almost Strips the British Isles of Athletic Honors—What Americans Have Won and the Records They Have Made for Others to Excel if They Can.

FRANCIS OUIMET,
Brookline, Mass., Golf Champion of the World.

UNCLE SAM practically stripped the British Isles of athletic honors the other day when Francis Ouimet of Boston, a 20-year-old amateur, defeated Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, England's veteran experts, in the open golf championship of the United States. It was an unexpected victory. England's players were considered supreme as exponents of the ancient game. The American youth conquered them by an exhibition of skill which caused the defeated golfers to accord him high praise.

Ouimet's victory, following close upon the heels of that of Maurice E. McLoughlin of San Francisco, who brought back to America, after 10 years' absence, the Davis cup, the international lawn tennis trophy donated by Dwight Davis of St. Louis, clinched Uncle Sam's claim to supremacy in international sporting events this year.

McLoughlin's triumph, due largely to his famous "cannon ball" delivery, followed the defeat of England's polo team at Westbury, L. I., by the American team captained by Harry Payne Whitney, the Americans winning by individual brilliancy against the splendid team work of the Britons.

Still another international championship has been won this year, and as in each of the others mentioned and in the United States golf contest, the loser was England. Jack Souter wrested the racquets championship from England's players.

In court tennis (indoor) America has held the championship for several years, Jay Gould, son of George J. Gould, having won it from English players.

In yachting America's supremacy over England was established more than half a century ago by the winning of the America's cup, which has remained on this side of the water ever since, despite all efforts of British yachtsmen to capture it.

Uncle Sam, of course, is feeling very well, thank you, over his 1913 sport record. England, while acknowledging deep disappointment, is game enough to admit that she is beaten fairly and squarely in each instance. The English press and the sports fraternity over there acknowledge the corn, or, in the case of the Boston boy golfer, the bean.

From London comes the news that everybody is doffing his cap—one couldn't say taking off his hat, since the Britisher seldom wears that headgear at a sporting event—to young Ouimet. Says the Times, for instance:

"The fact that the representatives of British golf, and those the very greatest, should have failed to win the American championship, will be cause for national regret and no little amazement in this country; but all other feelings will be extinguished in admiration for the wonderful feat of Ouimet, who has proved he is one of the greatest golfers that have ever been born, an indubitable prodigy.

"To win from Ray and Vardon after a tie of 72 holes is a feat which it is impossible to minimize, and simply leaves one gasping."

The Duke of Westminster, an authority on the subject, in a recent letter deplores the showing made by England in various branches of sport during recent years. He gives a long list of championships lost chiefly to America.

The world's championships held by the various nations are shown pictorially on this page. It is interesting to recall at this time the names of the American amateurs who have won these laurels for the United States and their records in figures, some of which have stood for years. Here they are:

Daniel J. Kelly, 100 yards run, 9 3-5 seconds, Spokane, Wash.; June 23, 1906.

Robert Congdon, 130 yards run, 12 4-5 seconds, Brooklyn, N. Y.: Feb. 11, 1909.

R. C. Craig, 220 yards run, 21 1-5 seconds, Phiadelphia; May 28, 1910, and again at Cambridge, Mass., May 27, 1911.

R. J. Wefers, 300 yards run, 30 3-5 seconds, New York; Sept. 26, 1906.

M. W. Long, 400 yards run, 47 seconds, Guttenburg, N. J.; Oct. 4, 1900, straight; and 47 4-5 seconds at Travers Island, N. Y., Sept. 29, 1900, round.

M. W. Shepard, 600 yards run, 1m. 10 4-5s., Celtic Park, N. Y.; Aug. 14, 1910.

John Paul Jones, 1 mile run, 4m. 15 2-5s., Cambridge, Mass.; May 27, 1911.

Ralph Rose putting 16-pound shot, 51 feet, San Francisco; Aug. 21, 1909.

M. J. McGrath, throwing 16-pound hammer, 187 feet 4 inches, Celtic Park, N. Y.; Oct. 29, 1911.

M. S. Wright, pole vault, 13 feet 2 1-4 inches, Cambridge, Mass.; June 8, 1912.

R. C. Ewry, standing broad jump, 11 feet 4 7-8 inches, St. Louis; Aug. 24, 1904.

R. C. Ewry, standing high jump, 5 feet 5 1-4 inches, Buffalo, N. Y.; Sept. 7, 1901.

Few of the foregoing records have been beaten by professionals.

These Americans hold the world's swimming records for the distances mentioned: A. Huszagh, 50 yards, 23 3-5 seconds; C. M. Daniels, 100 yards, 54 4-5 seconds; C. M. Daniels, 150 yards, 1m. 10s.; 150 yards, 1m. 32 2-5s; 220 yards, 2m. 25 2-5s. Another American, H. J. Hebner, holds the record for swimming on the back, 100 yards in 1m. 8 2-5s.

The American team at the Olympic games in Stockholm, Sweden, in 1912, was considered by experts the greatest aggregation of athletes ever gathered for an athletic meet in the history of amateur track and field sport. These men won 85 points, the next competitor being Finland with 29 points. At this meet James Thorpe of Oklahoma established his record as the world's greatest all-around athlete.

Notwithstanding England's devotion to horse racing, with the King and many rich noblemen represented by their stables, America holds the world's records for both running and trotting. Salvator, a 4-year-old, ran one mile in 1m. 35 1-2s. at Monmouth Park, N. J., Aug. 28, 1890. This record stands today, though Monmouth Park itself has been turned into farmers' fields, Salvator is long dead and the event for years has been commemorated by elocutionists who recite the Ella Wheeler Wilcox poem, "How Salvator Won."

The trotting record for the world was made Oct. 8, 1912, at Lexington, Ky., one mile in 1m. 58s., by Uhlan, another American horse.

In other lines of sport England has lost boxing and billiards to America, Lacrosse and shooting (King's prize) to Canada, cycling to France and Germany, horse jumping to France and Russia and skating to Sweden.

In aviation France holds practically all the honors. Though the aeroplane is an American invention, the French have taken to it with a skill and daring not equalled here or in any other nation.

As to the golf championship, Englishmen are trying to console themselves by explaining the defeat of Vardon and Ray without casting the slightest reflection upon Ouimet's victory, which they freely admit was won by superior playing. The veterans of golfing in England lay much stress upon "golf nerve," and they credit young Ouimet with a larger endowment of that quality than he will have when he grows older. J. H. Taylor, four times champion, makes the point also that the fact that the American had all to gain and nothing to lose, in reputation, was largely in his favor. Said Taylor:

"Youngsters playing golf do not realize how difficult it is to play really well. Only when one has a great reputation and understands the dire consequences of failure is one properly thankful if one is playing well. Mr. Ouimet is a splendid golfer, endowed with splendid nerves. At the same time my impression is he had everything to gain and nothing to lose.

"Vardon and Ray, on the other hand, knew they carried on their shoulders the golf reputation of this country. That did not make their task the easier. It is much easier to make a reputation at golf than to maintain it."

Speaking of nerves, Taylor said: "It entirely depends on one's bodily health. When I feel very well my nerves never trouble me. When I am out of sorts I have to fight my nerves, but they gradually get the best of the encounter." Taylor thinks the ties should have been played off over 36 holes instead of 18. It is a maxim among golfers, he pointed out.

"Anyone can win over 18 holes, but only the best man can win over 36. Another extraordinary thing is that they played off together. I should think the correct thing to do would have been to take in a first-class player and draw for pairs. There is nothing more distracting than to have to watch two other balls. It prevents one from concentrating. It was bound to detract from the skill of Ray and Vardon."

Alexander Herd, another open champion, comments along the same line, admitting that Ouimet is "a wonder," but saying that when the young man has had some experience in championship play he will begin to find his nerves.

New Dances to Take the Place of the Tango..

American Society of Professors of Dancing Issues Edict Against Turkey Trot and Other Sensational Steps—Jacob Mahler Illustrates Two of the Latest Importations From Europe, Which Will Be Introduced to St. Louis Society This Season

Second movement in "The Farragut."

SOCIETY this season is going to get back to sanity in dancing. The edict was promulgated by the American Society of Professors of Dancing at its thirty-sixth annual convention early in September. The movement toward safe and sane dancing had its inception at Newport last summer, when Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and other society leaders demanded of the dancing masters that they invert something to supplant the turkey trot, tango, Texas Tommy trend in dance movements and turn back in the direction of dignity and grace.

Accordingly, if society folk accept the new order, which is founded upon the old, people will dance with their feet this season instead of with their bodies. The dancing-masters now bar all shoulder motions, gripping of the knees, swaying from the hips, jumping and hopping and close contact. They approve more use of the feet, bodies held more erect, heads and shoulders well up, gliding instead of hopping and moderation in dips.

In place of the turkey trot and the tango are to be introduced, if the professors of dancing have their way, modified forms, including the "Beverly," the "Manchester," the "shadow," the "side drop glide" and a dance called the modified tango, which promises to do away with the objectionable features of the Argentine tango.

Prof. Jacob Mahler of St. Louis, who has been a member of the American Society of Professors of Dancing since 1881, always has refused to teach the tango, the turkey trot and the other dances bearing names and carrying movements originating in the underworld. His stand in this matter, he declares, increased the number of his pupils the past year by more than 200. This appears to be indicative of a purpose on the part of St. Louisans to eliminate the dance forms which in the past year or two have made sensational cabaret history and have permeated private ballrooms.

As to the Argentine tango, Prof. Mahler says it originated on the "Barbary Coast" in San Francisco. How it got the name Argentine is a mystery. Miss Virginia Pasman, a belle of Buenos Ayres, Argentina, on a recent visit to this country, said that the tango is not known in her country by that country's name.

"No proper person in Argentina," she declared, "dances the tango. It is a bad dance. None of your girls here would dance it if they knew where it came from. I am afraid the Americans have taken the tango as they have taken the X-ray gown—from the underworld and without investigation."

Prof. William Pitt Rivers of New York, whose father founded the dancing masters' society 44 years ago, said at the recent convention:

"I have observed a wonderful improvement since last winter. People have come to realize that what they have been doing is not exactly right. The fun is all over and they want something more refined, something with more character. The ambition of society now is to look well on the ballroom floor, and that can be done only in the old dances."

This does not mean, however, that there is to be nothing new in the dancing domain this season. A number of new dances are to be introduced, but all of them will tend toward propriety, it is promised. "The new dances," says one authority, "do not necessarily require tea, highballs, cigarettes or extra slit skirts as adjuncts. Instead, they are sane and seasible and beautiful."

On a recent visit to Europe Prof. Mahler discovered two new dances which he will introduce to St. Louis. He did not find them in Paris, which still trots and tangoes. In soberer Berlin he ran across two new things not yet tried out in America, which nevertheless have American names. They are the "Norfolk" and the "Farragut." Pupils who have been instructed in these dances here pronounce them highly rhythmical and great delight pleasing.

Prof. Mahler and his daughter, Mrs. Rosalind Mahler Pufeles, posed for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine photographer to show position in these new dances. For the "Norfolk" any waltz music in medium tempo is suitable. Instructions for this dance follow:

Preparation: Stand in semi-open position. Explanation of step for the gentleman; counterpart for the lady. First movement: Left foot to fourth position; count one, raise upon ball of foot; count two, three (one measure), right foot passing in front of left to fourth position; count one, left foot to fourth position; count two, right foot to fourth position; count three (one measure); repeat this movement, making four measures in all; left foot to fourth position, count one, two, three, four, five (two measures); repeat with right foot (two measures). Waltz or hesitation (eight measures).

For the "Farragut" the music is a two-step in medium tempo. The movements are:

Preparation: Open position. Explanation of step for the gentleman; counterpart for the lady. Beginning with left foot, walk eight steps forward (four measures). Reverse position, gentleman giving left hand to lady's right hand. Walk eight steps forward, beginning with right foot. Regular waltz position, two-step around (eight measures).

With the assistance of his daughter, Prof. Mahler also showed, for purpose of comparison with the correct positions, some of the ludicrous attitudes assumed by certain well-known St. Louis men on the ballroom floor. These, he avers, are some of the results of the trotting, tangoing wave that has swept over society and is now receding.

One of the photographs is in imitation of the dancing attitude of a young man about town who undoubtedly experiences in tripping the not-too-light fantastic.

Another is a good-natured burlesque on the way a certain gentleman of excessive adipose tissue, commonly described as a fat man, does the turkey trot.

A third pose illustrates a well-known lawyer and politician in the hesitation waltz. Some of his fair dancing partners, it is said, have renamed it the torture waltz.

Back-to-Dignity Edict in Dancing

The American Society of Professors of Dancing, at its recent convention, voted these approvals and disapprovals:

Approvals—
- More use of the feet.
- Bodies more erect.
- Heads and shoulders well up.
- Gliding instead of hopping.
- Moderation in dips.

Disapprovals—
- All shoulder motions.
- Gripping of the knees.
- Swaying from the hips.
- Jumping and hugging.
- Close contact of partners.

Negroes Worth $700,000,000

THE progress of the colored race in the United States in the fifty years since emancipation is nothing short of marvelous. When Lincoln issued the proclamation the race owned little or nothing. Now it holds $700,000,000 worth of property, according to the "Negro Year Book," a Tuskegee publication. The colored man has entered every line of endeavor and his rapid rise in all branches of human activity is a source of immeasurable satisfaction to the whites. Few men thought half a century ago when slavery was abolished that such remarkable strides would be made. Having clearly demonstrated its capacity to care for itself, the future of the colored race is no longer obscured by uncertainty.

UNCONSCIOUS OF ITS LOST DAY

that I come to look at it. Well, there's something here I don't understand."

"Have you no remembrance of anything remarkable as you came up the hill?"

"Well, I seem to recollect that I was mighty sleepy once. It comes back to me that I wanted to say something to the driver, and that I couldn't make him heed me. I guess it was the heat, but I felt swimmy for a moment. That's all."

"So it was with the whole human race," said Challenger to me. "They have all felt swimmy for a moment. None of them have as yet any comprehension of what has occurred. Each will go on with his interrupted job as Austin has snatched up his hose-pipe or the golfer continued his game. Your editor, Malone, will continue the issue of his papers, and very much amazed he will be at finding that an issue is missing. Yes, my young friend," he added, to the American reporter, with a sudden mood of amused geniality, "it may interest you to know that the world has swum safely through the poisonous current which swirls like the Gulf Stream through the ocean of ether. You will also kindly note for your own future convenience that today is not Friday, August 27, but Saturday, August 28, and that you sat senseless in your cab for 28 hours upon the Rotherfield Hill."

And "right here," as my American colleague would say, I may bring this narrative to an end. It is, as you are probably aware, only a fuller and more detailed version of the account which appeared in the Monday edition of the Daily Gazette—an account which has been universally admitted to be the greatest journalistic scoop of all time, which sold no fewer than three and a half million copies of the paper. Framed upon the wall of my sanctum I retain those magnificent headlines:

TWENTY-EIGHT HOUR WORLD COMA.
UNPRECEDENTED EXPERIENCE.
CHALLENGER JUSTIFIED.
Our Correspondent Escapes.
ENTHRALLING NARRATIVE.
THE OXYGEN ROOM. WEIRD MOTOR DRIVE.
DEAD LONDON.
REPLACING THE MISSING PAGE.
GREAT FIRES AND LOSS OF LIFE.
WILL IT RECUR?

Underneath this glorious scroll came nine and a half columns of narrative, in which appeared the first, last and only account of the history of the planet, so far as one observer could draw it, during one long day of its existence. Challenger and Summerlee have treated the matter in a joint scientific paper, but to me alone was left the popular account. Surely I can sing "Nunc Dimittis." What is left but anti-climax in the life of a journalist after that!

"Yes, my young friend, it may interest you to know that the world has swum safely through the poisonous current which swirls like the Gulf Stream through the ocean of ether. You will also kindly note for your own future convenience that today is not Friday, August 27, but Saturday, August 28."

But let me not end on sensational headlines and a merely personal triumph. Rather let me quote the sonorous passages in which the greatest of daily papers ended its admirable leader upon the subject—a leader which might well be filed for reference by every thoughtful man.

"It has been a well-worn truism," said the Times, "that our human race is a feeble folk before the infinite latent forces which surround us. From the prophets of old and from the philosophers of our own time the same message and warning have reached us. But, like all oft-repeated truths, it has in time lost something of its actuality and cogency. A lesson, an actual experience, was needed to bring it home. It is from that salutary but terrible ordeal that we have just emerged, with minds which are still stunned by the suddenness of the blow, and with spirits which are chastened by the realization of our own limitations and unimportance. The world has paid a fearful price for its schooling. Hardly yet have we learned the full tale of disaster, but the destruction by fire of New York, of Orleans, and of Brighton constitute in itself one of the greatest tragedies in the history of our race. When the account of the railway and shipping accidents has been completed, it will furnish grim reading, although there is evidence to show that in the vast majority of cases the drivers of trains and engineers of steamers succeeded in shutting off power before succumbing to the poison. But the material damage, enormous as it is both in life and in property, is not the consideration which will be uppermost in our minds today. All this may in time be forgotten. But what will not be forgotten, and what will and would continue to obsess our imaginations, is this revelation of the possibilities of the universe, this destruction of our ignorant self-complacency, and this demonstration of how narrow is the path of our material existence, and what abysses may lie upon either side of it. Solemnity and humility are at the base of all our emotions today. May they be the foundation upon which a more earnest and reverent race may build a more worthy temple."

THE END.

HUGO

By Arnold Bennett

begins in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine next Sunday. The hero builds a department store in London that is a world's wonder. Enemies adopt startlingly novel means to destroy him and separate him from the only woman he ever loved.

THE WONDER OF IT

which he suddenly knew within himself must be fulfilled. As he stood there his mind ran over the years of his life since he had begun to live—since that day alone in Madison Square. It was all dream-like in its unreality, yet tangible enough, too, for he, at this moment, was living a part of it.

Ever since that day Mr. Dawkins had lived in the philosophy that all things come to him who goes after them. Without modesty and without shame he had gone after them; charged the windmill and got away with it, and finally underlying every act of his life was the settled conviction that he could not fail. It was not egotism, but something else, a—a—now Mr. Dawkins knew it was the pledge.

Since that first success—"The Comedy of Life"—Mr. Dawkins had gone steadily forward, and a clinking, seemingly endless stream of gold was his reward. Three novels came tumbling out, one after the other, and the success of each was without precedent, save in the case of the other two. Within a year, those lean, squalid days of starvation were a century behind him; and still fortune trod upon him ruthlessly in her efforts to bestow more favors.

First had come physical satisfaction with the change in his life, and then had come the roses. At the end of his first year of plenty he gave his distinguished name to the woman he loved; the woman who had seen with her own eyes the misery through which he had climbed—the woman who understood. It was the irony of fate that immediately after, when he was safely beyond the reach of want, by his own efforts, a great fortune had been thrust upon him through his wife. It came by the graceful death of an uncle, and was as unexpected as it was unnecessary. Then his pledge!

"Give my life * * * sell my eternal soul!"

After the first grating recollection of it, Mr. Dawkins was satisfied. It was a bitter bargain, but a bargain, and the last quality in Mr. Dawkins' character was repudiation of a promise. He didn't mind now—only for Dolores! And little Dolores! With a strange expression on his face Mr. Dawkins finished dressing and went downstairs.

The months passed and there came a subtle change in his manner. It was not fear, nor was it uneasiness for the future of his wife and little one—it was resignation. He was to pay a debt. Yet he was not unhappy. He enjoyed every instant of those ebbing months, as one sips the dregs of wine. Dolores, the same charming, vivacious Dolores, save for the gentle glory of motherhood, of course, knew nothing of it—she must not know. She had noticed the change in his manner, but it was easily attributable to concentration on the work which he so loved. And she was as happy as he in the bestowal upon him of that infinite adoration which perfects and crowns life.

But in time Mr. Dawkins quit counting the months, and began counting the weeks. Then the days. It was all fixed in his mind clearly, the exact day, hour and minute when he would be called upon to fulfill his pledge.

"Give my life * * * sell my eternal soul!"

It would come without effort on his part, and in his study, of course, there with the things which had exalted him. These days Mr. Dawkins devoted to closing up certain affairs so that they would be readily understood by—by his executors! It was all done quietly, without a hint to Dolores or a word of the purport of it all to the attorney who drew his will.

And at last came the day! The cycle of Time had revolved completely. At breakfast there was a sparkle in Dolores' eyes and a smile upon her red lips. She exulted in the mere fact of existence. After a moment she noted his abstraction, and her radiant face sobered.

"You are tired, John," she said. "You must take a rest."

"I am going to begin a long rest today," he said, and he smiled gravely. "I have just been arranging my affairs so I could."

The smile returned to Dolores' lips, and with it the two dimples which he knew so well. She leaned forward and laid one hand on his.

Mr. Dawkins didn't take any luncheon, but crept into the nursery alone. Little Dolores was sleeping soundly with a smile upon her baby lips. For a long time the father stood gazing down at her. This he was to give up!

"My life * * * sell my eternal soul!"

A mist filmed his eyes. He fought it back, stooped and kissed the child lightly, then turning, hurried out of the room. At the door of the dining room he met the other Dolores—his Dolores! A harsh expression about his mouth softened as he saw her; she must not suspect.

"I'm going to the study for a while," he said. "Please don't disturb me."

"More work?"

"No, rest—a long rest," he replied.

Somehow his arms closed about her, and she was held crushed to him for one breathless moment.

"Wonderful little woman!" he whispered.

Their lips met once, and turning abruptly he went into the study, closing the door behind him. He didn't look back at her; he didn't dare to, and after a while he heard a lilt of song as she moved away. He smiled sorrowfully, and glanced at his watch. It was 16 minutes past 1. There were only four more minutes to wait now, then this heart which beat so strongly would be stilled; these hands, now vital with life, would be white and dead; these lungs would draw their last breath. Again Mr. Dawkins glanced at his watch, which lay before him on the desk—two minutes remained.

"It was a good bargain," he said. "I am ready."

The second hand of his watch flew around the dial once. He closed his eyes and sat waiting.

At 3 o'clock Mr. Dawkins was waiting. He is still waiting.

THE END.

VANISHING NUTS

THE old butternut, a very rich and fragrant nut of the olden time, has almost disappeared, says the Ohio State Journal. Very few people of the present generation have ever tasted a butternut. The black walnut is becoming fewer, and in a generation hence it will hardly be known. And yet it is a precious nut, full of goodness and rare taste. The hickory nuts, especially the good old shellbarks, figured prominently in these nutty days, and the chestnuts, too, including the hazel nuts and beech nuts; but they are all growing scarcer.

The pecan is becoming the great American nut. There are thousands of trees cultivated in the South, and the nut has become commercially important. Trees are reported bearing $200 to $500 worth of nuts per year. It is a rich nut, but quite too hard for the novice to pick out the kernels. There are, however, machines that do, feverish celerity.

HERO PLEDGES HIS LIFE AND SOUL

The day of reckoning which lies ahead takes the savor out of triumphs he had craved hands and the tottering figure, then, turning impatiently, continued his walk. The old man gazed after him until he disappeared around the corner, then sank down hopelessly on a doorstep with his face in his hands.

When the curtain fell on the first act Mr. Dawkins was again in the cafe. Half a dozen men, immaculate as himself, wandered out of the theater, crossed the street, and lined up beside him. Mr. Dawkins looked at them curiously as they entered. He wondered what they thought of the first act; and he was afraid someone would tell him.

"The first act is a little better than good—it is remarkable," was the reply. "The man who wrote it certainly knows his little book. If the second and third acts are up to the first, it's the biggest thing in years."

Mr. John Quincy Dawkins rushed madly out of the cafe and around the corner, where he apologized abjectly to an aged, wrinkled old beggar whom he found sitting on a doorstep weeping. Upon this apology was heaped a couple of bills and a dozen small coins which happened to be loose in his pockets. The old man thought that the end of the world had come.

"Thank you, sir, thank you," he mumbled over and over. "I was starving. I have had nothing to eat for two days, and, of course, you don't know what that means, sir."

"Don't I!" demanded Mr. Dawkins, grimly. "Come along with me for a minute."

He led the wretched, feeble old fellow into a Broadway restaurant and sat him down at a table, then went over and spoke to the cashier.

"How much to fill him?" he asked.

"How much can he hold?" he asked in turn.

"Couldn't tell you," said Mr. Dawkins. "I imagine about—about $2 worth?"

"I guess that'll fix it," replied the cashier.

Mr. Dawkins passed over the money, then went out and stood on the curb and laughed. Life? Why, it was the most charming, exuberant thing that he had ever come up with; just to stand out here on Broadway and listen to the noises and breathe!

After a while Mr. Dawkins sauntered on down Broadway, and when the curtain fell on the second act he was hovering about the entrance of the theater like an uneasy bird of prey. Then, from inside, there came such a tumult that Mr. Dawkins was frightened and fled ignominiously. It was not surprising, therefore, that when Mr. Frohsin came out and peered anxiously into the cafe, and up and down the street, he did not see him.

But after the third act Mr. Frohsin captured him. He swooped down upon him in the cafe, with distended eyes and every evidence of excitement.

"Come on with me," he commanded.

"What's the matter?" inquired Mr. Dawkins, in an excitement which surpassed even that of the manager. "Has the leading woman fallen dead? What's the matter?"

"Come on here!"

Mr. Frohsin yanked him around a corner, down a few doors, inside a house, and along a stuffy, smelly passage. In the distance Mr. Dawkins heard a roar which swelled until it burst in his ears with a crash, then he found himself standing blinkingly in the glare of footlights with his opera hat perched rakishly over one eye. In the wings behind him stood Mr. Frohsin, blowing hard, but smilingly triumphantly.

The agony, the horror, the helplessness of the next few minutes are things beyond the pen of mere man. Mr. Dawkins was conscious only of a seething sea of humanity, an astonishing amount of noises and of a few idiotic babblings, which, in the sober light of afterthough, he knew must have convinced every person present of his utter imbecility. Out of the confused mass of his vision isolated only one face—that of a girl. She was leaning forward with her elbows on the rail of a box, with a quizzical smile about her red lips, looking at him. He recognized her instantly—the gray, tailor-made girl of that day.

Mr. Dawkins was standing in the lobby with Mr. Frohsin and a few dramatic critics as the crowd surged past him after the last act. With eyes here, there, everywhere save on those persons nearest him, Mr. Dawkins splashed through a conversation of which he was never able to recall a single syllable. And at last he saw—Her! He caught here eye fairly and she smiled reminiscently. A critic tugged at his sleeve.

"Your play is certainly one of the best that Broadway has ever seen," the critic was saying pompously. "I shall take occasion to say so at length tomorrow."

"Did you ever see such eyes?" Mr. Dawkins inquired, irrelevantly.

III.

"Sometimes I have the strangest feeling of having seen you before," she said.

"At the theater that night?" he suggested. "Once on the stage and once in the lobby?"

"No, before that."

"St. Louis was my home until I went to Yale."

"I've never been there. I wonder if it could have been in London?"

"I've never been there," said Mr. Dawkins. He smiled gravely. "Perhaps our acquaintance is prehistoric, and goes back to that time, 'when you were a tadpole and I was a fish'?" he quoted.

"I was a tadpole! The idea."

"You'll remember some time," said Mr. Dawkins. "Meanwhile, the important question before us now is, what will you have for dessert?"

Miss Francis was staring past him, through the window, out upon the ebb and flow of Fifth avenue at Twenty-sixth street.

"I can't imagine," she said.

"Can't imagine what you'll have for dessert?"

"Where it was I saw you," corrected Miss Francis.

"Maybe your impressions of me are tangled," remarked Mr. Dawkins. "I found out that night at the theater that you and your mother were living at the St. Regis, and succeeded—I may say without boasting—in making myself fairly conspicuous around there on a still hunt for some acquaintance of mine who knew you." He drew a long, deep breath. "I found him," he said.

"I admire your audacity," said Miss Francis, coldly.

"I can't help but admire it sometimes myself," he retorted, "but you didn't know anything about it until I—I confessed."

Miss Francis dimpled suddenly, and smiled.

"Yes I did," she said. "But it wasn't there, really. It was before that, some other place."

They finished their coffee.

"Let us take a turn around the square before we go uptown," suggested Mr. Dawkins. "It's one of the most interesting spots in the world. I used to live here."

"Did you really?" and Miss Francis' face lighted with quick animation. "I have some friends in that fourth house there. If you'd only known them then, perhaps—— What number did you live?"

Mr. Dawkins smiled.

"I met you soon enough," he said enigmatically.

"That is not very complimentary," said Miss Francis.

"It would be if you understood," declared Mr. Dawkins. "See that policeman over there? He's an old friend of mine. Used to be a sort of bellboy for me. Every time I went to sleep, he'd come and wake me."

"Isn't that strange work for a policeman?"

"No, it's part of the job."

"To wake people?"

"Some people. I was one of the favored few. I wouldn't hesitate to say that he has awakened me oftener and in more ingenious ways than any other person in the world—most assiduous in his attentions; never in our long acquaintance did he permit me to oversleep myself."

Miss Francis puckered her arched brows, a little bewildered, and Mr. Dawkins led her on down toward the fountain. They paused a moment to watch the rhythmic rise and fall of the gushing waters, then passed on around.

"This bench here used to be my office," Mr. Dawkins informed her. "Let's sit down a moment in the office. Will you have the swinging chair or the straight back?"

Miss Francis laughed delightedly.

"You came here to think?"

"Yes, I have done some tall thinking on this bench. You can't imagine the tremendous perspective you can get on life by sitting here day after day. Isn't it a fine view?"

"I think it's perfectly horrid," declared Miss Francis. She drew her skirts about her and sat down. "Why, I couldn't have one thought in the world if I had to sit here with these noises and see all those motley people."

"They are beacon lights of misery, placed here by an all-wise Providence to remind an egotistical city of its own shame," said Mr. Dawkins.

The tone was a strange one. Miss Francis glanced at him quickly. A quizzical expression still played about his mouth; his eyes were inscrutable.

"Oh, look at that man," she exclaimed suddenly. "He's actually going to sleep."

"Yes, poor devil."

"And listen. He's snoring."

The phenomena of a man asleep had never before come under Miss Francis' eyes. She seemed absolutely fascinated by it.

"Here comes the bellboy," remarked Mr. Dawkins. "Watch him. See how thoroughly he'll do his work."

The policeman sauntered along the walk until he came to the bench where the wretched atom of humanity was stealing a few minutes of unconsciousness from the agony of hunger and lack of rest. He paused beside the sleeping man and glared down at him in righteous indignation.

"Asleep are you?" growled the law.

One hand fell heavily on the unconscious man's shoulder, and he was shaken violently. Two feverish, sleep-heavy eyes opened with a start, then the familiar blue coat brought recognition.

"Get out o' this," ordered the policeman.

"All right," was the reply. "I haven't been to bed for a week."

"Your troubles ain't none o' mine," declared the law mercilessly. "Get out o' this now, before I take you down."

A gleam of resentment flashed into the other's reddened eyes.

"For God's sake, what can a man do?" he demanded.

"Go to work," replied the policeman. "Get on out o' here now, before I give you a bat in the block."

"Work!" The man laughed suddenly, and slunk away through the square. Mr. Dawkins turned and glanced at Miss Francis. There was a mist in her eyes, and pity, astonishment, horror in her pretty face. She laid one hand on his arm in mute appeal.

"That's how the bellboy works," volunteered Mr. Dawkins, grimly.

"He mustn't go away like that, hungry and exhausted," declared Miss Francis, quickly. Her eyes flashed indignantly. "It was the most heartless, brutal thing I ever saw. That policeman ought to be thrashed soundly."

Mr. Dawkins unfastened the top button of his coat.

"Right now?" he asked.

"Oh, no, no!" she exclaimed. "I didn't mean for you to—— Come on, please. Let's find that man. You give him something for me—you must. It's perfectly hideous!"

They found him over beyond the fountain. Without a word Mr. Dawkins extended a hand in which lay a bill. The man stared at it incredulously a moment, then without a word took it. Miss Francis and Mr. Dawkins walked on up through the square. At Twenty-sixth street she turned her deeply troubled eyes up to his, and stared at him curiously. He returned the gaze steadily.

"Oh!" she said. "I understand—now!"

They crossed and went on up Fifth avenue. There was a strange, unfathomable expression on Mr. Dawkins' face as they approached Twenty-seventh street.

"Have you recalled yet where you met me first?" he asked.

The girl shook her head. She didn't look up.

"Do you recall something less than four months ago," Mr. Dawkins went on, "that you were crossing Fifth avenue just here and dropped your purse?"

Miss Francis looked a little surprised.

"Yes," she replied. "Why?"

"Don't you remember now?"

She remembered. First came comprehension, then wonder, and finally something else—a something which caused her to shrink back a little instinctively. Mr. Dawkins continued to stare at her.

"I remember," she said faintly. "I know what it all means now—the bellboy, and all that."

She stopped, and her eyes fell beneath the unwavering gaze of Mr. John Quincy Dawkins.

"Shall I call a hansom for you?" he asked at last.

"No," she answered quickly. "Let's walk on a little way. I—I—must think."

Silently they went on for several blocks, side by side. At Thirty-fourth street they paused on the curb to let a car pass, and Mr. Dawkins turned upon her.

"Well, what do you think of me?" he demanded, defiantly.

"I think you are the most wonderful man I ever knew," she said softly.

For an instant two fluttering hands lay lightly on his sleeve, then they walked on together.

IV.

"FOR five years of success I'd give my life * * * sell my eternal soul!"

Mr. Dawkins was standing at his window early one morning when the words recurred to him. Central Park lay spread out before him like a panorama, an oasis in the desert of hutches wherein dwells humanity. A breath of spring floated in the window, and the fresh green of trees and sward was grateful to his eyes. A sapphire sky was cleft by a winding streak of gulls as they swept down to the lake.

"Give my life * * * sell my eternal soul!" Mr. Dawkins repeated with a start.

The words seemed strangely familiar, but for an instant he did not know why. Then he remembered—it was his pledge—a pledge with Fate! A pledge! Mr. Dawkins' face blanched a little, his teeth were set hard, and his square, dogged chin thrust forward as it had been the day he made the pledge. Dolores? What of her. And the other Dolores—the little Dolores, who babbled at his knee from the infinite wisdom of her three years?

Had Fate done her share? Yes, and more. Now, within a specified time he must do his. For four years or more the intoxication, the exhilaration of the work he loved, with the woman he loved, made him oblivious of a pact

Night Attack on a Government Train

BY FREDERIC REMINGTON

NOW THE DEAD WORLD AWAKES

THE POISON BELT

By Sir A. Conan Doyle

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Prof. Challenger has invited his old friends, Lord John Roxton, Prof. Summerlee and E. D. Malone, to spend a day with him at his home in Sussex, and while journeying down they eagerly discuss the news that a mysterious and universal outbreak of illness has occurred among the natives of Sumatra, and that the lighthouses are all dark in the Straits of Sunda. They are doubly interested in the news as Challenger himself has a letter on the subject in that morning's Times. His theory, as he explains when he meets them, is that the world has swum into a stratum, or poison belt, of ether, and that the fate which has befallen the Sumatran natives will quickly overtake the rest of the earth's inhabitants. During the morning they learn by telephone that the great shadow is creeping up from the South, leaving in its wake a trail of death—painless but inevitable—over a great portion of the earth. Challenger's home being on an eminence, which so far, the poisonous vapor has not entirely submerged, he and his friends are able to watch from an upper room, in which they hope to keep the atmosphere pure for a few hours by means of oxygen, the tide of death creeping towards them. As hour by hour passes, and the supply of oxygen gradually runs low, the atmosphere becomes so insufferable that they decide to face the poisonous ether rather than be slowly stifled to death within the room. The window being plastered up, Challenger hurls a fieldglass through it, and is astonished to feel the rush of wholesome air that comes blowing in. "We are back in normal conditions," he cries. "The world has cleared the poison belt, but we alone of all mankind are saved." They then visit London, going up in Challenger's automobile, and are shocked at the evidences of universal death.

CHAPTER VI.

The Great Awakening.

AND now I come to the end of this extraordinary incident, so overshadowing in its importance, not only in our own small, individual lives, but in the general history of the human race. As I said when I began my narrative, when that history comes to be written this occurrence will surely stand out among all other events like a mountain towering among its foothills. Our generation has been reserved for a very special fate since it has been chosen to experience so wonderful a thing. How long its effect may last—how long mankind may preserve the humility and reverence which this great shock has taught it, can only be shown by the future. I think it is safe to say that things can never be quite the same. Never can one realize how powerless and ignorant one is, and how one is upheld by an unseen hand, until for an instant that hand has seemed to close and to crush. We know that at any moment it may be again. That grim presence shadows our lives, but who can deny that in that shadow the sense of duty, the feeling of sobriety and responsibility, the appreciation of the gravity and of the objects of life, the earnest desire to develop and improve, have grown and become real with us to a degree that has leavened our whole society from end to end? It is something beyond sects and beyond dogmas. It is rather an alteration of perspective, a shifting of our sense of proportion, a vivid realization that we are insignificant and evanescent creatures, existing on sufferance and at the mercy of the first chill wind from the unknown. But if the world has grown graver with this knowledge it is not, I think, a sadder place in consequence. Surely we are agreed that the more sober and restrained pleasures of the present are deeper as well as wiser than the noisy, foolish hustle which passed so often for enjoyment in the days of old—days so recent and yet already so inconceivable. Those empty lives which were wasted in aimless visiting and being visited, in the worry of great and unnecessary households, in the arranging and eating of elaborate and tedious meals, have now found rest and health in the reading, the music, the gentle family communion which comes from a simpler and saner division of their time. With greater health and greater pleasure they are richer than before, even after they have paid those increased contributions to the common fund which have so raised the standard of life in these islands.

There is some clash of opinion as to the exact hour of the great awakening. It is generally agreed that, apart from the difference of clocks, there may have been local causes which influenced the action of the poison. Certainly, in each separate district the resurrection was practically simultaneous. There are numerous witnesses that Big Ben pointed to 10 minutes past 6 at the moment. The Astronomer Royal has fixed the Greenwich time at 12 past 6. On the other hand, Laird Johnson, a very capable East Anglian observer, has recorded 6:20 as the hour. In the Hebrides it was as late as 7. In our own case there can be no doubt whatever, for I was seated in Challenger's study with his carefully-tested chronometer in front of me at the moment. The hour was a quarter past 6.

An enormous depression was weighing upon my spirits. The cumulative effect of all the dreadful sights which we had seen upon our journey was heavy upon my soul. With my abounding animal health and great physical energy any kind of mental clouding was a rare event. I had the Irish faculty of seeing some gleam of humor in every darkness. But now the obscurity was appalling and unrelieved. The others were downstairs making their plans for the future. I sat by the open window, my chin resting upon my hand, and my mind absorbed in the misery of our situation. Could we continue to live? That was the question which I had begun to ask myself. Was it possible to exist upon a dead world? Just as in physics the greater body draws to itself the lesser, would we not feel an overpowering attraction from that vast body of humanity which had passed into the unknown. How would the end come? Would it be from a return of the poison? Or would the earth be uninhabitable from the mephitic products of universal decay? Or, finally, might our awful situation prey upon and unbalance our minds? A group of insane folk upon a dead world! My mind was brooding upon this last dreadful idea when some slight noise caused me to look down upon the road beneath me. The old cab horses was coming up the hill.

I was conscious at the same instant of the twittering of birds, of someone coughing in the yard below, and of a background of movement in the landscape. And yet I remember that it was that absurd, emaciated, superannuated cab horse which held my gaze. Slowly and wheezily it was climbing the slope. Then my eye traveled to the driver sitting bunched up upon the box, and finally to the young man who was leaning out of a window in some excitement and shouting a direction. They were all indubitably, aggressively alive!

Everybody was alive once more! Had it all been a delusion? Was it conceivable that this whole poison belt incident had been an elaborate dream? For an instant my startled brain was really ready to believe it. Then I looked down, and there was the rising blister on my hand where it was frayed by the rope of the city bell. It had really been so, then. And yet here was the world resuscitated—here was life come back in an instant full tide to the planet. Now, as my eyes wandered all over the great landscape, I saw it in every direction—and moving, to my amazement, in the very same groove in which it had halted. There were golfers. Was it possible that they were going on with their game? Yes, there was a fellow driving off from a tee, and the other group upon the green were surely putting for the hole. The reapers were slowly trooping back to their work. The nurse girl had slapped one of her charges and then began to push the perambulator up the hill. Everyone had unconcernedly taken up the thread at the very point where they had dropped it.

I rushed downstairs; the hall door was open, and I

"How we all shook hands and laughed as we came together, and how Mrs. Challenger kissed us all in her emotion, before she finally threw herself into the bear-hug of her husband!"

heard the voices of my companions, loud in astonishment and congratulation, in the yard. How we all shook hands and laughed as we came together, and how Mrs. Challenger kissed us all in her emotion, before she finally threw herself into the bear-hug of her husband!

"But they could not have been asleep," cried Lord John. "Dash it all, Challenger, you don't mean me to believe that those folk were asleep with their staring eyes, and stiff limbs, and that awful death-grin on their faces!"

"It can only have been the condition that is called catalepsy," said Challenger. "It has been a rare phenomenon in the past and has constantly been mistaken for death. While it endures the temperature falls, the respiration disappears, the heart-beat is indistinguishable—in fact, it is death, save that it is evanescent. Even the most comprehensive mind"—here he closed his eyes and simpered—"could hardly conceive a universal outbreak of it in this fashion."

"You may label it catalepsy," remarked Summerlee, "but, after all, that is only a name, and we know as little of the result as we do of the poison which has caused it. The most we can say is that the vitiated ether has produced a temporary death."

Austin was seated all in a heap on the step of the car. It was his coughing which I had heard from above. He had been holding his head in silence, but now he was muttering to himself and running his eyes over the car.

"Young fat-head!" he grumbled. "Can't leave things alone!"

"What's the matter, Austin?"

"Lubricators left running, sir. Someone has been fooling with the car. I expect it's that young garden boy, sir."

Lord John looked guilty.

"I don't know what's amiss with me," continued Austin, staggering to his feet. "I expect I came over queer when I was hosing her down. I seem to remember flopping over by the step. But I'll swear I never left those lubricator taps on."

In a condensed narrative the astonished Austin was told what had happened to himself and the world. The mystery of the dropping lubricators was also explained to him. He listened with an air of deep distrust when told how an amateur had driven his car, and with absorbed interest to the few sentences in which our experiences of the sleeping city were recorded. I can remember his comment when the story was concluded.

"Was you outside the Bank of England, sir?"

"Yes, Austin."

"With all them millions inside and everybody asleep?"

"That was so."

"And I not there!" he groaned, and turned dismally once more to the hosing of his car.

There was a sudden grinding of wheels upon gravel. The old cab had actually pulled up at Challenger's door. I saw the young occupant step out from it. An instant later the maid, who looked as tousled and bewildered as if she had that instant been roused from the deepest sleep, appeared with a card upon a tray. Challenger snorted ferociously as he looked at it, and his thick black hair seemed to bristle up in his wrath.

"A pressman!" he growled. Then, with a deprecating smile: "After all, it is natural that the whole world should hasten to know what I think of such an episode."

"That can hardly be his errand," said Summerlee, "for he was on the road in his cab before ever the crisis came."

I looked at the card: "James Baxter, London Correspondent New York Monitor."

"You'll see him?" said I.

"Not I."

"Oh, George! You should be kinder and more considerate to others. Surely you have learned something from what we have undergone."

He tut-tutted and shook his big, obstinate head.

"A poisonous breed! Eh, Malone? The worst weed in modern civilization, the ready tool of the quack and the hindrance of the self-respecting man! When did they ever say a good word for me?"

"When did you ever say a good word for them?" I answered. "Come, sir, this is a stranger who has made a journey to see you. I am sure that you won't be rude to him."

"Well, well," he grumbled, "you come with me and do the talking. I protest in advance against any such outrageous invasion of my private life." Muttering and grumbling, he came rolling after me like an angry and rather ill-conditioned mastiff.

The dapper young American pulled out his note book and plunked instantly into his subject.

"I came down, sir," said he, "because our people in America would very much like to hear more about this danger which is, in your opinion, pressing upon the world."

"I know of no danger which is now pressing upon the world," Challenger answered, gruffly.

The pressman looked at him in mild surprise.

"I meant, sir, the chances that the world might run into a belt of poisonous ether."

"I do not now apprehend any such danger," said Challenger.

The pressman looked even more perplexed.

"You are Prof. Challenger, are you not?" he asked.

"Yes, sir; that is my name."

"I cannot understand, then, how you can say that there is no such danger. I am alluding to your own letter, published above your name in the London Times of this morning."

It was Challenger's turn to look surprised.

"This morning?" said he. "No London Times was published this morning."

"Surely, sir," said the American, in mild remonstrance, "you must admit that the London Times is a daily paper." He drew out a copy from his inside pocket. "Here is the letter to which I refer."

Challenger chuckled and rubbed his hands.

"I begin to understand," said he. "So you read this letter this morning?"

"Yes, sir."

"And came at once to interview me?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you observe anything unusual upon the journey down?"

"Well, to tell the truth, your people seemed more lively and generally human than I have ever seen them. The baggage man set out to tell me a funny story, and that's a new experience for me in this country."

"Nothing else?"

"Why, no, sir, not that I can recall."

"Well, now, what hour did you leave Victoria?"

The American smiled.

"I came here to interview you, Professor. You're doing most of the work."

"It happens to interest me. Do you recall the hour?"

"Sure. It was half-past 12."

"And you arrived?"

"At a quarter-past 2."

"And you hired a cab?"

"That was so."

"How far do you suppose it is to the station?"

"Well, I should reckon the best part of two miles."

"So how long do you think it took you?"

"So it should be 3 o'clock?"

"Yes, or a trifle after it."

"Look at your watch."

The American did so, and then stared at us in astonishment.

"Say!" he cried. "It's 20 past 6. That horse has broken every record, sure. Four hours from the station! But it's not possible. The sun is pretty low, now

FOR FIVE YEARS OF SUCCESS THE

The Wonder Of It

By Jacques Futrelle

Mr. Futrelle was one of that chivalrous company of gentlemen on the Titanic who gave up their chances of life that the women and children might be saved.

I.

MR. JOHN QUINCY DAWKINS, M. A., sat on a bench in Madison Square and gazed pensively at a big toe which protruded impudently from his right boot. Mr. Dawkins was a gentleman, an honor man at Yale. His thesis on political economy was one of the most comprehensive and elucidative, even masterly, efforts his college had ever known. But somehow it didn't work out right, for now Mr. Dawkins was hungry. It wasn't any ordinary sort of hunger, either, the thing that gives zest to appetite and makes sheer delight of anticipation; but a gnawing, tormenting agony, fed on by the fuel of uncertainty as to when, if ever, it could be relieved.

Mr. Dawkins smiled grimly as he recalled that last brilliant effort of his college days, with its scintillating syntax and dazzling periods, and thought how useless it all was. Certainly, in his own case, it had fallen far short of actually meeting those conditions which, in the utter wisdom of youth, he had exultantly pinned to paper and mercilessly dissected; and surely that literary gift which had brought it was useless now, since his manuscripts lay on a dozen editors' desks without acceptance, and one of his plays was pigeonholed in every manager's office from Twenty-third to Forty-seventh street.

As he moved a little forward on the bench, his last manuscript rattled in his pocket—a play—"The Comedy of Life"—this vital, throbbing thing happening here, now, right under his eyes. He had not personally delivered it to a manager for the reason that he was wholly unpresentable, and he did not mail it because an avaricious postal system made it necessary to affix stamps, and if he had had the money to buy stamps he would have a feast of coffee and sinkers instead.

Directly in front of Mr. Dawkins lay Broadway, that living river which flows from end to end of the most marvelous city in the world. Clanging cars went grumbling past in an endless stream; automobiles and carriages and trucks and an occasional Fifth avenue bus were all snarled up in the everlasting maze. Humanity, afoot, darted here and there, with its life in its hand.

Mr. Dawkins saw all these things, and hated them—hated them because to him was denied the simple right of existence. All these people over there on Broadway had had something to eat, or were going where a capricious appetite might lead them. He hadn't had anything to eat and he wasn't going.

There went a rotund gentleman who had spent enough on his last meal to keep Mr. Dawkins comfortably alive for a week. Mr. Dawkins hated him, not through any personal animosity, but merely because his paunch was well lined, and Mr. Dawkins hated his prototypes just as heartily and for the same reason. All these people had homes and rooms and beds; while the bench on which Mr. Dawkins sat was, economically enough, home, room, bed and office for him. These people had shoes and clean linen and all the accouterments of respectability; Mr. Dawkins had worn his boots to the quick in an effort to sustain that life which had been thrust upon him, and his linen was a sad affair. These people were clean shaven and well barbered; Mr. Dawkins was shaggy about the face and his hair was long and straggly.

For days now, the vital problem before Mr. Dawkins had been the ever new, ever old one—how to live. Unfortunately for him, he had a pride which forbade him looking another human being in the eye and asking for a paltry something wherewith to cement anew a strained acquaintance between body and soul. He would have worked without a murmur, or he would have stolen, but opportunity in both cases was lacking. One miserable night he had gone down and looked at the bread line, and from a distance he had watched the unhappy wretches there gnawing and tearing at a crust with animal-like voracity. It would have afforded him infinite satisfaction then, delight even, to throttle any individual in the line and take his pitiful share of another man's bounty, but he wouldn't go stand in that line and wait his turn. There was his pride again, so Mr. Dawkins went away hungrier than when he came. He hadn't gone back.

As Mr. Dawkins sat gloomily remembering these things and ruminating over them, an overfed small boy played near him munching an apple which was no redder than his juvenile cheeks. Mr. Dawkins glared at the apple greedily; perhaps that small boy will never know how near he came to losing it. Over where the fountain rose and fell rhythmically an Irish maid, with a face from County Cork, was stuffing a baby with crackers and milk.

"Me not want it," protested the child.

"Yes mother said yez were to have it, an' yez are goin' to have it," declared the maid, and the stuffing process went on.

"Me not want it," bawled the baby.

Two lusty, infantile hands gripped the bottle of milk, sent it aloft for an instant, then flung it down. It smashed, and the precious white fluid trickled over the pavement almost to the feet of Mr. Dawkins.

"Now!" crowed the baby complacently.

"Well, yez little divil!" said the maid. "I'll tell yez mother o' that."

"Me tell her 'oo did it," said the stuffy baby, with the utmost satisfaction.

Suddenly Mr. Dawkins was seized with a wild, unreasoning rage at the pitiful waste. For an instant his starving brain reeled at the pounding rush of blood, then he clenched his hands and recovered himself with a jerk. A policeman sauntered along leisurely. Mr. Dawkins eyed him thoughtfully, and noted that the line of his coat was all awry from a plethora of food.

"If I should go over there and give that cop a swift poke in the nose I could eat all right," mused Mr. Dawkins, "for at least thirty days. A police magistrate would see to that."

He continued to eye the policeman steadily as he approached. At last the majesty of the law took cognizance of the scrutiny, and went straight to Mr. Dawkins.

"What are you looking at me for?" he demanded brusquely.

"I don't like the way you wear your hat," replied Mr. Dawkins.

"For five years of comfort, of living, of achievement, realisation, I'd sell my eternal soul."

"What are you trying to do? Kid me?" demanded the bluecoat. "Move along out o' this now. You loafers are always hanging around here instead o' going out looking for a job. Move along. Beat it!"

Mr. Dawkins arose, and looked the law squarely in the eye.

"I've a good mind to give you a bash in the jaw," said Mr. Dawkins calmly, and, turning, he walked through the square on toward Fifth avenue and Twenty-sixth street. The policeman looked after him in momentary surprise, then resumed his leisurely saunter.

Mr. Dawkins paused opposite Martin's and sat down again. It was just 1 o'clock, and the midday throng was pouring into the cafe. For a long time Mr. Dawkins looked, and gradually his face hardened. The square jaw was thrust forward a little, his teeth were pressed together, and a bitterly grim expression played about his mouth. After a time a strange mistiness came into his eyes; he felt giddy and weak, and his flaccid muscles quivered within their beds. It was the breaking up of a strong man; a final collapse of ambition, aspiration, hope; the relinquishment of success and life; the arrival of that crucial moment when, to save his own life, he would have to go and poke the policeman in the nose, and he didn't like to do that. It was messy, and perhaps his nose would bleed.

"I'd give my life for success," he burst out passionately, fiercely. "For five years of comfort, of living, of achievement, realization, I'd sell my eternal soul."

For a time he sat weakly staring down at the ground with the world reeling and staggering about him, and the din of the merciless city hammering in his ears, then came a familiar voice.

"Didn't I tell you to get out o' this?" It was the policeman. "I'd take you down for less'n a cent."

Had Mr. Dawkins been in full possession of his senses he would probably have permitted himself to be taken down. As it was, he arose and wandered aimlessly on up Fifth avenue.

At Twenty-seventh street Mr. Dawkins suddenly became aware of the fact that there was something else on earth besides his appetite. A vision—a gray, tailor-made vision—came athwart his path. In the street there was the eternal tangle of cabs and automobiles, and the vision paused daintily on the curb before she ventured across. Suddenly there came an opening, and she darted forward. As she did so her purse fell.

Mr. Dawkins saw it. Within it lay food, sleep, luxury of all sorts—strange luxuries which his dreams permitted him to believe included even a bath. He rushed forward and seized upon the trifle with a little cry of gratification. No one else had seen it fall, he could get away with it—down Twenty-seventh street to Madison Square, and then—— He straightened up. The gray, tailor-made vision stood facing him with a smile upon her red lips, and one gloved hand extended.

"Thank you so much," she said.

Mr. Dawkins gazed into two wonderful eyes, then mechanically handed her the purse. She fumbled at the catch and it flew open, disclosing several bills. With a hand on these she looked at Mr. Dawkins with mute inquiry in her eyes. Mr. Dawkins understood. Appetite was forgotten now, because he wasn't shaved; hunger was nothing compared to the straggling condition of his hair; success and ambition were trifles, when he remembered his soiled linen.

"It's a pleasure, I assure you," he said.

"Thank you," said the girl. She snapped the purse with a friendly little nod and crossed the street again.

Mr. Dawkins wandered on up Fifth avenue. Dimly through the haze which succeeded the vision he was wondering which was nearest, East River or North. East River, perhaps. He was turning from Fifth avenue into Twenty-eighth street, eastward, when he noticed something yellow—it seemed to be paper—on the sidewalk near the building. He stopped listlessly and picked it up. It was a $20 bill, folded around a $10 gold piece. Mr. Dawkins drew a deep breath of relief and amazement.

"Now I can get shaved," he said.

II.

DOWN Fifth avenue, just below Martin's, the hand of a clock pointed to 20 minutes past 1.

Above the entrance of a Broadway theater a myriad of electric lights blazed the words, "The Comedy of Life." On the sidewalk, beside the entrance to right and left, two three-sheets informed the public that Mr. Charles Frohsin would that evening present for the first time on any stage a brilliant satirical comedy from the pen of Mr. John Quincy Dawkins. Broadway had never heard of Mr. John Quincy Dawkins, but the fact that Mr. Frohsin presented the play insured a liberal opening patronage, at least. So now at 10 minutes of 8 o'clock in the evening the lobby was thronged, and the man in the box office, as is usually the case, in a towering rage because so many people were buying tickets.

Across the street, in a brilliantly lighted cafe, with his nose pressed against the windowpane, was Mr. John Quincy Dawkins in person, immaculate from patent-leather toes to collapsible hat. He was in a state of blue funk—it's an awful thing to have a play presented!—and the fingers of his right hand tattooed restlessly against the glass. His left hand was thrust into his pocket, where jingled some small coins. There was a fat roll of bills, too, and somewhere in his coat was a checkbook with some checks in it, which, strangely enough, were good for real money when filled out and signed by Mr. John Quincy Dawkins. Pressing the checkbook for space were a half dozen letters of acceptance from magazine editors.

But Mr. Dawkins' thoughts were far from these things. He was thinking of that rapidly swelling crowd which continued to pour into the theater across the way. He loved every one in it, not for any personal reasons, but loved them for the mere fact of their existence. He loved this rotund gentleman, because his paunch was well lined, and he loved all his prototypes. These people had homes and rooms and beds, as he had; they had shoes and clean linen and all the accouterments of respectability, as he had; they were clean shaven and well barbered, as he was.

At a table beside Mr. Dawkins sat Mr. Frohsin, a gentleman of indeterminate age, who occasionally glanced up at him with a smile of amusement. At last Mr. Frohsin drew out a diamond-spangled watch and consulted it.

"We'd better be going over," he suggested as he arose.

"To the theater?" gasped Dawkins in horror.

"Certainly," and Mr. Frohsin smiled.

"Why, I wouldn't go over there for a million dollars," Mr. Dawkins blurted. "If I had to sit through one act of that play with all those people looking, I'd—I'd faint."

"That's the way Thomas and Pinero always feel," commented the manager, "and Henry Arthur Jones won't go anywhere near the theater. But in this case you must go. They'll want you after that second or third act."

Mr. Dawkins laughed nervously.

"Well, they'll have to catch me," he declared. "You go on over, I'll stay here."

Mr. Frohsin had to be content with that. But Mr. Dawkins didn't remain in the cafe at all. Instead, just before the curtain was to rise on the first act, he went out and walked around the block, then was surprised to see that he did it in nine minutes. On the second lap around he was halted by a quavering, aged voice, and turned to glare into the withered, drawn face of an old man.

"Please, sir, I'm starving," said the old man, simply.

Mr. Dawkins stared steadily for an instant into the sunken, feverish eyes; noted the wrinkled, quivering

ADVICE TO MY DAUGHTER:

By Anna Held

Soubrette of the Misbehaving Eyes Counsels Her Convent-Bred Liane, 18 Years Old, to Avoid the Stage, With Its Scarlet and Drab, Its Fierce Rivalries and Bitter Disappointments; to Marry a Plain, Honest Man and Become a Domestic Wife.

WHAT shall I do with my daughter, my Liane?

How shall I plan for her future so that she may take with her into young maidenhood the sweetness and sunshine of her girl life, and what may I do to help her find the happiness which can come only with contentment?

Everywhere, every day, mothers are asking these questions of themselves, as I am asking them. The answer seems so very easy, but it is not. With every hope there is a fear.

My daughter is just a light-hearted little miss of 18, a girl of dreams and wonder-book fancies. She knows naught save love. The world to her is simply a picture done in cheery colorings, its story a pleasing tale, its face always smiling, its voice one of song and laughter.

And I would keep it always thus for her, but, alas! this cannot be.

Romping in the flower garden, can she always escape the thorns? With the song and laughter must she not sometime hear a moan, a wail?

Since she was a brown-eyed elf in pinafores, I have thought of her future; and now the time has come when I must draw her close to myself and tell her what she should know. At her age a girl's eyes may be opened, a little today, a little tomorrow, until, from her position of shelter and safety, she sees the sunshine and the clouds afar.

What are my hopes for my daughter?

I hope to keep her from the stage. I would not have her live its truth or falsity, for it is both true and false, both scarlet and drab. I would not criticise the stage or its people, but being of it and them, I must know.

Once before, when my little girl was much smaller, I took her away from the gentle environment of her school in France and brought her to this country, but she was then too young to receive an impression uncolored by fancy, too much a child to know the why that is easily answered when one is older.

Remembering always that she is my own little girl, I will make certain that she sees as many sides of life as possible, particularly of stage life. She must know of its generosity, and of its jealousy. She must know of the never-ending struggle of ambition in its effort to reach the spotlight of fame, and of the thousands who see it darkened just as they would touch it.

No written tragedy is greater than this. Nowhere, except on the stage, is this tragedy both mimicry and a part of real life. My daughter must know it; otherwise my duty to her would not be fully done.

Even now, with her mind for the first time opening to the story of life as it is, my daughter imagines that she would like to seek a place in the waiting line at the stage door and take her chance as a beginner. She would like to follow in my footsteps. She is something of a mimic. In her simple way she knows how, by a word or a motion, to make one smile. She thinks in comedy, if it may be said of a girl so young.

But the stage for her? No, not if she accepts my counsel.

When she is older she should do something. It will not do to be idle, for there is so much to be accomplished that calls for worthy effort, for the best that is in woman. The effort required to earn money should be to all women the true measure of its value. Women who do not know how to work seldom know how to count.

There will come a time by and by when she will think of marriage. How shall she pick a husband? Girls should not be in a hurry. There is plenty of time and there are plenty of men.

A girl should see many men before she thinks of marriage. She should study them and analyze them. Many men will not stand analysis. Many fall short of a woman's standard of what a man should be. A man should be brave and gentle. He should be earnest and honest. He should be ambitious and able to surmount difficulties. And he should be, first and last, loyal and sincere.

Ah, how few there are who measure to this simple standard!

Business interferes with marriage and marriage sometimes with business. If a woman is successful, can she always look up to a man who is not? And if a woman cannot look up to her husband, he ceases to be a commanding figure in her eyes. Is this not strictly true?

Men are like books. Their outer cover may appear attractive. You open the book and scan the preface. It is usually interesting. And then begins the story. It may turn out to be a jumble of words. It may be a narrative of engaging vitality. It may be a comedy, or a tragedy. It may ring with truth or be wholly false.

How may one know the book by the cover and the preface? How may one know a man without reading him?

I would have my daughter grow to young womanhood and see much of the world, and I would have her ask herself all sorts of questions and answer them for herself, finding her answers in the world as she sees it.

Woman should always try to be attractive. She owes that to herself and to all who may look upon her. Women should smile and show their dimples. They should laugh and sing and be joyful, for the world needs all the joy it can get and all must help make it. One song bird will make a home happy. Eyes filled with tears will make a home sad.

Women should wear their prettiest gowns and hats, and dress their hair in the most becoming way. It is not simply trying to be fashionable; it is adding beauty to the universal picture.

I would have my daughter know this.

Wherever you go in the world you will find the desire for happiness greater than the desire for honor or money gain. That being so, all should help in bringing happiness into the world. Our cities should have commissioners of happiness—men whose duty it is to bring brightness into the homes of the people and lessen the gloom which is always of rapid growth. Particularly should the lives of young persons be made happy. In this all should aid in whatever way possible.

I would have my daughter find her greatest joy in making others happy. I would have her carry the brightness, the sunshine of her girlhood into the world of grownups and give of it by day to make others feel that life is sweeter because of her.

ANNA HELD.

SOME QUEER AND AMUSING LEGACIES

WHEN they opened the will of Miss Mathilda Tommet in Milwaukee the other day they found that one of her bequests was a pair of old shoestrings given to a woman relative with whom she had been on friendly terms for many years. There did not appear to be any sarcasm or ill feeling connected with the legacy, and judged by the common sense way in which the remainder of her property was bestowed there did not seem to be ground for the suspicion that the decedent was not in her right mind.

The cases are numberless in which odd things have been bequeathed and countless have been the contests to break wills that contain provisions along lines similar to that of Miss Tommet's will.

In New Orleans there died not long ago a wealthy old man noted for his shrewdness in business deals. One of the bequests of his very long will was a hair brush that he had used for many years. This brush he gave to a nephew, Samuel Thompson Finnerty—who had been named after the old man—with the proviso, however, that the brush should be kept in the Finnerty family vault one month out of 12 and in a mahogany box containing an electric belt that the decedent had worn for years. The acceptance of the brush, conditional on carrying out the old man's wishes, meant that the nephew was to inherit and enjoy two-thirds of the estate.

Margaret Ann Epping of San Francisco left $5000 each to 10 of her nephews about six years ago, but this was the condition: Her tombstone was to be replaced every two years with a new one on which each nephew in turn "should cause to be chiseled an appropriate verse setting forth his love and affection." As the bequests were in the shape of annuities from a bulk fund the nephews in order to draw upon the fund for their income had to comply with the demands of the decedent.

Jabez Hollister of Montreal left his two sons the use of a corn razor that he—a cutler—had specially ground and fixed up for chiropodic use. "For the sake of their health and the risk they ran from blood poisoning if other corn cutters were used," the sons were admonished to use no other cutter and a cash amount was to be forfeited if they disobeyed. One son, after he had recovered from the shock of his father's death, laughingly told the lawyers that he had never had a corn in his life.

Life in a Manless World

Thrale went to Marlow and organized the machine crews, establishing a mill to grind the grain after harvest. Millie and other able field and mill workers tried to flirt with Thrale, but the extraordinary young man spurned them.

Ultimately he and the ex-Lady Eileen, whose formerly dainty hands were dirty with drudging, went on a boat trip up a stream to look after water supply, and they came to an "understanding" which in other days would have passed for a marriage but for the lack of a legal ceremony.

And so we find Jasper and Eileen, who firmly believed themselves to be the happiest pair on earth at the time—and very likely they were the happiest—sitting at Land's End gazing out over the Atlantic.

Now let us pause to explain. All the foregoing things didn't happen, you know, except in a book. It is a new book called "A World of Women," and is written by J. D. Beresford and published by the Macaulay Co., New York. Mr. Beresford set out to describe what would happen in a manless world, and here is an excerpt from his book which shows forth the hapless and hopeless situation of the women. He is speaking of the Marlow community, which typifies the manless world:

"What hope was there for that generation? They were too few to cope with their task. Grass was growing in their streets, their houses were in need of repairs, and after their day's labor in the fields to provide themselves with food they had neither strength nor inclination to take up the battle anew.

"Moreover, the spice was gone from life. Some inherent need for emulation was gone. They were ceasing to take any pride in their persons, and in their clothes. They wore knickerbockers or trousers for convenience in working, and suffered a strange loss of self-esteem in consequence.

"Many of the women still returned in the evenings to what skirts and ribbons they still possessed, but the habit was declining. The uselessness of it was growing even more apparent. There were no sex distinctions or class distinctions among them. Of what account was it that one girl was prettier or better dressed than her neighbor? What mattered was whether she was a stronger or more intelligent worker.

"Above all, the women's need for love and admiration could find no outlet. They realized that they were becoming hardened and unsexed and revolted against the coming change. Something within them rose up and cried for expression, and when it was thwarted it turned to a thing of evil. The mind of the community was becoming distorted."

Well, something still more terrible must have happened had it not been that a big ocean liner which Thrale and Eileen sighted off Land's End arrived from America. The steamship was manned by 1200 men—actual men! It turned out that the plague had spent itself in America before killing off the entire male population. The virus had run out. America had tried to call England by cable and wireless, but in vain. The women in England had supposed that the scourge had killed all the males in America, as elsewhere. As it was, so many men had died that it was a whole year before enough could be spared to man the ocean liner.

That relief ship put new hope into the hearts of the women, for the men set to work to restore intercommunication between the nations, recreate the dead London and rehabilitate the perishing race.

That the men were mightily welcomed Mr. Beresford's book emphasizes.

The inference, though it is not made specific in the book, is that England ultimately was repopulated by American fathers and English mothers. Since the monarchy had died out along with other institutions, the reader who has imaginative tendencies is justified in assuming that England was made over into an American possession, in consideration of the great service rendered by the men. Mr. Beresford's story suggests a variety of sequels.

EXPLORING VESUVIUS WITH A THERMOMETER

Prof. Alessandro Malladra.

Just After Floor of Volcano's Crater Collapses, Prof. Malladra descends 1200 Feet Into Inferno of Smoldering Fire and Deadly Gases, and Finds New Funnel 500 Feet Wide Opened Up, in Which, at Depth of 200 Feet, 627 Degrees Is Registered—Thermometer Lost Through Melting of Wire Rope—A Perilous Climb Over Cliffs and Precipices of Lava.

TWO weeks after the floor of the crater of Vesuvius collapsed with a roar of thunder which rocked the huge mountain and with an outburst of flame that illumined Naples, Prof. Alessandro Malladra of the Royal Observatory of Vesuvius descended 1200 feet into the frightful pit, there to sound with instruments of science the huge new chimney which the convulsion had opened for the furnace fires of the earth's interior.

How heroic was this exploit, the object of which was merely to add new data to the volcano's history, may be understood from the fact that since last spring Vesuvius has displayed a crescendo of activity. It was remembered that since 1700 the volcano has never slumbered for a period longer than seven years, and that its latest eruption occurred in 1906.

Rumblings from the mountain's throat, smoke and fire exhaled from its giant nostrils, the opening of new cracks and fissures about the summit, the vomiting of a great mass of fluid basalt, and then, as the climax of several months, the subsidence of the crater's floor, filled Naples with an increasing panic which only a miracle could appease.

This is reported to have occurred on Sept. 19, when, in answer to the prayers of the city, there occurred in the San Genarro Cathedral the miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius, patron of Naples. The occurrence of this prodigy is believed by the faithful to act as a divine stopper in the neck of the volcano.

It remained for scientific hardihood to adventure into the very jaws of the monster whose breath has so often been fatal to mankind. When, during the second week of September, Prof. Malladra stood like a pygmy on the swart and smoking lips of the crater's mouth, the pit into which he was to descend might have been compared to Milton's Inferno:

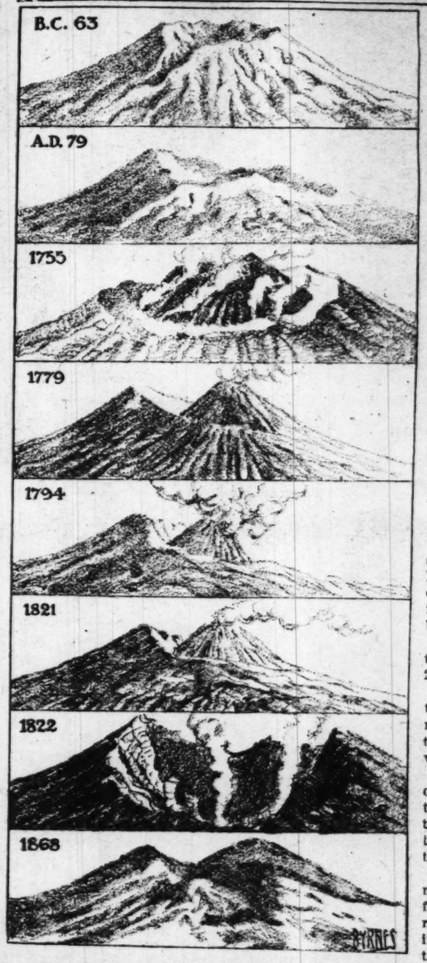
> A dungeon horrible, on all sides round,
> As one great furnace flamed; yet from those flames
> No light; but rather darkness visible.

Into such a reeking cavern of smoldering fire the scientist plunged with his companions, two assistants from the observatory. They were equipped with 1000 feet of flax rope, several hundred feet of wire cable, a barometer, thermometers, a camera, a magneto needle, hatchet, plumets, wooden posts to which the ropes might be attached, and fusible wires of different metals to register temperatures higher than those acessible to a thermometer.

There is but one practicable path down into the crater, and Prof. Malladra discovered this in his first descent into the volcano, on May 14, 1912. Then Vesuvius was sleeping soundly. But now it only dozed, unquietly, with an occasional vast snore or an uneasy stir of its subterranean limbs.

The start of the descent is on the southeast brink, facing Pompeii. For several hundreds of feet the path, over a sloping wall of lava, presents no formidable difficulties. But to it succeeds the "burning marle" of a bed of red lava, through the crust of which the explorer's feet break at every step, forming furmaroles through which escape choking sulphuric vapors from the fires smothered beneath.

From the ledge of the lava bed yawns walls formed like gigantic precipitous terraces alternating with steep inclines,



How Vesuvius has changed its shape many times in 20 centuries.

Crater of Vesuvius.

These may be mastered only by driving posts into the ground, fastening ropes to them, and scrambling and sliding down the walls while clinging to the cables. This acrobatic feat must be accomplished "twixt upper, nether and surrounding fires," in a damp of strangling gases, and beneath a rain of fragments of lava which are continually breaking from the walls and dropping into the pit.

As the last stage, "there was still another 350-foot wall to be overcome," says an account of Prof. Malladra's first descent. "It seemed almost perpendicular and was almost bare of projections. No rope could be of assistance. The explorers, notwithstanding landslides of rocks and pebbles, abandoned themselves to the slope, clinging to the smallest projections, till they reached the bottom of the crater, bruised and exhausted.

"The scientist and his servant were almost suffocated by the exhalations of sulphur. Masses of lava had fallen about them with tremendous noise, filling the gloom with dust and fine ashes. A big stone fell on the brim of Prof. Malladra's hat and his companion was struck on the head, but was able to complete the descent."

For a second time, then, the Neapolitan savant stood 1200 feet below the summit, on the floor of the crater.

A singed bottom all involved
With smoke and stench.

But its topography was so violently altered as to be scarcely recognizable. At the center, near where Prof. Malladra last year planted an Italian flag as a trophy of his achievement, yawned a vast new abyss, 500 feet in diameter, or one-third the width of the crater's bottom.

Prof. Malladra inspected his thermometer. It registered the terrific temperature of 187 degree Fahrenheit, only 25 degrees below the boiling point of water!

The explorers, broiling with the heat and giddy from the smell of poisonous gases, staggered towards the mouth of the volcano's newest flue, their feet breaking through the crust of the floor and making vents through which curled fetid and scorching vapors.

Even they recoiled from the black depths which opened beneath them when they stood at the verge of the funnel. Up from its throat rolled billows of smoke, through the haze of which, far, far below, they could see the lurid play of flames. It was like a glimpse into the hell of "Paradise Lost."

But science has its duties, even in the midst of the most staggering spectacles of nature. Prof. Malladra fastened a thermomter at the end of a 200-foot wire rope and lowered it into the burning pit. When he drew it up he found that the heat had melted the rope and that the thermometer had dropped into the depths.

Knowing the melting point of the wire, he calculated that only 200 feet below the brink of the chimney there was a temperature of 626 degrees!

For an hour the explorers remained on the crater's floor, with cloths over their mouths to prevent asphyxiation. They stumbled over hills and valleys of smoldering lava and cinders, taking records and exposing photographic plates. But at the end of that time they decided to expend there no longer the vitality they would need for the steep climb to the summit, and started their ascent, climbing by the ropes which they had left hanging behind them.

After a struggle more desperate than the descent, they stood again at their starting point and were soon breathing the Italian sunshine which caused Goethe to describe Vesuvius as "a peak of hell rising out of paradise." The observatory at which they made their report lies on the flank of the volcano.

Prof. Malladra's formal report on his gallant expedition has not yet been completed, and is awaited with much expectation by the scientific world. His studies of volcanoes and his daring have made him internationally famous.

AMERICAN BRIDE OVERCOMES TWO-CENTURY-OLD CURSE . . .

Son Born to Duchess of Roxburghe, Who Was Miss May Goelet of New York, After Ten Years of Childless Union, Provides Heir for Noble House Warned by Gypsy Woman in 1707 That the Line Would Cease When Any Holder of Title "Wedded a Woman From Over the Sea"—Prophecy Uttered When First Duke's Horse Killed Nomad's Child.

DUCHESS OF ROXBURGHE.

DUKE OF ROXBURGHE.

WHEN recently, after 10 years of childless married life, the Duchess of Roxburghe gave birth to a son, the menace of an ancient gypsy's curse apparently was lifted from the house of Roxburghe. The Duchess is American. She was Miss May Goelet of New York. Thus ran the curse, which was pronounced 206 years ago:

"Long as ye heir shall pick his bride
From Britain's soil, his line shall bide.
When he weds a woman from o'er the sea
The House of Roxburghe shall cease to be."

It was in the year 1707 the first Duke and sixth Earl of Roxburghe brought the curse upon his house. When Duke John was riding in the forests of his estate on the Scottish border his horse ran down and killed a gypsy's child. The records do not describe the killing in detail, but in all probability it was purely accidental. It is known only that the frantic mother of the child strode to the castle gate that night and recited the foregoing warning against the noble house of Roxburghe

The present Duke of Roxburghe "wed a woman from o'er the sea," probably forgetting the gypsy's warning. The Duke, like many other Englishmen of title, had in mind the necessity of replenishing his family fortunes. Doubtless he took into consideration also the desirability of providing a male heir, so that the rejuvenated estate and the dukedom could be handed down. Miss Goelet was a charming young woman, of intellectual tastes and wealthy. Floors Castle, the ancestral home of the Duke, was rehabilitated by the good American money which she contributed to the matrimonial alliance. The Duke was proud of his Duchess because she was known as "the best-read noblewoman in England."

But the years went by without the addition to the family of the much-desired heir. The Duke hoped, but it was a hope long deferred, of the sort that maketh the heart sick. There was reason to fear that in default of an heir the title would descend to the eldest son of the Duke's cousin, Lord Alastair Innes-Kerr.

At last, however, there was about to be an addition to the ducal family. The hope that it would turn out to be a boy was uppermost in the hearts of Duke and Duchess. Well, it's a boy! The heir is but a tiny infant, to be sure, and he must survive his father in order to circumvent the bereaved gypsy woman's prophetic pronouncement.

Duke John, whose horse's unruly hoof brought the trouble upon the house, is said to have smiled when told about the utterance of the curse. He had already a robust son, engaged to a neighboring heiress. The son inherited the titles and estates and in time became the father of a male heir. When this son was 21 his father died suddenly and he became the third Duke of Roxburghe. Then the gypsy curse was recalled in the family circles and considered seriously for the first time, for the young Duke sent word from Germany, where he was traveling, that he was betrothed to the Princess Christine, sister of the reigning Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. Countryside gossip thereupon drew forth the legend—already two generations old—and recalled it on the anxious Roxburghe family. Disaster followed within a month after the news of the betrothal. George III promptly announced his forthcoming marriage to the Princess Charlotte, sister of Roxburghe's betrothed, and forbade the alliance of a British subject with any member of the Mecklenburg-Strelitz family. The Duke immediately retired to his Scottish estates and remained unmarried to his death, 47 years later. The gypsy's sinister words all but came true, for while the house of Roxburghe did not cease to be, the title passed to William Ker, a remote connection of the second Duke. The direct line of the slayer of the gypsy's child was extinct.

A generation later, and another disaster befell the gypsy-ridden house. William Ker, the fourth Duke, also died without issue. A long wrangle in the Committee of Privileges in the House of Lords followed, but the title was saved from total extinction, eventually, by the claim of Sir James Innes Norcliffe, Bart., who was constituted fifth Duke of Roxburghe. After that, until the end of the nineteenth century, the Roxburghes mated early and regularly with well-selected members of the British nobility and the fortunes of the house remained stationary.

In 1903, however, a cold-mannered and somewhat impoverished Duke of Roxburghe landed in New York. The latest heir to the ill-starred house was patiently looking for a bride. A few months later, after many premature announcements, his betrothal to Miss Goelet, heiress to $10,000,000, was made public. Late in the same year the wedding was celebrated at the Goelet home, with pomp and ceremony. The Roxburghe dignity, which had languished with the diminishing family fortunes, assumed its old splendor. The American Duchess devoted herself to the re-establishment of the Roxburghe fortunes with ardor and intelligence. Nine years passed. The devotion of the American heiress to the Roxburghe interests lacked only one important feature. She bore the Duke no children. The medieval gypsy curse was revived—this time not merely from the farmers' gossip, but by the wagging of tongues of both British and American society and from busy printing presses on both sides of the Atlantic.

At this point, all unknown to the public, summoned after a secret conclave of the ducal family, enters the modern magician who was to forestall the gypsy curse, which, whether by chance or not, had been fulfilled twice in the Roxburghe annals and seemed about to descend again. The magician's name was Dr. Leopold Schenck of the University of Vienna; his profession—an expert in embryology. Several months he passed in London, in 1912, in frequent consultation with the members of the Roxburghe family. Early last winter the Duchess retired to Templeton House, Roehampton, chosen by Dr. Schenck as being an ideal residence for an expectant mother. Pine woods bordered the house, there were miles of secluded park for healthy exercise, and until recently the Duchess has been seen taking advantage of the opportunities for outdoor recreation that the estate afforded. Dr. Schenck bade his noble patient to refrain from all foods containing sugar, and staked his reputation on the prediction that the forthcoming child would be a boy.

Dr. Schenck was right. On Sept. 7 a healthy male heir to the Roxburghe dukedom appeared. For the first time in the history of the house a Duke of Roxburghe had dared to marry a bride from across the sea, and apparently escaped the gypsy curse. Modern science, to all intents and purposes, has triumphed over tradition. One query remains. The infant Roxburghe is as yet only a few weeks old. He must grow to manhood before he can assume the headship of his house. The chances of life are not so uncertain for this carefully guarded youngster as they would be for a boy of less exalted station, but they are still considerable.

Meanwhile, the brother of the present Duke, the Earl of Ancaster, is the father of a thriving lad of two. The Countess, who was Anne Breese of New York, had expected until recently to be both the wife and the mother of wearers of the strawberry leaf. Will the title again slip to a mere connection of the house? If it does, the Duke will still be half American, and his mother will be "a bride from o'er the sea." American brides and Austrian science have combined to circumvent the outraged gypsy who demanded vengeance for her child 206 years ago. That much seems certain.

New Courtesy League

Its Members Honor the Great Dead by Doffing Hats and Bowing Low When Passing a Statue in the Street.

A NEW society called the "Courtesy League" has been formed in London. To be truly courteous in this age of hustling and of unusual impatience, is the aim of the league, as explained by Raymond Arthur Price Pierpont, its honorary secretary.

"It is not an ordinary or conventional league," he said. "For instance, it has no headquarters, entrance or membership fees, rules, meetings or badge. The distinguishing mark of a member is that on passing a statue in the street he shall face it, doff his hat and bow low to the ground. This has been done, and will consistently be done by our members. A small crowd is usually attracted by the action, and our league member makes a speech to them, impressing on them the almost forgotten virtues the league advocates.

"These are threefold:

"1. Reverence for the great of all ages and all climes.

"2. Respect for the dead.

"3. Honor for the living.

"It is not readily recognized that discourtesy is a greater evil than it appears to be to the casual mind. It negatives all the virtues of courtesy, and courtesy results in calmness of thought, equipoise of mind in times of difficulty, patience and strength of character.

"We are losing these things as a community because of the general decadence of old-time courtesy.

"There are 30 members at present. Membership is exclusively for men. Since the league was started, six weeks ago, we have had many inquiries from all parts of the country about it. We have had some communications accusing us of effeminacy and declaring that it is better to be 'manly and bluff' than effeminate. But I believe that, as a general rule, women are more discourteous—not to say downright rude—than men, and the modern feminist movement is probably the cause of a surprising amount of present-day discourtesy on the part of men toward women in general."

LIFE IN A MANLESS WORLD

What Happened When the "New Plague" Killed All the Men and Left the Women to Face Life's Problems Alone—Many Starved Before Necessity for Food, the First Consideration, Forced All Survivors to Abandon Cities and Go to Country to Work Farms—Money, Diamonds and Fine Gowns Worthless—J. D. Beresford's Wonderful Study of Imaginary Conditions.

IT was a world of women. All the men, with an isolated exception here and there, perished when the new plague swept over the earth. The scourge came like the Black Death in earlier centuries, striking terror to the hearts of all, but it had this important difference—the women were exempt. Only the males perished. First a terrible pain was felt suddenly at the base of the brain. Paralysis followed quickly. Death ensued in from 24 to 48 hours. In most countries, and particularly in England, not one man who developed symptoms of the plague recovered:

The plague started in China, swept through Japan and Russia, Germany, Austria and the other continental countries, found a foothold in Scotland, then invaded England. Within a few weeks the male population of London perished. The women and girl children survived. Similar conditions prevailed throughout the British Isles—throughout the entire world, so far as England knew.

The women, thrown thus suddenly upon their own resources, were in sorrowful plight. They were confronted by conditions instead of theories. Starvation was the wolf that snarled at every door. The food supply was well-nigh exhausted. Not only the breadwinners, but the bread producers were dead. Farms lay idle for lack of men to work them. In London and the other cities the decimation of the men and the accompanying panic had stopped all the wheels of commerce, closed all the avenues of food distribution, left anarchy where law had reigned. Civilization, in fact, had perished with the men. The world of women had to face the upbuilding of a new civilization, with the matter of finding food first and uppermost in their endeavors. Thus the world, a one-sexed world, had gone back to conditions approaching the primitive, with the important difference due to the absence of the male.

It is easy of explanation. When the men began dropping at their posts of duty the modern improvements upon which humanity had come to depend so much began to go out of commission. In London bus drivers left their vehicles standing in the streets. Tram cars likewise were deserted. Railways were at a standstill. The water supply, the gaslight, the electricity failed, there being nobody to operate the plants. The women didn't know how. Already communication with the world outside England had been cut off. Steamships, trading vessels, battleships no longer traversed the high seas. Great fleets lay dead in docks, their magnificent machinery rusting.

For the first time in history London, the world metropolis, had to depend upon its own resources for food. The supplies of fresh meats and vegetables ran out long before the last man perished. Canned goods, "tinned," as the English call them, supplied the frantic and famishing women for a time. Many of the women and children starved to death. The survivors deserted London, after looting the shops for what remained of tinned meats and vegetables. Pitiful little caravans, family parties of women, dragging or pushing small carts laden with the waning remnants of food, passed out of the streets into the country lanes.

Many of the women took money with them—plenty of money. In fact, money was the most plentiful thing extant—and the most useless. Some of the women, inured to lives running in the old conventional grooves, could not understand why money was worthless. Among these was Mrs. George Gosling, whose husband had saved several hundred pounds during his long service in a provision house in London. Mrs. Gosling's daughters, Blanche and Millie, had a hard time convincing her that they must set out for the country, as other women were doing, to find work in the fields and do their part in growing food. "Everything's changed," urged Blanche. "I can't understand it," was Mrs. Gosling's perpetual plaint. She couldn't understand why pounds sterling couldn't buy things to eat, just as always had been the case. Mrs. Gosling was of that type of woman which was helpless and hopeless in emergencies that must be met by her alone.

Most of the other women who had survived the first panic and the initial throes of the great change which had overcome the world developed some initiative. The weaker, more timid ones were spurred to endeavor by their strong-minded sisters. Those who could not be awakened to the new conditions and necessities simply perished. The others quit London, which became not merely a city of the dead but a dead city. After some months tiny blades of grass began to shoot up between the paving stones, gray dust carpeted the window-sills and blew in at the doors of the pillaged shops. Dogs reverted to wolfishness, owls and bats invaded the city.

"I've had to defend this place like a fort against thousands of your sort. I've killed three mad women who fought me for possession and buried 'em in the orchard like cats."

Out in the country the world of women was trying to adjust itself to the change. True to the feminine instinct, some of the women had arrayed themselves in the first rush and I can hold out now easily enough. their choicest finery for the pathetic exodus. A few were bedecked with diamond baubles, and others fore that they'd begun to get weak and poor. These laughed at them. In London a woman had helped herself to costly raiment and jewels from the deserted shops. She wore upon her person a colossal fortune in gems. Blanche and Millie Gosling, on an excursion through the streets in search of more food just before they started for the country, encountered this woman, the only one they saw in the vast dead city. She was roaming about, proclaiming herself "Queen of the World." The Gosling girls laughed.

"Crazy, of course!" said Blanche. "What's the good of diamonds now? Potatoes are worth far more."

Nevertheless, these Gosling girls could not resist the temptation to walk into a splendid emporium of fashionable gowns and array themselves in such finery as their middle-class lives never had known. They buttoned each other up the back, surveyed themselves in the long mirrors, and then laughed at themselves for their silliness. In a world of women they were women still!

Poor, helpless Mrs. Gosling! She couldn't make it all out. What was the good of traipsing to the horrid country, which they knew nothing whatever about, when if they'd just stay home things certainly would get back to the ordinary? Blanche, the stronger-minded daughter, finally quit arguing with her mother and became the boss of the family. On their trudge countryward, burdened with their little cart of tinned eatables, the Goslings stopped at the gate of a farmhouse where they saw a sturdy-looking woman in the yard. Blanche wanted to exchange some tinned goods for fresh milk and eggs. Mrs. Gosling offered the woman money. When the woman scornfully refused her money Mrs. Gosling hinted that she might spare a glass of milk for charity's sake. Then the woman of the farm, who held a hefty broomstick in her hand, delivered herself of this:

"Charity's sake? Do you realize that I've had to defend this place like a fort against thousands of your sort? I've killed three women who fought me for possession and buried 'em in the orchard like cats. I held out through two years of the plague. Women, when they found time off from their heavy tasks at manual labor, walked many miles to get a glimpse of Sam Evans, who was young and hearty and not at all bad to look upon. Millie Gosling was one of these. Evans took a fancy to Millie, who was something of a beauty, and she remained away from her work at Marlow several weeks. When finally she returned there was a little group of the women, led by a shriveled spinster who had been a school mistress, who wanted to turn her out. But the stupendous change had altered even the social law, and instead of driving Millie away the community expelled the protesting coterie. Queer things happened in this manless world.

"London became a dead city. Tiny blades of grass began to shoot up between the paving stones."

"Pitiful little caravans, family parties of women, pushing carts laden with the waning remnants of food, passed out into the country lanes."

But as to the man wanted—well, he arrived. It was Eileen, eldest daughter of the late Duke of Hertford, Lady Eileen before the change, who found the man. The ex-Lady Eileen was fair, but not foolish. She was of the initiative type. She looked emergencies squarely between the eyes and challenged them to mortal combat.

Eileen was out on the high road one day on business for the community when she encountered Jasper Thrale. This young man had warned England against the plague and advocated "the closed door" to keep it out of the island, but England had ignored his warning until it was too late to escape the man-exterminating scourge. Somehow Thrale had escaped it, and now he was riding a bicycle he had stolen—they still used that word, but not with the old odium attaching—from a London shop. Thrale was looking for a new world to conquer, and he found it at Marlow. Eileen held him up and insisted that he go thither with her.

"There is room for you," she said, "if you'll work."

"At what?" asked Thrale.

"Machinery, harvesting machinery, agricultural machinery of all sorts. There is plenty of land about, and are your daughters, I suppose, and the three of you had always depended upon some fool of a man to keep you. Yes? Well, you deserve all you've got. Now you can start and do a little healthy, useful work for yourselves. I've no pity for you. I've got a damned fool of a sister and an old fool of a mother to keep in there." She pointed to the cottage with her broomstick. "Parasitic like you, both of 'em, and pretty well all the use they are is to keep the fire alight. No, my good woman, you get no charity from me."

It was the law of self-preservation—the first law of nature. That had become, in fact, the only law prevailing in all England. Why, even Millie Gosling had entered Parliament House just before leaving London and sat simpering in the Speaker's chair, with Sister Blanche for audience, and the girls got dust on their clothes from the empty seats of the late lamented lawmakers. Organic law, like many other institutions, died with the men.

Finally the Goslings reached Marlow, a village far from London, where about a thousand women had gathered into a community. These women had begun there the establishment of order out of chaos. Necessity was the mother of their invention of a form of government in a land where government had gone the way of all man-flesh. Food—food—food! Therein lay the necessity. It was summertime, nearing harvest, and the crops planted by the men now dead were maturing. Wheat and corn must be harvested and made into bread. Steps must be taken to plant anew for future needs.

In Marlow—and the same thing must have happened in many other small towns throughout the country—a few women had taken control of the community. They were of all classes. There was an Earl's widow among them. All women were equal in position under the new order. Rank and former wealth counted for nothing. The Earl's widow worked with the greengrocer's widow. As the chronicler of that amazing community says:

"Their first and most difficult task had been to teach the members of their community to work for the common good, and that task was by no means perfected as yet. Co-operation was agreeable enough to those who had nothing to lose, but the women in temporary possession of the sources of food supply were not so easily convinced. In many instances the committee's arguments had been suddenly clinched by an exposition of superior force, and property owners had discovered to their amazement that they had no remedy."

But for a certain Carrie Oliver, a farmer's daughter, 19 years old, the community must have been in worse straits than ever. Miss Oliver's father, dead of the plague, had been a lazy drunkard, and the girl had learned farming thoroughly by doing the work herself. She knew how, and she became farm overseer, teaching the women from London, the ladies of rank and title, the butcher's daughter and the widow of the green grocer, how to work the farms.

There was, however, one want keenly felt in the community. Even Carrie Oliver was not familiar with the working of threshing and milling machinery. A man was needed for that, and a man who knew something about machinery. But this little world of women had no man. It knew, indeed, that the world beyond still contained a few men. There was at Wycombe, over the hill, a butcher who had survived the plague. Women, when they found time off from their heavy tasks at manual labor, walked many miles to get a glimpse of Sam Evans, who was young and hearty and not at all bad to look upon. Millie Gosling was one of these. Evans took a fancy to Millie, who was something of a beauty, and she remained away from her work at Marlow several weeks. When finally she returned there was a little group of the women, led by a shriveled spinster who had been a school mistress, who wanted to turn her out.
